Over-the-Top TV Lampooned on Returning Series

Dan Rice
FYI Television, Inc.

There are rare instances within this existence in which the closer you look at something, the bigger the picture becomes. And as time goes by, a simple musing begins to appear all the more artful — and even prophetic. Such is the case, it could be argued, with the long-coming return of “The Comeback,” a satirical look at entertainment television starring Lisa Kudrow and premiering Sunday at 9 p.m. on HBO.

“One of the things that I liked about it then and now,” Kudrow notes about the series, “is one thing that’s still the same, which is who are you to yourself and what are you presenting to the world.”

When the actress’s decade-long, Emmy-winning role on the wildly popular “Friends” came to an end in 2004, Kudrow soon after began developing “The Comeback” with cocreator Michael Patrick King (“Sex and the City”). Debuting in 2005, the show starred Kudrow as veteran sitcom player Valerie Cherish, who struggled to revive her career after 10 years out of the spotlight. Valerie does land a role on her former network, but it’s on a reality show (also titled “The Comeback”) about an actress trying to reboot her career on a sitcom with four sexy singles sharing a condo. And before long, Valerie’s role is reduced to that of an aging supporting character, a degrading letdown that continually tests her shallow and ego-driven agenda of reclaiming her fame.

Despite the three Emmy nominations earned by “The Comeback” (including Outstanding Lead Actress for Kudrow), the show was cancelled after only 13 episodes. Afterward, Kudrow appeared in a number of film and TV roles before really striking a chord in 2008 with the online series “Web Therapy” — currently airing on Showtime Wednesdays at 11 p.m. Now, 10 years after “Friends,” Kudrow is more or less in similar circumstances as Valerie’s in 2005, with this new edition of “The Comeback” cleverly acknowledging the years that have gone by since its first run.

“Valerie thinks she’s spiritually evolved like we all think we’ve evolved,” King says.

“Over nine years, we’d like to think we’re all in a different place, and we do pick Valerie up a little more evolved. She’s sort of figured out what happened to her, and she’s come to a place where she’s fine with it.”

As Valerie discovers that the landscape of television has changed over the years she’s been away, King and Kudrow also had to change the show’s setup somewhat, ironically in order to keep it relatively the same.

“What was happening the last time seemed to be the birth of reality television and an actress’s need to be in front of the camera,” King explains. “And this time we found a different way to get her in front of the camera because we wanted to evolve the character and also where we are in TV. And what we have now is her in front of a behindthescenes crew rather than a reality crew.”

Valerie had hired a student film crew to shoot her self-produced reality show pilot, which she had hoped to present to Bravo, but her plans change when she learns that her nemesis, Paulie G. (Lance Barber), is putting together an HBO series based on his experiences working with her, about a comedy writer involved with an aging and neurotic actress — whose name is the phonetically similar “Mallory Church.” Valerie storms the HBO offices with thoughts of a lawsuit, but she walks away with the role of basically portraying herself. Even with such a seemingly easy part to play, Valerie finds that television has been moving on without her — an outlook the show’s creators can relate to in observing how reality programs and our media-deluged culture in general have gone over the top, becoming more real and more fake at the same time.

“Yeah, that was one of my sort of things that made me nervous before we started,” Kudrow admits, “which was what we did nine years ago was so tame compared to what’s actually going on.”

“When we did the first series,” King elaborates, “we thought it would be so great if Valerie went into therapy with reality cameras, and we went, ‘That would never happen.’ And now it’s like a gogo, that and a bikini wax are on every reality show you have to see. The other weird thought that came at us

Former TV actress Valerie Cherish (Lisa Kudrow) is excited to get another shot at stardom on an all-new season of “The Comeback,” returning after nine years to HBO, Sunday at 9 p.m.

nine years ago is that they’ve never seen a female character doing this to herself in front of a camera. And since then, there’s been the ‘Real Housewives.’ So, we will not have to explain a woman who doesn’t have financial problems putting herself in front of a camera and putting herself in harm’s way. That’s already in the world. So, we’re trying to incorporate the fact that everything’s very accessible. We tried to mash up everything that we see and is happening right now in television and in life and put it in a comedy.”

Craig Ferguson

dogs, which is good news, because I think we finally found a plot for "Air Bud 3."

There have been seven fence jumps now at the White House so far this year. Maybe it's time the president gives Joe Biden a key.

Moments in Time

On Nov. 15, 1864, Union General William Tecumseh Sherman begins his famous March to the Sea by torching the industrial section of Atlanta. For the next six weeks, Sherman's army cut a 60-mile-wide swath of destruction through Georgia before capturing the seaport of Savannah.

On Nov. 11, 1918, at 11 o'clock of the 11th day of the 11th month, the First World War comes to an end. The Great War claimed the lives of 9 million soldiers; 21 million more were wounded. Civilian casualties caused indirectly by the war numbered close to 10 million.

On Nov. 10, 1969, "Sesame Street," a TV show that would teach generations of young children the alphabet and counting, makes its broadcast debut. Over the years, critics have blamed the show and its use of brief segments for shrinking children's attention spans.

On Nov. 13, 1974, Karen Silkwood is killed in a car accident in Oklahoma on her way to a meet with a reporter. She reportedly carried documents proving that Kerr-McGee Corp. was negligent when it came to worker safety at its plutonium plant. The theory was that someone forced her off the road to prevent the meeting.

On Nov. 14, 1986, Wall Street arbitrageur Ivan Boesky pleads guilty to insider trading and agrees to pay a $100 million fine. "Boesky Day," as the SEC would later call it, was crucial in exposing a nationwide scandal at the heart of the '80s Wall Street boom.
