Double Life for Agent Carter

Candace Havens
FYI Television, Inc.

Agent Peggy Carter (Hayley Atwell) was first introduced as the plucky, kick-butt girlfriend of Steve Rogers (Chris Evans) in "Marvel's Captain America: The First Avenger." A few years later, Marvel did a short film featuring the secret agent at the end of the "Iron Man 3" DVD. In that clip they showed a bit of the character's story after World War II. The powers-that-be at ABC liked "Marvel's Agent Carter" so much they gave her a show, airing Tuesday at 8 p.m. on ABC.

The limited series follows Carter as she tries to find her place after the war. She's still working for the covert SSR (Strategic Scientific Reserve), but she's stuck in administration. "Her cover story is that she works for the phone company," says executive producer Tara Butters. "The men are coming home from war, so these women who had taken some of these important positions in the workforce are being told they're no longer needed. She's in this position where she had a level of respect and responsibility during the war, and now she's being marginalized again. She's trying to help clear Howard Stark's (Dominic Cooper) name. So, she's essentially working as a spy within her own spy organization."

Working undercover is something Carter has done for years. None of her friends know what she did during the war, and they haven't a clue about her double life. "She's still trying to gain the respect of her colleagues in the SSR," says executive producer Michele Fazekas, "and then she's still trying to have a life. She's trying to learn again what it's like to have girlfriends and to have a personal life beyond the job."

"The series begins a year after Captain America went down with his plane," adds Butters. "So, she's also dealing with how do you get over Captain America. There are several things in her journey across the episodes where she is sort of rising to the challenge. She's moving forward emotionally from that relationship, but then also dealing with how does she move forward with her career. I think the great thing about doing these eight episodes is we were able to do a great arc for her character."

If Carter is caught working on these secret missions for Stark, she could be marked a traitor and sent to prison. It isn't easy keeping her secret from fellow agents Jack Thompson (Chad Michael Murray) and Daniel Sousa (Enver Gjokaj). Oh, and then there is her boss Chief Roger Dooley (Shea Whigham), who isn't sure what to think about Carter.

"Sousa is probably her closest ally on the show,"

says Fazekas. "He probably carries a little torch for her. Like most of our characters, he came back from the war wounded. He has a bum leg, and he's sometimes marginalized like she is. There is a camaraderie there. Thompson is that sort of macho, arrogant guy who is good at what he does, but he's the guy who beats a confession out of you with a telephone book."

Stark loans Carter his butler, Edwin Jarvis (James D'Arcy), to be at her beck and call. While he is helpful, Jarvis is set in his ways and has a particular manner of doing things. "We are so lucky," says Fazekas, "that James and Hayley have such a great rapport. We were lucky with this cast. They all bring something different to the table. I don't know if it's because we're only doing eight episodes, or if they are just enjoying what we're doing, but I've never worked with a happier cast. As we neared the end, it felt like high school a little bit when you didn't want it to be over."

Peggy Carter (Hayley Atwell) has no problem going undercover when the job calls for it on "Marvel's Agent Carter," airing Tuesday at 8 p.m. on ABC.

One of the biggest challenges for the producer was creating a world set in the 1940s. "When you sign up to do something like this, you think the big challenge is living up to what Marvel does with visual effects and things like that," says executive producer Chris Dingess. "But really the big challenge was recreating the '40s with the cars, costumes and all of that. We were lucky enough to have ILM (Industrial Light & Magic) as our effects house, and they've done a masterful job of creating this world. When we go out into 1940s New York, the attention to detail has been stunning. And our costumes and sets are just so well done. You feel like you're in that time."

Down to the Sea in Ships

1. A movie star, a millionaire and his wife were among the passengers on an ill-fated three-hour tour aboard this sitcom vessel.
2. One of the greatest propaganda films of all time, this 1925 silent work pioneered editing and montage concepts in depicting the 1905 mutiny of the titular Russian ship as it fired upon civilians on the Odessa Steps.
3. Another historical mutiny took place aboard this British ship after its crew was seduced by the idyllic and promiscuous lifestyle of Tahiti in 1789, a tale retold in poems, novels and several films.
4. As imagined by Jules Verne this highly advanced ship of the late 19th century cruised for a distance of 20,000 leagues beneath the surface of the ocean.

5. In animated form, the Beatles journeyed through the depths of the Sea of Time and other psychedelic destinations within this colorful craft.

6. This TV series of the 1970s and 1980s was all about its passenger guest-stars as they interacted with the crew of the Pacific Princess cruise liner.

7. The Cornelia Marie and the Ramblin' Rose are just two of the ships featured on this TV series where every voyage is a matter of risky business and extreme danger.

On Jan. 18, 1882, A.A. Milne, creator of Winnie-the-Pooh, is born. Years later when his son, Christopher Robin, was born, Milne used the boy's stuffed animals as inspiration for the stories "Winnie-the-Pooh" and "The House at Pooh Corner."

On Jan. 12, 1932, Ophelia Wyatt Caraway, a Democrat from Arkansas, becomes the first woman to be elected to the U.S. Senate. Caraway had been appointed to the Senate two months earlier to fill the vacancy left by her late husband, Thaddeus Horatio Caraway.
