It's 'Elementary'

Candace Havens
FYI Television, Inc.

Revamps of movies and television shows can go terribly wrong. The last few years, however, that hasn't been true of the Sherlock Holmes franchise. From the Robert Downey Jr. films to the BBC's "Sherlock" and executive producer Rob Doherty's "Elementary," airing its season finale Thursday at 9:01 p.m. on CBS, the great detective lives on in many incarnations.

There is a reason the drama was picked up for a third year by CBS long before the second season was over. Doherty took the English sleuth (Jonny Lee Miller) and gave him a contemporary new life, complete with his customary drug addiction and penchant for always being the smartest guy in the room.

Doherty took liberties with gender and created female versions of Dr. Watson (Lucy Liu) and the criminal mastermind Moriarty (Natalie Dormer), who respectively challenge Holmes in a myriad of ways.

"Part of the plan from the very beginning was to establish a female Watson," says the producer. "There was a symmetry to the plan that I liked and the rest of the staff really liked. It also seemed the best way to break our Holmes was to say he made the mistake of falling in love once. And, again, we were excited to tell the story of a Moriarty that was devious enough to romance him and then break him down. We had Natalie back this season. We could not adore her more. She was really the only person we had in mind. As we began to approach the end of the first season, Natalie was just the only person on my radar. I'd seen her in a lot of British shows and in movies. Early in the year, we identified a window where we would have her and took advantage of that spot."

While there is a case every week, this is a character drama. The growth of Sherlock was astronomical the first and second season, but there's an edge to him, a feeling that even when things are going well, there's always the possibility he might lose himself in one of his addictions. The fascinating way the writers have constructed him is why viewers can't stop watching.

"I can speak to the darker nature of the show," says Doherty. "It really had to do with that I was drawn to the idea of a broken Sherlock Holmes - not meeting a Holmes who is at the highest of heights, [but] a guy who was there who has gone through a personal trauma and is now trying very hard to get back to where he was. That meant giving him a history with addiction and drug use. It's hard not to have a little darkness in the show if that's your starting point, but the great thing about the character and, frankly, Jonny is so charming, he's so funny, he's so smart. You know, I think we bring every little bit of fun that we can out of the character, but we also try to stay true to his darker origins."

There is a case, sometimes two, to solve each week, but it's the relationships on the show that keep the viewers guessing. Watson and Holmes have created a family of sorts with their police partners Capt. Gregson (Aidan Quinn) and Detective Bell (Jon Michael Hill). "I guess I've always said one of the beauties of doing a show about Holmes and Watson is that there is an obligation to go home with them," says Doherty. "You know, we would be doing a disservice to the characters and the canon if we didn't show the domestic side of the relationship and that's one of the things that really appealed to me.

"I worked on a show called 'Medium' for six years and developed an appetite for that kind of storytelling. I mean, we had a procedure to that show, but we also went home with Allison DuBois (Patricia Arquette) at night. So, for us it's just a very natural thing to do. It's funny, with maybe a handful of exceptions, I don't feel like the procedure or the cases typically inform or reflect anything that's going on personally for the characters. You know, it's sort of a two step process. Once we have a case that we think is interesting and appropriate to the show and to our procedure, we'll sketch that out. We will then look to see what would be going on in the characters' lives at this point in the season. You know, what have we set up in a previous episode that could have a payoff here. I find sometimes if your character story or your B story is too reflective of your A story, it starts to feel unreal and it starts to feel like you're watching a TV show."

So, what does Doherty have in store for the third seasons of the highly-rated drama? He smiles, "You don't really want to know. It would spoil the surprise." Clever man.

TRIVIA CHAIN

Box-Office Blockbusters

1. Currently the top moneymaking film in history, this largely computer-animated sci-fi morality tale reportedly cost over $310 million to make and earned in excess of $760 million in the U.S. alone, while being the first movie to gross more than $2 billion worldwide.
2. That film's director will happily remind you that coming in at second place on this list is another of his movies, this one concerning a historical disaster at sea.
3. At third place is this epic superhero adventure, which grossed over $1.5 billion worldwide and was the first from its production company to generate $1 billion in ticket sales.

4. This last half of the final installment of a popular fantasy franchise sits at fourth place, having conjured up $1.34 billion worldwide from a $250 million investment in both parts.
5. Fifth place belongs to the most recent release of a singular superhero franchise, a $1.2 billion worldwide gross for an adventure celebrating the heights of high-technology.
6. Coming in at sixth is the most recent film on this list, an animated musical fantasy of 2013 that won two Academy Awards - in addition to over $1.14 billion in receipts around the world.
7. At seventh place with $1.12 billion worldwide is this second sequel of a sci-fi franchise that blends live-action with computer animation - all based on a line of toys from the 1980s.

Laugh Along w/LateNight

Jimmy Kimmel

President Obama is in Japan today. They showed him a robot developed by Honda that can kick a soccer ball. It's cute watching the president interact with a prototype that will one day enslave us all, isn't it?

A strange new product is coming to your liver this fall - Palcohol, which is powdered alcohol. It's like Crystal Light that will get you drunk.

Jimmy Fallon

While he was in Japan today, President Obama visited a science museum, where he played soccer with a robot. Joe Biden is negotiating with the prime minister in Ukraine, and Obama is playing soccer with a robot. It's like the White House version of "Freaky Friday."

David Letterman

President Obama is visiting Japan, and for dinner last night he had $300 sushi. That's a lot of dough, but you know, it comes with unlimited bread sticks. And Mercury poisoning is covered by Obamacare.

The Yankees played last night and their pitcher had pine tar on his neck. You can't have a foreign substance on your neck. Why can't the guy be like everybody else and just forget the pine tar and use the steroids?

Moments in Time

On May 17, 1885, for the second time in two years, the Apache chief Geronimo breaks out of an Arizona reservation. A famous medicine man and the leader of the Chiricahua Apache, Geronimo achieved national fame by being the last American Indian to surrender formally to the United States.

On May 15, 1942, Lt. Ronald Reagan, a cavalry officer, applies for reassignment to the Army Air Force, where he would eventually put his thespian background to use on World War II propaganda films. Reagan was given a job in the First Motion Picture Unit.

Why Do You Say That?

Blockbuster:

This popular term used to describe a very popular or successful movie, theatrical play or video game originally denoted the very opposite: a bomb. Not a "bomb" in the sense of a disastrous, money-losing production, but the largest of aerial bombs in World War II. A single bomb that was capable of destroying (or busting up) an entire city block, these weapons of mass destruction were also known as "cookies" during the Allied forces' firebombing of Dresden, Germany. Later, the expression was used to refer to anything that made a huge impact on the public. A 1945 report by the Chicago Tribune read, "Broadway reacted to the request of War Mobilization Director Byrnes to close all places of entertainment by midnight Feb. 26 as if a blockbuster had landed on Manhattan."
