Beaufort Music Festival: Bringing the community together

Put on some dancing shoes and get ready for some great music and camaraderie: the 28th annual Beaufort Music Festival is Friday, May 20, through Saturday, May 21.

The free festival is held in downtown Beaufort. With two music stages, local food vendors, a family and children area, yoga, a photo booth and two beer gardens, the Beaufort Music Festival is turning into a destination event.

On Friday, May 20, bands will play onstage at the Beaufort Historic Site from 4:30-10 p.m. Bands headlining Friday night include the Midatlantic from Wilmington and the AJ Ghent Band from Atlanta, Ga.

Then, on Saturday, May 21, there will be two stages from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. One is at the Beaufort Historic Site and one on Middle Lane.

The stage on Middle Lane will be a North Carolina spotlight stage featuring state-brewed beers and bands from North Carolina like The Tan & Sober Gentlemen from Chapel Hill and L Shape Lot from Wilmington.

The main stage, at the Beaufort Historic Site, includes bands such as festival favorites the Low Counts from High Point, the all-female Mariachi Flor de Toloache from New York, N.Y., and the Banditos from Birmingham, Ala.

There will also be many events for the entire family, most on Saturday, May 21. A family and children area will take place from 2-5 p.m. Saturday. There will be free yoga classes, and local vendors will sell food on Middle Lane for much of the day.

This festival is 100 percent financed by donations, beer and merchandise sales and local business sponsorships. A small group of dedicated volunteers work throughout the year to organize this weekend-long event.

Businesses supporting the 2016 Beaufort Music Festival include Oceanside Pediatrics, U.S. Foods, Island Essentials, Carteret Foot & Ankle, Geodynamics and Beaufort Inlet Watersports.

To learn more about the bands and the entire weekend, go to www.beaufortmusicfestival.com or to the Beaufort Music Festival Facebook page at www.facebook.com/BeaufortMusicFestival.

Review: 'Elvis and Nixon' recalls a bizarre moment in history

BY JOCELYN NOVECK
ASSOCIATED PRESS

This we know: On Dec. 21, 1970, Elvis Presley showed up bright and early at the White House gates, delivering a barely legible note he'd scrawled on American Airlines stationery to President Richard Nixon. He said he'd love to come by and meet the president and that he was also seeking a badge to be a federal agent so he could help combat the drug culture and the "hippie elements" ruining the country.

And though the initial reaction of President Nixon's chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman, was "You must be kidding" — scrawled in the margins of a memo — that meeting did take place, hours later. It led to an awkward Oval Office photo that the National Archives says is its most requested image, more than even man walking on the moon — which probably was a more predictable sight than Elvis standing next to President Nixon.

What exactly did the two men discuss? No transcript exists, just a memo describing it. That's where "Elvis & Nixon" comes in, filling in the blanks in a dramatization of what has to be one of the odder White House encounters on record.

What the movie, directed by Liza Johnson, lacks in factual material, it replaces with whimsy and quirky humor, helped greatly by the casting of Mr. Shannon as Elvis and Kevin Spacey as President Nixon. The problem is that, other than the meeting, which is fascinating indeed, there's not much of a story. We hear a lot about the quest of Elvis' good friend Jerry Schilling (Alex Pettyfer) to get back to Los Angeles and see his girlfriend. It's not clear why we need to know all this. It certainly bogs down the proceedings.

We begin with President Nixon's aides proposing the meeting to their skeptical, cranky boss. "Who the (expletive) set this up?" President Nixon asks.

Flashback to 36 hours earlier. Elvis is watching news footage at home in Tennessee and doesn't like what he sees. He takes out a gun and shoots the TV set to smithereens.

Soon enough, he's on his way to Washington, via Los Angeles. En route, there's an amusing scene where some Elvis impersonators approach him in an airport lounge. They think he's one of them and want to compare notes.

Speaking of impersonation: Both Elvis and President Nixon are such larger-than-life characters that any actor playing them seems likely to teeter on the precipice of mimicry. Mr. Shannon, a terrific actor whose features don't resemble Elvis' at all, does a nice job of avoiding the cartoonish, finding a way to explore the essence of his character, physically and vocally (that slurred "thank you very much.") And Mr. Spacey, who by the way is one of our finest impressionists, avoids mocking; he's quite funny as a grumpy, profane man who is deeply uncomfortable in his skin.

Presented with Elvis' childishly scrawled note, President Nixon's young aides like the idea of their very square boss engaging with a pop legend — good for the youth vote. Mr. Haldeman (Tate Donovan) reluctantly approves. President Nixon at first objects — it's his nap hour — but then the aides enlist his beloved daughter Julie, who wants a signed photo.

And so, Elvis turns up in his black cape-like suit and huge gold belt buckle — and loaded with his prized handguns. Once disarmed, he's ushered in, with strict instructions not to touch the president's M&Ms or his Dr Pepper. He ignores both. "You got a bottle opener?" he asks.

And so this fascinating encounter goes, combining things we know happened (the photo, the hug Elvis offers) with things we don't (did Elvis really demonstrate karate?)

By the way, Elvis gets his official agent badge that very day from the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs. (Actor-playwright Tracy Letts has a truly fabulous cameo as the stunned official who issues it.) Fiction? Nope.

As Mr. Haldeman said so succinctly: You must be kidding.

"Elvis & Nixon," an Amazon Studios/Bleecker Street release, is rated R by the Motion Picture Association of America "for some language." Running time: 87 minutes. Two and a half stars out of four.

SPICY HUMMUS QUESO DIP

½ cup Sabra Supremely Spicy Hummus
½ cup milk
8 ounces shredded cheddar cheese
1 medium tomato, finely chopped (about ½ cup)
cilantro
chopped tomatoes
chips or vegetables

In small pot, whisk together hummus and milk. Bring to a boil over high heat. Remove from heat and stir in cheese a little at a time until fully melted and incorporated.

Stir in tomato and serve immediately with cilantro, chopped tomatoes and chips or vegetables.

HUMMUS GARLIC BREAD

1 loaf French bread (about 12-14 inches long)
1 container Sabra Roasted Garlic Hummus
1-2 tablespoons chopped garlic
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Heat broiler.

Slice French bread in half lengthwise. Set aside.

In a small mixing bowl, mix hummus and garlic together. Spread hummus mixture on French bread halves. Place bread on baking sheet. Sprinkle with cheese.

Broil bread on wire baking rack in the middle of the oven, not too close to the broiler. Broil 2-5 minutes, or until edges are crispy and cheese is browning. Watch bread closely as broilers vary greatly in their timing.

Cut each half of bread into quarters.

Serve warm.

Healthy snacking solution:

When you get home from work, reach for a healthy alternative to snacking on junk food that you can get on the table quickly to satisfy your hunger while you prepare the main meal.

Instead of serving sweets or other unhealthy options, gather around the kitchen counter and share stories about the day while enjoying better-for-you foods like Sabra Hummus with fresh sliced vegetables, which are easy to prepare and refrigerate ahead of time, or a tray of assorted crackers and flavorful cheese.

But if you're looking for something a little more savory and ready fast, try this hummus queso dip with chips or a warm

French loaf topped with a creamy, garlicky spread. The secret to these dishes is the simple freshness of smooth and creamy Sabra Hummus, which is available in more than a dozen flavors with unique ingredients from around the world for a wide range of pre-dinner treats.

Allies for Cherry Point's Tomorrow to host benefit

Allies for Cherry Point's Tomorrow (ACT) will host a Brews & Bites benefit to celebrate 75 years of Marine Corps Air Station Cherry Point.

The event will be held from 5:30-7:30 p.m. Thursday, April 28, at the New Bern Farmer's Market. Tickets are $35 in advance and $50 at the door and can be purchased online at www.alliesforcherrypoint.com.

The benefit will feature craft beer from a dozen North Carolina breweries, food from local restaurants, live music by Merchant's Row, raffles and an online auction that will allow mobile bidding.

"When organizing the event, we wanted to make sure that we called on area businesses to highlight the importance of the base to our economy," said Will Lewis, president of ACT.

The response has been very positive with several area restaurrants donating featured appetizers. R.A. Jeffreys Distributing Co. is providing local craft brews.

"Without the base, our local economy would suffer an annual loss of over $2 billion and that would be crippling," said Mr. Lewis.

This fundraiser is a community event to celebrate Marine Corps Air Station Cherry Point and help people understand ACT's role in protecting and growing the base.

With the new F-35 Joint Strike Force program, Cherry Point is poised for positive growth, but that could change at any given time.

ACT will continue to advocate for Marine Corps Air Station Cherry Point, Fleet Readiness Center East and its civilian enterprises, and it counts on the community's support for continued success.

For more information about ACT, visit www.alliesforcherry-point.com.

SUDOKU

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

CCC to host student art exhibition

Carteret Community College's end-of-year student art exhibition will have its opening ceremony from 4 to 6 p.m. Thursday, April 28.

The student show started in 2003, and for many years was held twice a year. However, after a tornado damaged the school's gallery space, it was decided to hold the show once a year, during the spring semester.

The show was started to celebrate the new talent of fine art students and to give parents and friends the opportunity to experience the work the students were able to produce.

Over the years, the exhibition has grown to include work created by students from all of the art programs at the college including fine art, photography, paintings, drawings, sculpture, printmaking and interior design.

The exhibit will be on display through Thursday, May 5, in the historic Camp Glenn Building and is open during the college's regular business hours.

For more information about the exhibition, contact Jason Smith at 252-222-6048.

This year, there will be an advertising package for $15, which will include mention in all social media, media and email messages regarding the Senior Life Expo.

The focus of this event is to address the needs and lifestyles of the expanding population of those
