Unholy alliance

Danny McBride and Walton Goggins team up in 'Vice Principals'

By Jacqueline Spendlove
TV Media

There's nothing like a good comedic rivalry. All the better when it's between a blustering, moustachioed jerk and a Machiavellian, brown-nosing dandy, throwing down on the battlefield of a high school hallway or cafeteria.

That's the order of the day for "Vice Principals," the new dark comedy from the co-creators of "Eastbound & Down," set to debut on HBO. Emmy nominee Walton Goggins ("Justified") steps away from more serious past roles to go up against "Eastbound's" Danny McBride in the series, which made waves at South by Southwest back in March. "Vice Principals" debuts Sunday, July 17, on HBO.

Originally envisioned for the big screen, the series is based on a screenplay written by McBride and collaborator Jody Hill, before the two even sold "Eastbound." As is becoming the trend these days, it was determined that "Vice Principals" needed more screen time than theaters could give it to do the story justice, so it was rejigged for television and found a home at HBO.

The show revolves around Neal Gamby (McBride) and Lee Russell (Goggins), rival vice-principals at suburban, run-of-the-mill North Jackson High School. When the longtime principal (exciting cameo alert! Bill Murray, "Ghostbusters," 1984) steps down to take care of his ailing wife, Gamby and Russell both set their sights on his job, assuming that one of them will be chosen as his successor. Their loathing for one another is palpable, and it's no holds barred as they fight tooth and nail, sabotaging each other in order to land the coveted position.

Unfortunately, their dreams are dashed by the wholly unwelcome arrival of Belinda

Walton Goggins stars in "Vice Principals"

Brown (Kimberly Hebert Gregory, "Devious Maids"), a confident, powerful and highly capable woman who swoops in and nabs the principal's chair out from under both of them. From then on, the hostile VPs decide to put their enmity on the backburner, joining forces to concentrate their efforts on ousting their new boss — and the sooner the better.

Judging by the promos, the show is going to have audiences in stitches. McBride's sweat-vested, rancorous Gamby plays beautifully against Goggins' loudly dressed, softly drawing Russell as the two go to absurd lengths to antagonize each other and anyone who gets in their way.

"It's the adults that are going through all of the social [crises] that usually you see teenagers going through," McBride said in an HBO promo. "Their jobs are to discipline children, but ultimately they have the same sort of behavior as the kids that they discipline."

Indeed, it's evident from the get-go that both men care more about being king of the castle than they do about actually running the school properly. The smiling and affable Brown appears to be the only one who actually has the students' and school's best interests at heart, yet her seconds-in-command are singularly focused on getting her out of the picture.

Russell, the VP in charge of curriculum, is quite well liked by the staff and students of North Jackson High, while Gamby, VP in charge of discipline, is loathed by one and all — and unsurprisingly so. The brief promo clips show Gamby hollering at students, Gamby cursing at students, Gamby hurling popcorn at students and Gamby getting hit in the face with some hideous-looking cafeteria meat by students (or possibly by Russell — it wouldn't be surprising, judging by their relationship).

HBO screened the show's first two episodes at SXSW, and reviews have been mostly positive. "Vice Principals" won the festival's 2016 Audience Award, and critics praise the comedic pairing of McBride and Goggins, in particular.

The network has picked up an 18-episode order for the series, which will encompass a full school year. The plan is for two seasons — each one covering a school term.

The two leads are undoubtedly magic together, but there's good stuff happening with the supporting cast as well. Not to be contained by the school walls, Gamby's antipathy spills into his personal life with abandon.

This is chiefly directed at his ex-wife's (Busy Philipps, "Cougar Town") new husband, Ray (Shea Whigham, "Boardwalk Empire"), who's just about as lovely and supporting a guy as you could ever hope to meet, and whose good deeds and genial demeanor are consistently met with venom from Gamby's end.

While Gamby's general hostility is pretty unwavering in most areas of his life, we do see some genuine warmth from him with his daughter, Janelle (Maya G. Love in her first acting role), for whom his love is obvious. It's her presence in his life that frequently puts her dad in the path of his ex and her reviled (by Gamby, anyway) husband. For her part, Janelle puts up admirably with her dad's behavior in a further demonstration that the adults really are the kids here.

The real story

'The American West' takes a historical look at the wild west

Will Strongheart stars in "The American West"

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

Many a film, TV show and book have been created about the larger-than-life characters of America's Wild West, but what really happened out there? A new television series aims to unveil the truth about the tumultuous time that shaped the nation's people and places.

Robert Redford ("Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," 1969) and Stephen David ("Redrum") bring viewers a historical look at the era in "The American West," airing a new episode Saturday, July 23, on AMC. Set between the years 1865 to 1890, the show explores how the United States was transformed in the aftermath of the Civil War.

"The series will allow viewers the opportunity to explore an era of famous outlaws and lawmen who shaped American history, connected through a larger story that's never been told in this way," explained David in an official release.

Billed as a docuseries, the eight-part television event takes a look at the personal lives and little-known tales of western legends such as Jesse James (David H. Stevens, "Punch-Drunk Love," 2002), Billy the Kid (Derek Chariton, "Losing It"), Wyatt Earp (Jonathan C. Stewart, "The Making of the Mob: New York"), Crazyhorse (newcomer Will Strongheart) and Sitting Bull (Mo Brings Plenty, "Comanche Warrior").

In addition to dramatic re-enactments of their stories, "The American West" features interviews with notable stars from the western genre. Some of the actors featured include James Caan ("The Godfather," 1972), Burt Reynolds ("Smokey and the Bandit," 1977), Tom Selleck ("Magnum, P.I."), Kiefer Sutherland ("24"), Mark Harmon ("NCIS") and Ed Harris ("Pollock," 2000), as well as Redford himself.

All of the aforementioned actors rose to prominence thanks to their roles in western movies and TV shows, but none so famously as Redford. His work in "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" opposite Paul Newman ("The Sting," 1973) solidified his status as a true Hollywood A-lister, even before there was an A-list. Redford, of course, broke out of the western genre and went on to appear in, direct and produce some of the most memorable movies of our time, including "Ordinary People" (1980), "Out of Africa" (1985) and "Quiz Show" (1994), winning an Oscar, three Golden Globes and SAG's Lifetime Achievement Award in 1995. Ten years later, he received the Kennedy Center Honors for his contribution to American culture.

While Redford needs no introduction, TV fans may not be immediately familiar with David, but he's proven he's a force to be reckoned with in the television industry. Before establishing his own production and post-production company — Stephen David Entertainment — he was part of the original team behind NBC's "The Apprentice," and also worked on CBS's mega-hit "Survivor." An accomplished screenwriter, he's also had a hand in such series as TLC's "Big Medicine," A&E's "God or the Girl" and History's "The Men Who Built America." His work in "Sons of Liberty" earned him a nomination for a Writers Guild of America Award. David has worked with AMC before, in the award-winning "Making of the Mob" series.

Together, David and Redford are continuing a well-established western tradition on AMC, which has become home to a number of western programs over the years, both new and old. The cable channel has been attracting fans of the genre for years with rebroadcasts of classic series and movies such as "The Rifleman" and "Hondo" (1953). AMC has even dabbled in the genre with its own original, "Hell on Wheels," which airs immediately prior to "The American West" on Saturday evenings. "Hell on Wheels," which serves as the perfect lead-in to the docuseries, chronicles the life of Cullen Bohannon (Anson Mount, "Tully," 2000), a former Confederate soldier working on the first transcontinental railroad.

AMC may seem like a great fit now, but "The American West" was initially supposed to air on Discovery. In 2014, the Sundance Productions program was retooled and moved to AMC when the cable channel ordered it straight to series.

That was a big vote of confidence for the series, which has earned mixed reviews from critics up to that point. Robert Lloyd of the Los Angeles Times appreciated the fresh focus on re-enactments compared to other documentary style programs, while Rob Lowman of the Los Angeles Daily News felt "The American West" was "more entertainment than insightful." As of press time, the show held a seven out of 10 rating on IMDb.com.

Anyone wondering where to find the rugged scenery seen in "The American West" should check out West Virginia's Berkeley and Jefferson counties, as well as Prickett's Fort State Park in Marion County, where the show is predominantly filmed. The untouched landscapes easily transport viewers back to the days after the Civil War, days that shaped modern America.

Witness the stories of cowboys, outlaws, lawmen and native Americans that shaped America's history and transformed the nation into the land of opportunity in "The American West," airing a new episode Saturday, July 23, on AMC.

Alec Baldwin hosts "Match Game"

Big Brother

WHP 8:00 PM

Check in on this season's Houseguests as they jockey for position and try to avoid elimination in a new episode of this reality TV series. Dozens of HD cameras and more than 100 microphones capture the Houseguests' every move.

Intervention

A&E 9:00 PM

This new episode introduces Brian, who took comfort in alcohol after assisting with the recovery of bodies following the Oklahoma City bombings. Now, he's lost his wife, kids and career because of his addiction, and his family is worried about his future.

Match Game

WHTM 10:00 PM

Alec Baldwin hosts as contestants try to match the answers of six celebrity players in a new episode of this fill-in-the-blanks game show. Some of the celebrities featured this season include Debra Messing, Rosie O'Donnell and J.B. Smoove.

'Cooks vs. Cons' is back for a second season

Richard Blaise, Geoffrey Zakarian and Daphne Oz as seen in "Cooks vs. Cons"

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

Turns out Geoffrey Zakarian was playing the long-con all along. The iron chef with the tailored suits and impeccable style had his own show premiere back in March, and it already returned for a second season just last week.

"Cooks vs. Cons" brought in impressive viewership numbers with some key demographics, and the quick turnaround for a second season is intended to help out those whetted appetites. It's currently airing Sunday evenings on Food Network.

The competition takes a page from the notebook of Food Network's other cooking competitions: "Chopped," "Guy's Grocery Games," "Cutthroat Kitchen" et al. Chef Zakarian plays host for four contestants who each prepare a tasty dish using mystery ingredients, which is then judged by a panel of culinary pros.

The twist here, though, is that only two of the contestants are professional chefs, and the others are talented home cooks, but no one knows who's who: not the judges, not the other contestants and not the audience watching from home. It all makes for a fun little guessing game and a whole lot of deception, but it does have a point.

In the end, only one contestant can be declared the winner by the judges, and the amount of prize money up for grabs varies depending on whether the winner is a cook or a con. A cook winner gets to take home a hefty $10,000 — a pretty nice chunk of change. In the case of a con taking down the pros and winning the day, though, he or she gets an extra $5,000 on top of that, for a cool total of $15,000.

That's no easy feat, though. Not only are the home-cooking cons trying to put together a dish good enough to stand beside those made by professionals on the judge's table, they're also cooking in a professional kitchen for the first time. There's equipment, tools and ingredients that they've never seen or used before, and with the clock ticking down until judging time, they don't exactly have the time to figure out how to use them.

The beauty of "Cooks vs. Cons," though, is just sitting back and trying to pick out who's who. Cook or con? Either way, the show is a winner for Food Network. Its second season is airing Sunday evenings.

Batman v Superman: Dawn of Justice

The world is divided on how to deal with Superman (Cavill), the heroic alien who saved Earth from an extraterrestrial threat, but destroyed a city in the process. Congress is holding hearings on him, while Clark Kent, Superman's alter ego, tries to defend the superhero in the newspaper. One man, billionaire Bruce Wayne (Affleck), who moonlights as the vigilante Batman, becomes determined to take down Superman. He comes up with a plan to steal kryptonite from Lex Luthor (Eisenberg) and use it to build weapons and an armored suit that enables him to fight the nearly invincible Superman. Little does Batman know, Luthor has been one step ahead of him all along.

The Perfect Match

Charlie (Jenkins) sets out to prove to his friends and family that long-term relationships are dead. This longtime playboy, who has spent his life moving from conquest to conquest, accepts a bet from his friends that, if he spends a month getting to know a woman romantically, he'll end up falling in love with her. Convinced that love is the stuff of fairy tales, Charlie seduces the alluring Eva (Ventura) with plans to have some romantic fun for a month and then move on. As he finds himself wanting more out of the relationship, though, the tables begin to turn on him when Eva shows no interest in taking things any further. Director: Billie Woodruff. Stars: Terrence Jenkins, Cassie Ventura, Paula Patton, Donald Faison, Kali Hawk, Brandy Norwood. 2016. 96 min. Comedy.

Kill Zone 2

Kit (Wu) is an undercover cop who is trying to get to the bottom of a nefarious criminal syndicate. When his cover is blown and he ends up in prison, though, a chain of events is set in motion that exposes a dying girl, a corrupt prison warden and a desperate father.

Director: Pou-Soi Cheang. Stars: Jing Wu, Tony Jaa, Simon Yam, Louis Koo. 2015. 120 min. Action.

Miss D from "Bring It!"

The HALO Effect

nick 8:30 PM

This new episode brings viewers Christopher's remarkable story. When Christopher realized that many families can't afford computers, he started a movement to build and donate computers to increase everyone's access to technology.

Bring It!

LIFE 9:00 PM

Coach D decides to split the Dancing Dolls into two teams for the first time ever so they can compete in an intense scrimmage match in this new episode. In a David vs. Goliath challenge, Team Kayla goes up against Team Dianna to train new dancers.

Homestead Rescue

disc 10:00 PM

The Russell family has been struggling on a failing homestead in the forests of Pennsylvania, so Marty, Matt and Misty Raney step in to help in this premiere. With no hunting skills, the family faces a food shortage during a big storm.

Jon Foo stars in "Rush Hour"

Hello World!

disc 8:00 PM

Joan Jett's hit "Bad Reputation" serves as a soundtrack to this episode, which features creatures people love to hate, such as wolves, alligators and sharks. The program reveals that, for all of the fear they inspire, they are crucial parts of nature.

Rush Hour

(WHP) 9:00 PM

Hong Kong cop Det. Lee (Jon Foo) works alongside LAPD officer Det. Carter (Justin Hires) in a new episode of this action comedy based on the film franchise of the same name. Although the two have completely different styles, they make a great team.

The American West

amc 10:05 PM

Travel back in time to the years following the American Civil War in a new episode of this docuseries. Detailed re-enactments reveal the personal stories of such Wild West icons as Wyatt Earp, Jesse James, Crazyhorse and Sitting Bull.

Keep screaming: The queens of screams are getting some frightful new friends. Fox's "Scream Queens," starring Emma Roberts ("American Horror Story") and slasher flick queen Jamie Lee Curtis ("Halloween," 1978), was a big hit in its first season, and production is well underway for its second, which is scheduled to premiere in the latter half of September.

A new season means new cast members — especially considering the body count that stacked up in the first — and this darkly comedic slasher show is lining up some big names for its sophomore run.

John Stamos ("Full House") was the first new name announced, adding an older character to the group of young starring ladies. It's a continuation of what could have been a short-lived relationship between the actor and Fox after his show "Grandfathered" was canceled in May after just one season.

He's joined by smoldering young stud Taylor Lautner ("Twilight," 2008), who rose to fame for starring as the werewolf Jacob in the Twilight Saga films.

The rookie duo plays a pair of doctors working in a hospital that specializes in treating bizarre and strange illnesses. Much as the first season was a darkly satirical look at college fraternities — and how they're depicted in slasher films and TV shows — the second season is doing the same for hospitals.

In addition to Roberts and Curtis, there are some other faces returning for season 2 as well. Lea Michele ("Glee"), Keke Palmer ("Wixx Club: Enchantrix"), Abigail Breslin ("Zombieland," 2009), Billie Lourd ("Star Wars: The Force Awakens," 2015), Glen Powell ("The Dark Knight Rises," 2012) and Niecy Nash ("The Soul Man") are all returning to their roles, and their characters are now involved with the hospital in some capacity.

The first season of "Scream Queens" was praised by critics for its scathing humor that played up the stereotype of sorority girls being mean-spirited and shallow. The switch to a hospital provides all new targets for the biting nastiness — and all new targets for a new killer. Season 2 of "Scream Queens" is scheduled to premiere Tuesday, Sept. 20, on Fox.

One last look: After two beloved seasons, "Looking" is going out in style. The HBO dramedy was canceled in March, after two critically adored seasons. Despite its loyal fan base, it never quite pulled in enough sets of eyes to keep it going, but that's not to say that HBO is leaving things hanging.

"Looking: The Movie" airs Saturday, July 23, on the premium channel, and should bring some closure to the stories that have developed over the course of the show's run.

"Looking" was and is a comedic drama that follows three gay best friends living in San Francisco as they go about their lives in typical sitcom fashion: going on dates and falling in love, following their career dreams, and supporting each other in all they do.

Jonathan Groff ("American Sniper," 2014), Frankie J. Alvarez ("Smash") and Murray Bartlett ("Guiding Light") star as best friends Patrick, Agustin and Dom, respectively.

The film picks up with Patrick returning to San Francisco for a big celebration with his buddies. It turns out that everything isn't sunshine and roses, though, as he carries unresolved relationship issues that he must deal with before he can move on with his life.

"Looking: The Movie" promises to finally bring Patrick, Agustin and Dom's storylines to satisfying conclusions, and to close the door on this beloved story about their lives. "Looking" may not have had enough viewers to keep it on the air, but at least HBO cares enough about its fans to make this one last hurrah.

The final chapter in Patrick, Agustin and Dom's story airs Saturday, July 23, on HBO.

Underground casting: Showtime is recruiting for the rebellion.

Indian actress Freida Pinto ("Slumdog Millionaire," 2008) has been cast in a starring role in "Guerrilla," an upcoming six-part dramatic miniseries set in 1970s London.

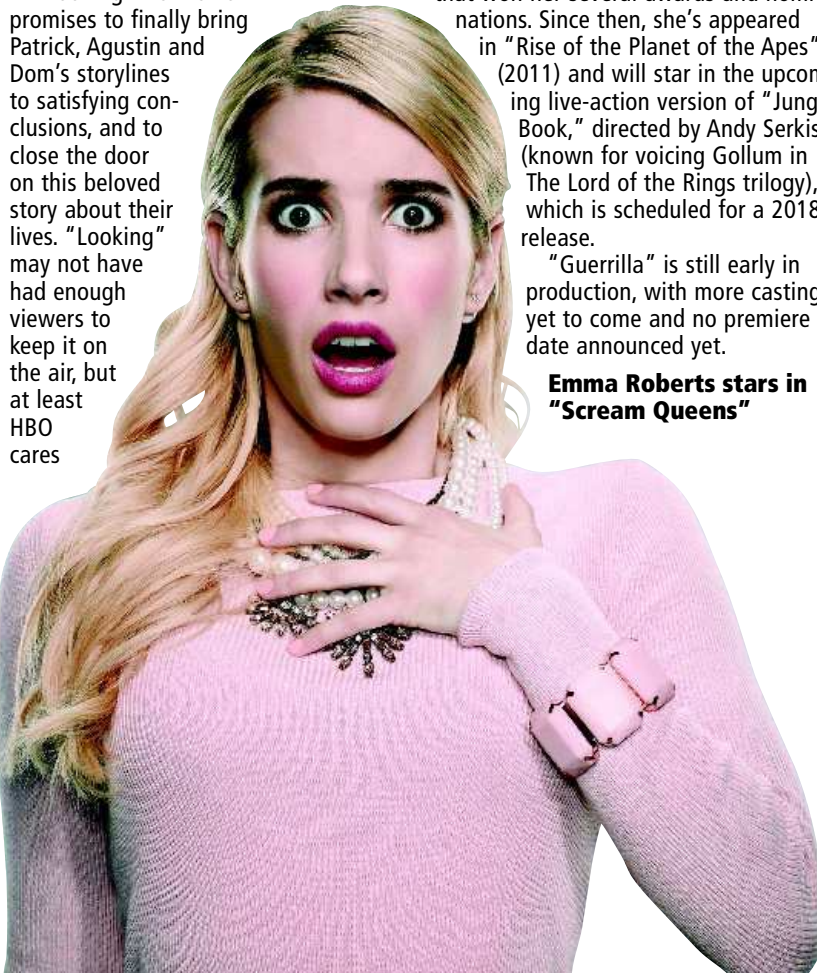

The show, which is still early in production, is described as a love story set against the backdrop of an underground cell fighting against the social injustices of the age. Actor Idris Elba ("Pacific Rim," 2013), who is serving as an executive producer, is also starring.

Pinto has been cast as Jas, a politically motivated woman who helps break a charismatic prisoner out of jail, leading her to question not only her values, but also her relationship with a man named Marcus, who has not yet been cast.

Pinto found fame for her role in the Academy Award-winning film "Slumdog Millionaire," putting in a performance that won her several awards and nominations. Since then, she's appeared in "Rise of the Planet of the Apes" (2011) and will star in the upcoming live-action version of "Jungle Book," directed by Andy Serkis (known for voicing Gollum in The Lord of the Rings trilogy), which is scheduled for a 2018 release.

"Guerrilla" is still early in production, with more casting yet to come and no premiere date announced yet.

Q: I've often wondered who played the couple's marriage counselor in the movie "Mr. & Mrs. Smith" with Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie? I know that voice but can't place it.

A: There are a lot of reasons why you might know William Fichtner, who played the marriage counselor in the 2005 action-romcom. But it's also understandable that you didn't know it was him, since his name didn't appear in the credits.

TV fans probably know Fichtner best as FBI Agent Alexander Mahone, who was assigned to capture the fugitives in the hit Fox series "Prison Break," from 2006 to 2009, or as the sheriff in the short-lived sci-fi drama "Invasion," from 2005 to 2006.

On film, he's appeared as a supporting man in a number of blockbusters, such as "Armageddon" (1998), "Black Hawk Down" (2001) and "The Dark Knight" (2008). He's also appeared in critical-darling films such as "Heat" (1995), and in the star-studded ensemble cast of the Oscar-winning "Crash" (2004).

Though small and uncredited, his role in "Mr. & Mrs. Smith" is pivotal, if only because it was part of the film's inspiration. Writer Simon Kinberg said in an interview that he came up with the idea for the film, about husband-and-wife assassins who are contracted to kill each other, after hearing two of his friends talk about their experience in marriage counseling.

"The way they were talking about it sounded kind of aggressive and mercenary," he told About.com. "And I just thought it would make an interesting template for a relationship inside of an action film."

Q: I saw an infographic online that said Ron Perlman was once the Hulk. When was that?

A: It's not hard to imagine Ron Perlman playing the Hulk on screen. Arguably his best-known character, Hellboy, is something of a giant himself, and he's generally cast in imposing roles (and like the Hulk, they're usually ones with good hearts under the muscle).

However, the times Perlman has played the Hulk were never on screen. He provided the voice of Marvel's giant green rage-monster, and his human alter-ego, Dr. Bruce Banner, in episodes of two cartoon series based on other Marvel comic book characters.

Perlman voiced the Hulk in a second-season episode of the "Iron Man" series in 1996, as well as an episode of the "Fantastic Four" series in 1995.

Both of those shows came well before the recent spate of big-screen Marvel blockbusters, in which the Hulk has been played by three other actors: Eric Bana, Edward Norton and, most recently, Mark Ruffalo.

After those films, the Hulk got his own cartoon series, but again Perlman didn't get the callback. In "Hulk and the Agents of S.M.A.S.H." (the title of which is a reference to yet another Marvel property, "Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D."), the Hulk is voiced by established voice actor Fred Tatasciore.

Actually, that wasn't the first cartoon devoted to the Hulk — he had one from 1996 to 1998 as well. That was right around the time Perlman was doing the role in "Iron Man" and "Fantastic Four," but Marvel didn't pick him for the full-time series (or, perhaps, it couldn't afford him). Instead, the character was voiced by Lou Ferrigno. Ferrigno was, of course, already familiar with the character, having played him in the live-action TV series from 1977 to 1982.

History's survival series is the epitome of isolation

By Cassie Dresch
TV Media

Go it 'Alone': Have you ever wanted to shut off your cellphone, unplug all your electronics and take off into the woods for days, weeks and months on end to get away? No? Me neither, at least not to the extreme shown in History's "Alone." The reality competition series drops 10 survivalists in northern Vancouver Island, British Columbia, far away from civilization with nothing but the clothes on their backs and 10 pieces of survival gear. The season finale of "Alone" airs Thursday, July 21, on History.

When History says "Alone," they mean it. Each contestant is dropped in a different place, and they can't accidentally cross paths — impassable mountain ranges or bodies of water separate them — so these 10 people are very, very alone. The idea — being by yourself with no other human contact for possibly up to a year (or so the producers tell the contestants), in unfamiliar wilderness and surrounded by hungry predators — is jarring, and likely to make even the most confident person uneasy.

There is a hefty $500,000 prize on the line, though, which sweetens the pot ever so slightly, but the isolation, psychological distress and constant natural threats mean a very specific kind of people are needed to make this show a success. Season 2 has seen the likes of a former Spanish Foreign Legion Special Forces member, a former game warden with the U.S. Peace Corps (who also currently has multiple sclerosis) and a post-apocalyptic fiction writer take to British Columbia's treacherous Quatsino Territory. Still, it's a taxing journey, and season 1 winner Alan Kay lost 60 pounds during his 56-day excursion.

"At the end of my stay on Vancouver Island, my belt could wrap around to my tail bone," the six-foot-six Blairsville, Georgia, native told People magazine ahead of the season 1 finale last August. "I went from a 38-inch waist to about a 31-inch waist. ...

Looking in a mirror for the first time after coming out of the woods was surreal. The only part of me I recognized was my eyes."

It's those kinds of transformations that help make the show so compelling, and draw in viewers. Season 1 saw a decent 2.5 million total viewers on average tune in, and the show finished in the top three new non-fiction cable series of 2015.
