It's all about siblings in a new episode of "Drunk History," featuring Elizabeth Olsen ("Godzilla," 2014), Jason Ritter ("Another Period"), Rachel Bilson ("Hart of Dixie"), Jenna Fischer ("The Office") and more. Get the whole inebriated stories of Katherine Wright helping her brothers build an airplane, the Kopp sisters fighting to protect their home, and the Fox sisters' role in the creation and spread of Spiritualism. The newest episode of "Drunk History" airs Tuesday, Nov. 1, on Comedy Central.

A new episode of 'Drunk History' welcomes more celebrities

Any designated driver who's been trapped in a rambling, disjointed conversation with a completely inebriated passenger might be surprised to hear of a TV series that's found great success in rambling, disjointed retellings of historical events from a completely inebriated narrator.

That, however, is precisely what "Drunk History" has managed to do. The show that began as a series of Funny or Die online shorts born of an actual drunken discussion has become a half-hour Comedy Central mainstay, now in its fourth season. Catch a new episode of "Drunk History" when it airs Tuesday, Nov. 1, on Comedy Central.

According to "Drunk History" lore, the idea for the show came to co-creator Derek Waters ("Hall Pass," 2011) during a boozy night spent with friend and "New Girl" star Jake Johnson. The two were discussing the death of singer Otis Redding and, according to Waters, he envisioned Redding telling the story in Johnson's words, moving his lips to what was being drunkenly spouted off.

The image, as it turned out, translated to the screen to great effect. Each episode of "Drunk History" recounts events from American history as narrated by a thoroughly soused comedian. The cast acts out what's being said, while lip-syncing the narration — complete with anachronisms, stammering, hiccups, curses and mistakes.

The more poorly the story is told, the funnier the reenactment comes across, from one narrator mistakenly referring to Richard Dreyfuss ("Jaws," 1975) while recounting a story about abolitionist Frederick Douglass, to another forgetting the names of pretty much all the reindeer in his recitation of "Twas the Night Before Christmas" (unless I'm the one in the wrong and Santa does, in fact, have reindeer named Shouter and Blinsen). Still another narrator needed to pause the story — not once, but twice — to, shall we say, void his system of eight vodka cranberries. Part of the draw of the show is the big names involved. Since the early web series days, the ever-changing cast has included countless celebrities and Hollywood A-listers.

The episode detailing the friendship between Abraham Lincoln and Frederick Douglass features Will Ferrell ("Anchorman: The Legend of Ron Burgundy," 2004) — who also co-produces the Comedy Central series — Don Cheadle ("Hotel Rwanda," 2004) and Zooey Deschanel ("New Girl"), and went on to win the award for Best American Short at the 2010 Sundance Film Festival.

Since moving to Comedy Central, the series has enjoyed the antics of Jack Black ("School of Rock," 2003), Winona Ryder ("Girl, Interrupted," 1999), Bill Hader ("Saturday Night Live"), Bob Odenkirk ("Better Call Saul"), Owen ("Wedding Crashers," 2005) and Luke Wilson ("Old School," 2003), John Lithgow ("3rd Rock From the Sun"), Greg Kinnear ("As Good as It Gets," 1997) ... the list goes on and on and on.

For the most part, each episode has focused on a city and related a number of historical events and figures associated with it. The show has looked at the Lincoln assassination and the Watergate scandal in Washington, D.C., the kidnapping of Patty Hearst in San Francisco, the story of Benedict Arnold in Philadelphia, and the activities of Bugsy Siegel in Las Vegas. While major people and events are certainly portrayed, the show's research team digs deep for lesser-known stories as well, so there's more than just the pieces of history everyone is taught in school.

CMA Awards celebrates golden anniversary

Brad Paisley and Carrie Underwood host the 50th Annual CMA Awards

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

America's love affair with country music is about to hit a new milestone, and some of the music industry's top talents are on hand to celebrate.

Carrie Underwood and Brad Paisley team up once again to co-host the 50th Annual CMA Awards, airing Wednesday, Nov. 2, on ABC. Broadcast live from Nashville's Bridgestone Arena, the star-studded awards gala recognizes outstanding achievement by country artists throughout the previous year.

Underwood and Paisley — both past CMA Award winners — have hosted the ceremony together since 2008. The popular pair is thrilled to be hosting the ceremony on its golden anniversary, and want to honor the history of country music.

"I really enjoy hosting the CMA Awards with Brad," said Underwood in a news release. "Of course we have fun up there, but we take the responsibility of honoring the best artists in the format and shining a positive light on country music very seriously."

Paisley echoed Underwood's reverence for the awards, adding: "This year the stakes are higher than ever as we honor the legacy and traditions of the past 50 years."

One of the genre's most legendary artists receives a very special award as part of the November ceremony. It seems only fitting that a woman with a heart of gold would be recognized on the event's 50th anniversary: Dolly Parton receives the Willie Nelson Lifetime Achievement Award. Considered the most honored female country artist of all time, Parton holds the record among female artists for the most No. 1 hits with 25, and she has 41 career top 10 country albums, a record among all country artists. Her more than 3,000 songs include the hits "Jolene," "9 to 5" and "I Will Always Love You," which was also a huge hit for Whitney Houston, who covered it in 1992.

"I Will Always Love You" is one of three classic country songs featured in "Forever Country," a special video created in celebration of the CMA Awards 50th anniversary. Produced by CMA Board member and CMA Award winner Shane McAnally, the video includes 30 CMA Award-winning artists — including Parton herself — performing a medley of Parton's hit, John Denver's "Take Me Home, Country Roads" and Willie Nelson's "On the Road Again."

The video is just one way the CMA Awards honors the history of country music as today's artists take a step back from promoting their newer work to pay tribute to the genre that arose out of the folk and blues music of the 1920s. In an October tasteofcountry.com interview, McAnally indicated the focus would be on heritage artists, such as Parton and Nelson.

However, contemporary artists still get their turn in the spotlight as they accept their awards. Eric Church is among the top nominees with five nods. He's up for Male Vocalist of the Year, Album of the Year ("Mr. Misunderstood"), Single of the Year ("Record Year") and Music Video of the Year ("Record Year").

Chris Stapleton clocks in with five nominations as well for Entertainer of the Year, Male Vocalist of the Year, Single of the Year ("Nobody to Blame"), Music Video of the Year ("Fire Away") and Musical Event of the Year with wife Morgane Stapleton ("You Are My Sunshine").

This year's other big nominee is Maren Morris, who has earned nods for Female Vocalist of the Year, New Artist of the Year, Album of the Year ("Hero"), Song of the Year ("My Church") and Single of the Year ("My Church").

Dierks Bentley, Keith Urban and Underwood each secured four nods, while Cam earned two. Underwood is the only female to have earned an Entertainer of the Year nomination. She faces off against Urban, Stapleton, Garth Brooks and Luke Bryan in that category. She's up against Morris, Kelsea Ballerini, Miranda Lambert and Kacey Musgraves in the Female Vocalist of the Year field.

In addition to Morris, the coveted New Artist of the Year category nominees include Ballerini, Brothers Osborne, Old Dominion and Cole Swindell. A full list of nominees is available at cma-world.com.

As diverse as this year's list of nominees is, some top-performing artists are conspicuously absent.

Despite being the reigning ACM Entertainer of the Year, Jason Aldean didn't receive a single CMA nod. Superstars Blake Shelton and Kenny Chesney were also shut out this year.

Their absence may have some fans wondering how the nominees are chosen. More than 7,000 professional members of the CMA choose the nominees and the winners. The organization has been around since 1958, when it became the very first trade organization formed to promote an individual genre of music.

Paisley and Underwood welcome legendary stars and newcomers to the stage to celebrate a genre of music with a rich history in America and around the world. Don't miss the 50th Annual CMA Awards, airing Wednesday, Nov. 2, on ABC.

Giada De Laurentiis returns with more helpful holiday hints

Giada De Laurentiis in "Giada's Holiday Handbook"

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

October is over, and I think we all know what that means: the holiday season has arrived. Thanksgiving is only a few weeks away, and Christmas only a month after that, so the time to start planning those holiday get-togethers is now. Luckily, Food Network's own holiday expert is ready to advise and inspire with her own party tips and treats.

The second helpful season of "Giada's Holiday Handbook" premieres Sunday, Oct. 30, on Food Network, with some last-minute Halloween ideas. "Everyday Italian's" Giada De Laurentiis wrote the book on holiday entertaining, and although Halloween may not inspire the peace, joy and togetherness that Thanksgiving and Christmas do, that doesn't mean that it can't bring people together.

In the premiere episode, Giada hosts an open house for the neighborhood kids and their families. Of course, anyone going to a get-together at a Food Network celebrity's home expects great food, and Giada doesn't disappoint.

For those of us who weren't lucky enough to get invitations to the party (I assume that mine was lost in the mail), Giada at least walks us through her spooky menu and gives helpful advice for preparing similar dishes at our own Halloween parties. Items on the menu include spooky chicken finger sammies, tasty coconut "bones" and scarily sumptuous witches' brooms.

Once Halloween is behind us, Giada moves on to the classic cocktail party. In the Nov. 6 episode, she hosts some friends for a vintage gathering, complete with throwback recipes with a modern twist, such as bacon onion dip, a Korean shrimp cocktail and a grown-ups-only gelatin mold.

Plus, if you missed last season's episodes full of helpful holiday advice and recipes, or even if you want a refresher, Giada's got you covered. Last season's first episode airs Saturday, Nov. 5, with the rest of the season's enlightening episodes to follow as the big day approaches — check your local Food Network listings for exact times and dates.

Giada De Laurentiis is so full of holiday advice and suggestions that it couldn't be contained in a single TV season. Food Network's "Giada's Holiday Handbook" arrives just in time for Halloween, premiering Sunday, Oct. 30.

Star Trek Beyond

When a small escape pod and its sole occupant are recovered by the starship Enterprise after drifting out of an uncharted section of space, Capt. James T. Kirk (Pine) and his crew embark on a rescue mission to save the survivors of its ship of origin. When they arrive in orbit around the hidden planet the ship is purportedly on, the Enterprise is suddenly attacked by a massive ship armed with incredibly destructive weapons, and Kirk is forced to issue an order to abandon ship. With the ship's officers scattered across the planet's surface and most of the surviving crew enslaved by their villainous attacker, Krall (Elba), Kirk must rely on his wits and quick thinking to save his friends and stop a terrible plot that could result in the deaths of millions.

Director: Justin Lin. Stars: Chris Pine, Idris Elba, Zachary Quinto, Karl Urban, Zoe Saldana, Simon Pegg, John Cho, Anton Yelchin. 2016. 122 min. Action.

Nine Lives

With his company's newest skyscraper nearly complete, New York tycoon Tom Brand (Spacey) has been very busy — so busy that he's forgotten to get his daughter a birthday present. Despite having always hated cats, he stops by a strange pet store and ends up leaving with both a feline and an enigmatic message from the store's owner (Walken). On the way to the birthday party, a sudden accident leaves him in a coma, and he wakes up with his consciousness somehow in the body of the cat. When the pet store owner warns him that he has only a week to change his ways and connect with his family, he tries to alert his loved ones to his plight before he ends up trapped as a cat for the rest of his life. Director: Barry Sonnenfeld. Stars: Kevin Spacey, Jennifer Garner, Christopher Walken, Robbie Amell. 2016. 87 min. Comedy.

Bad Moms

After she catches her husband cheating, "perfect" mom Amy (Kunis) throws him out, quits the PTA and makes new friends. Her falling out with the PTA draws the ire of its president (Applegate), and Amy decides to run against her by showing all the other moms how to loosen up and have a good time.

Directors: Jon Lucas, Scott Moore. Stars: Mila Kunis, Christina Applegate, Kathryn Hahn, Kristen Bell, Jada Pinkett Smith. 2016. 100 min. Comedy.

stars on screen

'Salem' shocker: Marilyn Manson is moving to Salem. The singer/songwriter was a controversial figure during the height of his popularity in the 1990s, with his dark lyrics and bizarre stage performances causing concern among parents and educators about his influence on youth. In other words, he's a perfect fit for WGN America's "Salem."

The supernatural drama kicks off its third season Wednesday, Nov. 2, with Manson joining the cast as the town's newest villain: Thomas Dinley, Salem's resident barber, surgeon and the go-to man in town for leeching. It's a character that's part Jack the Ripper and part Sweeney Todd.

It may be Manson's first regular TV role, but he's no stranger to the screen. He got his acting start in the 1997 film "Lost Highway," and since then, he has popped up in a bevy of roles and cameos, including "The Heart Is Deceitful Above All Things" (2004) and "Californication."

It's been a great complement to his hugely successful music career. Manson, who's famous for always appearing in public with a heavy dose of makeup on his face, has received four Grammy nominations and has had two albums reach the No. 1 spot.

In "Salem," Manson stars alongside Janet Montgomery ("Entourage"), Shane West ("Nikita"), Seth Gabel ("Fringe"), Elise Eberle ("Tiger Eyes," 2012) and Tamzin Merchant ("The Tudors"). Montgomery headlines the cast as Mary Sibley, the most powerful witch in Salem who (spoiler alert!) died at the end of the second season.

This is a supernatural drama, though, where death is rarely the end, and the fact that she's still billed as "Salem's" top actor makes it pretty clear that this witch has some unfinished business to attend to. "Salem" returns to WGN America for a third season Wednesday, Nov. 2.

Fox and food: Gordon Ramsay is adding a fifth ingredient to his relationship recipe with Fox. Even with four culinary-focused food programs well established on the network ("MasterChef," "MasterChef Junior," "Hell's Kitchen" and "Hotel Hell"), the British chef isn't slowing down or holding back. His new studio, Studio Ramsay, is laying the groundwork for a fifth Ramsay offering.

"The F Word," which will be based on the U.K. show of the same name that ran from 2005 to 2010, will bring a new twist to the food competition genre with its defining feature: this contest will air live, raw and unedited.

The show's title, of course, refers to "food," but also to the expletives that Ramsay's prone to yelling whenever he gets frustrated or angry — something that could get interesting in a show that's broadcast live.

Each episode of "The F Word" will feature families facing off in a cooking competition, hoping to impress not only chef Ramsay but also a panel of celebrity guests.

"The F Word" isn't just a live cooking competition, though: it's also a variety show. Throughout each episode, Ramsay will connect with guests remotely around the country, have conversations with VIPs in the studio, and appear in field segments that he's pre-recorded throughout the week — and since it's live and unedited, it's going to be competitive cooking at its rawest.

That's a fact that clearly isn't lost on the executives at Fox. "Let's face it, with Gordon live on television, the phrase 'anything can happen' takes on a whole new meaning," said Fox Broadcasting executive David Madden.

Isn't that the truth. Chef Ramsay's "The F Word" is still in its early planning stages, with a premiere planned for some time in 2017.

Gongs for game shows: ABC is reviving yet another classic. "The Gong Show" is being yanked into the 21st century by actor/producer Will Arnett ("Arrested Development"). The classic talent show first ran on NBC from 1976 to 1978, and has had numerous revivals attempted ever since, some of them more successful than others. Arnett will serve as executive producer for the revival; no host has been announced yet.

In classic "Gong Show" style, each episode will feature a lineup of untraditionally talented performers plucked from the Internet and put on stage in front of a panel of judges and a big, loud gong.

One by one the performers will attempt to wow the judges with their talents, but at any time, the judges can strike that gong with a mallet, signaling the end of the performance and the judge's rejection of the performer. It's all very absurdist and none too serious — "America's Got Talent" this is not.

ABC has had great success with its revivals of older game shows. "Celebrity Family Feud," "$100,000 Pyramid" and "Match Game" aired back-to-back-to-back this past summer to great ratings success, and all three have been renewed for another season in 2017.

hollywood q&a

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: The last episode of "Castle" was terrible — many people I know didn't even notice that the end was supposed to be seven years later. The network needs to bring the show back where they left off, with them lying on the floor, and hopefully a neighbor or Castle's daughter would find them.

A: There's a lot to unpack in your question, but let me start with the basics: "Castle" is absolutely finished; no last-minute, heroic renewals are forthcoming. The actors have moved on to other things, and the head writers have written a note to fans and the crew, saying, "We will miss you profoundly."

In fact, putting a definitive end on the show is what that much-maligned last scene was all about.

Hollywood Reporter TV critic Daniel Fienberg called "Castle's" series finale "hilariously bad," and called the final, seven-years-later scene "a weak Plan B ending." And he's right — at least about the "Plan B" part.

Immediately before the flash-forward scene, Castle and Beckett are lying together, wounded, seemingly on the brink of death. A number of reports say that if ABC had renewed the show for a ninth season, this is how the episode would have ended. Stana Katic, who played Beckett, was known to be leaving the show, and Entertainment Weekly, for one, speculated that had the show been renewed, the new season would have revealed that she died in Castle's arms.

But it wasn't renewed, so the writers had to go with an ending that gave fans some closure (however unsatisfying).

Fans might get more closure by following the lead actors on to their various new projects. Series star Nathan Fillion (who played Rick Castle) has a second season of his popular web series "Con Man" coming up, and he's also guest starring in the new season of "Modern Family" (another long-running show on ABC). If that sounds like a busy schedule, Katic has appeared in a whopping three films since "Castle" ended — indie films "Lost in Florence" and "The Rendezvous," and the Lifetime telefilm "Sister Cities."

Q: Can you tell me the name of the actor playing Shinwell Johnson in the new season of "Elementary"? He looks so familiar.

A: Nelsan Ellis will look familiar to fans of HBO's delightfully trashy vampire show "True Blood," and to fans of prestige dramas about the black experience — two groups that wouldn't seem to have a lot of overlap.

Ellis played the cross-dressing, big-hearted Lafayette in "True Blood" throughout the show's six-year, 80-episode run. He picked up a few award nominations for his work, most notably a couple of NAACP Image Awards.

That's notable because of the other reason you might know him. He had supporting roles in three high-profile dramas about the experience and history of black people in the United States, two of which also received a number of Image Award nods.

He appeared in the star-studded 2011 hit "The Help" and in 2013's "Lee Daniels' The Butler," both of which won a number of Image Awards (with "The Help" receiving the Outstanding Motion Picture prize). "The Soloist" (2009), though based on a popular book and featuring a couple of megastars (Jamie Foxx and Robert Downey Jr.), didn't do as well with fans, critics or awards judges.

'The Killing Season' looks into prominent unsolved murders

By Cassie Dresch
TV Media

Unsolved murders have always intrigued the masses. That someone could get away with the most heinous crime in society is terrifying, and there is an overwhelming desire for closure — for the families of victims, for the investigators, for the public caught up in the media attention. To this day, people still talk of Jack the Ripper, the Zodiac Killer, the Black Dahlia murder and many, many more.

Now, A&E is delving into unsolved murder cases with the help of Oscar- and Emmy-winning producer Alex Gibney. "The Killing Season" is an eight-part docuseries that follows filmmakers Joshua Zeman ("Cropsey," 2009) and Rachel Mills ("Killer Legends," 2014) as they look into the Long Island Serial Killer, an unidentified person who has murdered at least 10 sex workers over the course of 20 years. The series premieres Saturday, Nov. 5, on the cabler.

With the help of amateur web-sleuths, Zeman (who also directs the series) and Mills begin their investigation with the Long Island Serial Killer, also known as the Gilgo Beach Killer. In December 2010, police were out searching for a missing woman, Shannan Gilbert, when they stumbled upon the remains of another woman. Days later, police found the remains of three more women — all murdered and disposed of in the same way as the first. A few months later, six more sets of remains were found within a few miles of the original sites, again with the same MO.

To this day, the suspect remains at large, and that's where Zeman and Mills step in. In "The Killing Season," the pair talks to journalists, cyber-investigators and even members of the victims' families in an effort to uncover clues that could help lead to the identification of the killer (or killers, if some web theories are to be believed).

Though the series begins its search for truth and justice in Suffolk County, New York, other infamous cases also come into play, as the filmmakers try to connect the Long Island Serial Killer murders with other sex-trade-related homicides in the United States.

One of those cases is the Golden Key murders. In November 2006, the bodies of four women — Molly Dilts, Tracy Roberts, Kim Raffo and Barbara Breidor — were found face-down in a drainage ditch behind the Golden Key Motel, just outside Atlantic City. All bare-foot with their heads pointing east, it was discovered that each woman was a sex worker. Like the Gilgo Beach murders, no killer has been identified.

The other case Zeman and Mills look into is another decade-old murder, this time based out of the Daytona Beach area of Florida. From December 2005 to December 2007, four women (who, again, were all involved in the sex trade) were murdered. La-Quetta Gunther was the first victim, Julie Green the second, Iwana Patton the third and Stacey Gage the fourth. All four were shot, and the ballistics from all four bullets matched.

The goal of "The Killing Season" isn't necessarily to declare that it's the same person or persons responsible for all of these murders. Instead, it's a look at how serial killers appear to be targeting sex workers at an alarming rate, as well as how the Internet is now being used as a means to lure people to their deaths. A&E executive Elaine Frontain Bryant calls it "a perfect example of impactful storytelling that drives the cultural conversation."

Zeman and Mills aren't new to telling these kinds of true-crime stories, and have even done so together once before. In 2014, the pair produced the horror-doc "Killer Legends" for the NBCUniversal-owned cabler Chiller. Zeman wrote and directed the made-for-TV movie, and starred in it alongside Mills. The movie saw both of them tackle urban legends, investigating the origins of such folktales as the killer clown, the candyman and the babysitter/man upstairs myths.

Zeman has prior experience working with eerie and ominous topics. His 2009 crime documentary "Cropsey" was well-regarded following its debut at the Tribeca Film Festival. The movie, which was also directed and produced by Barbara Brancaccio, tells the story of the titular Cropsey, a figure from Staten Island lore who is a bogeyman-type and kidnaps misbehaving children. It evolves into an investigation into the man who is purportedly the root of the urban legend, Andre Rand. (Rand is currently serving 50 years to life in prison for kidnapping two children.)

"The Killing Season" has been a long time coming for both Zeman and Mills — for four-and-a-half years they've been hunting down evidence and interviewing people. Now, just days after Halloween, their efforts are coming to fruition. With a keen eye trained on the Gilgo Beach murders, the docuseries shines a light on some of the nation's highest-profile unsolved murders. "The Killing Season" premieres Saturday, Nov. 5, on A&E.
