HBO's new miniseries examines the fight to desegregate 1980s Yonkers

By Jacqueline Spendlove
TV Media

It's not always easy being the man in charge. While it's true that being a leader gives a person a fair amount of power, it can be a tough thing to wield — and keeping everyone beneath you happy is a near-impossible task.

In 1987, former police officer Nick Wasicsko became the youngest mayor in the history of Yonkers, N.Y., at the age of 28. In his latest HBO series, "Show Me a Hero," David Simon, creator of "The Wire" and "Treme," relates the true story of Wasicsko's fight for the desegregation of public housing in the city and its effects on him, other elected officials, activists and the citizens of Yonkers. The six-part miniseries premieres Sunday, Aug. 16, on HBO.

The show is based on journalist Lisa Belkin's 1999 non-fiction book of the same name, which examines the effects of a 1985 ruling by Judge Leonard B. Sand that 200 apartments be built in Yonkers to house poor, largely minority residents in white, middle-class areas of the city. This effectively uprooted these poorer families and deposited them into more affluent neighborhoods, many of whose residents opposed and resented their presence there.

Wasicsko was elected on a promise that he would fight the demand for desegregation, but just days before his inauguration, a federal appeals court upheld the order. Persuaded by the city's lawyers that fighting it was a lost cause, Wasicsko reversed his position and instead backed integration. The backlash from white residents was immediate and strong, and heavy fines against city council members who opposed the plan threatened to push the city to bankruptcy.

Wasicsko is portrayed in "Show Me a Hero" by Golden Globe nominee Oscar Isaac, in a rare departure from the big screen to TV. The Guatemalan-born actor has been making a name for himself recently, particularly since his title role in the critically acclaimed Coen Brothers film "Inside Llewyn Davis" (2013). He's been praised for his performance in "A Most Violent Year" (2014), in which he starred alongside Golden Globe winner Jessica Chastain, and appeared earlier this year in the creepy sci-fi flick "Ex Machina." Look for him towards the end of 2015 in "Star Wars: Episode VII - The Force Awakens" and as the title villain in "X-Men: Apocalypse," scheduled for release next spring.

For now, though, Isaac's sticking much closer to reality, and that's just the way Simon likes it.

"I find myself drawn to stories that are about people as I actually have encountered them in the world," the writer and executive producer told "The Journal News." "A lot of the entertainment world is about people who are bigger than the institutions they're in — the cop who won't take 'no,' the drug dealer who is more evil, the guy with magic powers. For me, the real was very interesting to us."

Isaac isn't the only big name in "Show Me a Hero." Oscar nominee and '90s darling Winona Ryder ("Girl, Interrupted," 1999) plays Yonkers city council president Vinni Restiano, an advocate of integration. Jim Belushi ("According to Jim") plays Wasicsko's mayoral election opponent Angelo R. Martinelli, and Alfred Molina ("Spider-Man 2," 2004) portrays city council member Henry J. Spalone. Oscar nominee Catherine Keener ("Being John Malkovich," 1999) plays Mary Dorman, one of the many East Yonkers residents who is fervently against racial integration in her neighborhood.

"I think all the characters appealed to us because they were not larger than life," Simon said in the "Journal News" interview. "They weren't smaller than life, but nor were they superheroes or rising above their moment or being more evil than required."

It's no surprise that the former journalist is drawn to reality, and Simon's shows are known to focus on the friction between those who make and enforce the laws and the ordinary people who are affected by them.

Simon began his career as a crime reporter for "The Baltimore Sun," and his experiences shadowing the Baltimore Police Department homicide unit in the late '80s served as the basis for his first book, "Homicide: A Year on the Killing Streets." This in turn was the basis for the NBC series "Homicide: Life on the Street," which Simon wrote and produced. He's described his critically acclaimed series "The Wire" as being "about the American city, and about how we live together. It's about how institutions have an effect on individuals." He also adapted Evan Wright's book "Generation Kill" into an HBO miniseries of the same name, which is based on the author's experiences as an embedded reporter at the start of the Iraq war.

For his part, Simon is far more concerned with telling a story that he feels needs to be told than he is with pulling in huge viewership numbers. If "Show Me a Hero" goes the way of his previous series, it will prove a quiet but critical success and Simon can consider his a job well done.

"Show Me a Hero" premieres its six-part run Sunday, Aug. 16, on HBO.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I heard that Donna Reed played Miss Ellie for a while on "Dallas," but I don't recall seeing her. What happened?

A: It was a real-world scandal worthy of a soap opera when Donna Reed replaced Barbara Bel Geddes as Miss Ellie Ewing in the eighth season of "Dallas."

Bel Geddes left the show a year after having heart surgery, and Reed stepped in. However, she was promptly dropped from it again in 1985 when Bel Geddes returned. Reed sued the producers and settled out of court.

Those are the facts. Now for the speculation.

Bel Geddes officially left in 1984 due to her health problems, but writer David Paulsen said in an "E! True Hollywood Story" documentary about "Dallas" that she left because the show wouldn't meet her salary demands.

"Her manager wanted more than the show felt we could afford to pay. It was a very tightly run show from a budgetary standpoint."

Furthermore, "Dallas" producer Arthur Bernard Lewis told E! that Bel Geddes decided to return not because she was healthy again, but because she was jealous.

"When she saw Donna Reed on the air, in her role, she called and said 'I want to come back.' She said, 'I can't stand to see somebody else read my lines.'"

Reed's husband, Grover Asmus, said in the "E!" special that this process was helped along by the crew, who tried to drive Reed off the show, resenting that she was replacing the beloved Bel Geddes.

Reed refused to quit, however, so the show had to fire her in the off-season.

We'll probably never know how much of this is

'Camp Cutthroat' gives cooking competitions an outdoor twist

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

That Alton Brown sure is a diabolical mastermind. "Cutthroat Kitchen," the Food Network cooking competition he hosts, really is a love-it-or-hate-it kind of affair, with a group of chefs cooking "Chopped" style while Brown pulls out one game-changing twist after another.

Well, the show that's all about bizarre twists being thrown at its competitors now has a twist of its own. "Camp Cutthroat" premiered last week, and the five-episode series is continuing Wednesday evenings.

Brown's traded in his metaphorical host's hat for a camp counselor's, and he's taken 12 chefs with as much cunning as they have cooking skills to a top-secret location deep in the wilderness. There, while braving biting mosquitoes, unpredictable weather and rustic facilities, these culinary challengers are quickly discovering that their biggest challenge isn't the location — it's each other.

In last week's premiere, while three chefs struggled to enjoy the great outdoors, Brown unleashed his diabolism onto them. Two chefs were blindfolded and given a challenge with pork and beans — a classic camping meal. Another found the answer to the age-old mystery of just what bears get up in the woods, while later a remarkably persistent rain cloud decided to hover over the proceedings.

It's incredibly over the top, but that's what's made "Cutthroat Kitchen" such a hit. At the end of the day, these chefs have to put out great food no matter what weirdness is thrown at them, and it's truly remarkable to see the skill that they employ in the kitchen — or in this case, in the wilderness.

Future episodes will see the chefs cooking while hanging from a rock wall, and cooking up breakfast atop a lookout tower and trying to hold things together while braving high winds.

Of course, there's a big reason why the chefs subject themselves to this, and that reason is as green as the wilderness in which they find themselves. "Camp Cutthroat's" ultimate winner will take home a cool $75,000 in cold, hard cash. A much better souvenir than mosquito bites, I'd say.

Strangerland

Married couple Matthew (Finnes) and Catherine (Kidman) Parker are having trouble fitting in to their new lives in a remote town deep in the Australian Outback. They mostly keep to themselves, but when their two children disappear into the surrounding wilderness just as a deadly dust storm is blowing in, the parents must team up with their neighbors. With the local cop (Weaving) leading the search through the dust-choked darkness, it soon becomes clear that something sinister has happened to the two youths, and the locals begin to turn against the outsiders in their midst.

Director: Kim Farrant. Stars: Nicole Kidman, Hugo Weaving, Joseph Fiennes, Maddison Brown, Sean Keenan. 2015. 112 min. Drama.

Little Boy

Pepper (Salvati) is a smaller-than-normal six-year-old boy whose short stature has always been a source of mockery from his peers. His faith is strong, though, and he can often cause miracles to happen when he prays to God. When war breaks out with Japan in 1941, his father (Rapaport) enlists to serve in the Pacific, and Pepper prays harder than he ever has for a miracle to bring him home. His priest, however, tells him that his prayers won't work if he holds any hatred in his heart, and that his hatred for the Japanese that his father is fighting is disconnecting him from God. At the priest's urging, Pepper starts to befriend the only Japanese man in town (Tagawa), a man now universally feared and reviled by the locals.

Director: Alejandro Monteverde. Stars: Emily Watson, Kevin James, Jakob Salvati, Michael Rapaport, Cary-Hiroyuki Tagawa. 2015. 106 min. Drama.

true. We're left with second- and third-hand accounts because Reed died in 1986 and Bel Geddes in 2005. It's sad to think that this whole scandal was tied to Bel Geddes's poor health, while in the end it was Reed who wouldn't even have survived her contract.

The intrigue, the guessed-at motivations and the sad twist at the end all make this story worthy of one of the most beloved prime-time soaps in TV history.

Q: Is Adam Baldwin from "The Last Ship" related to the famous Baldwin brothers?

A: No he's not, and he'd probably resent the suggestion.

Adam Baldwin, a mainstay of sci-fi TV who has appeared on "Chuck," "Firefly" and now on TNT's "The Last Ship," is also a mainstay of the online political conversation, much like fellow actor (but not family member) Alec Baldwin.

Indeed, Alec and Adam got into a bit of an Internet feud in 2012 after Alec made a flippant joke on Twitter about the death of right-wing commentator Andrew Breitbart. Adam jumped to his late friend's defense, and a Twitter war began between the two actors and their fans (Twitter being a public forum, anyone can jump in).

Alec, the eldest and most famous of four acting Baldwin brothers — the others being (in order of age) Daniel, William and Stephen — is a well-known leftist commentator online. Adam is fast making a name for himself as a digital voice for the right.

Adam might also resent the question of their relation because he hears it so often. The Baldwin brothers came to fame in the '80s — indeed, Alec was one of the biggest leading men of the time — when Adam was struggling to make his own name. As a result, every online biography of Adam seems to include some mention that he's not part of the dynastic clan.

Indeed, since we're dealing in the online realm here, if you search Adam Baldwin's name on Google, it automatically offers the alternate search "Is Adam Baldwin related to Alec."

WARNING OF ABUSE OF POWER

The term "opioid" refers to a group of pain-relieving drugs that are derived from opium and synthetic versions that work in a similar manner. Drugs such as hydrocodone (Vicodin) and oxycodone (Oxycontin, Percocet, Percodan) are the most widely used of these drugs, which are prescribed to treat severe, acute pain that follows surgery or serious injury. These drugs, which also exert a powerful psychological effect, are among the most abused opioids. As a result of taking oral opioids beyond the period of acute pain, patients can develop physical or psychological dependence and addiction that can lead to overdosing. With this in mind, patients are strongly urged to follow their prescribing physicians' guidance in gradually tapering off their dosages.

Only under a physician's supervision can opioids be used safely with other drugs. Typically, they should not be used with other substances that depress the central nervous system, such as alcohol, antihistamines, barbiturates, or general anesthetics. For all your prescription and health care needs, please call PERROTTA'S SUPER DRUG. For more information, please call 978-682-2557. Our pharmacy is located at 292 Prospect Street.

HINT: The American Academy of Pain Medicine's guidelines for opioid therapy provide recommendations for using long-term opioid therapy safely without developing tolerance or addiction.

Some bad news for Donald Trump here. I read that the controversial remarks he's made since he began his presidential campaign have cost his brand as much as $80 million. You can tell things are rough for Trump, 'cause today he had to wipe his mouth with a napkin instead of a $20.

Trump's campaign has surprised a lot of people, because he's actually starting to lead in the polls. He even raised about $100,000 in donations during the second quarter. Which raises an important question: who is giving Donald Trump money? That's like giving your money to a pile of money.
