President Michener (Mark Moses, "Desperate Housewives") faces mounting pressure from regional leaders in a new episode of "The Last Ship," airing Sunday, July 10, on TNT. Meanwhile, Chandler (Eric Dane, "Grey's Anatomy") finds himself in a difficult spot. The post-apocalyptic drama follows the crew of a ship as they dedicate themselves to saving humanity after a deadly virus obliterates much of the human population of Earth.

'The Last Ship's' third season chugs along

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

The end is nigh — at least on television. Apocalyptic programs are having a moment. Whether it's a zombie apocalypse a la AMC's "The Walking Dead" or a mysterious viral outbreak as in CW's "Containment," the end of the world has viewers on the edge of their seats.

A topic usually reserved for the big screen, or — at the very least — TV movies, is now popping up just about everywhere and continuing on for season after season. TNT's answer to the trendy post-apocalyptic genre is one of television's current hits: a new episode of "The Last Ship" airs Sunday, July 10. Based on William Brinkley's 1988 novel of the same name, the drama follows the crew of the fictional destroyer USS Nathan James as they scramble to save humanity in the wake of a devastating outbreak that wiped out most of the world's population.

Michael Bay ("Transformers," 2007) — known for his big-budget action movies — serves as the executive producer, which explains the show's fast pace and big-screen feel. Eric Dane ("Grey's Anatomy") leads the cast as Tom Chandler, former commanding officer of the Nathan James who was promoted to chief of naval operations by President Michener (Mark Moses, "Desperate Housewives") at the end of season 2. In the beginning, he worked with Dr. Rachel Scott (Rhona Mitra, "Boston Legal"), a paleomicrobiologist who created a cure for the pandemic, which they are now distributing throughout the world.

This season, Mike Slattery (Adam Baldwin, "Firefly") took the helm of the Nathan James as captain, having been promoted in the season 2 finale. Meanwhile, lieutenants Danny Green (Travis Van Winkle, "Transformers," 2007) and Kara Foster (Marissa Neitling, "San Andreas," 2015) were promoted to parents at the end of season 2 as they welcomed their baby into the world.

Van Winkle talked about how things have changed for his character at this year's WonderCon, speaking of his struggle with being away from his new family.

"As a father this year, it's been an interesting journey because, like a lot of military personnel, they have to go on missions and they're away from their families, and it's a very real story that a lot of people live," he explained.

Fans of the series will see a few new faces in season 3 as well. Bridget Regan ("Jane the Virgin") climbs aboard as Sasha Cooper, an undercover agent sent to China to help the U.S. with the rebuilding process. She'll often deal with China's new leader, Peng (Fernando Chien, "Red Dawn," 2012), who took over China in the wake of the outbreak. Dichen Lachman ("Aquamarine," 2006) joins the team as skilled helicopter pilot Jesse, and Elisabeth Röhm ("Law & Order") appears as Allison Shaw, a brilliant chief of staff to President Michener.

According to The Hollywood Reporter, season 2's finale was intentionally open-ended as showrunners Steven Kane and Hank Steinberg wanted to entice viewers to want a third season. Their strategy paid off, and TNT renewed "The Last Ship" for another season in August 2015.

However, fans had to wait a little longer than expected to see the season 3 premiere, and with good reason. Although the opener had originally been scheduled for June 12, producers were sensitive to the victims and families affected by the Orlando Pulse nightclub shooting and postponed the season premiere until June 19 because it included a scene involving a shooting at a nightclub. The two-hour premiere set things in motion for season 3, which promises to be a good one. In 2015, Entertainment Weekly touted the second season as more interesting than the first, which suggests the show has not yet reached its peak, despite waning ratings. Some may wonder where the show might go from here, now that there's a cure for the virus, but there's still plenty of potential for intrigue as Peng appears to be withholding the cure from some areas. There's also talk of a mutation of the virus, which may be resistant to Dr. Scott's cure.

Those kinds of twists may be enough to draw more viewers to "The Last Ship" this season. The show could use some help, as viewership dropped to just under three million average viewers for season 2, compared to around four million for season 1. Judging by the sheer number of apocalyptic dramas on the airwaves, there's a real market for the genre. After all, "The Last Ship" isn't the only such series reeling in viewers. The CW has a couple of them with "Containment" and the futuristic nuclear disaster series "The 100." NBC had a hit last summer with its alien-invasion series "Colony," and CBS currently boasts one of the summer's hottest series with "Zoo."

All of those series pose some serious competition, but in addition to a fabulous cast and fast-paced plot, "The Last Ship" also features some realistic sets. The show is filmed in and around San Diego aboard the USS Dewey, which stands in for the USS Nathan James, as well as the USS Halsey and the USS Iowa museum ship.

They're all compelling reasons to watch "The Last Ship" week after week. In this week's episode, President Michener faces pressure from regional leaders, and Chandler's mission becomes even more complicated. Tune in to TNT to find out what happens next in a new episode of "The Last Ship," airing Sunday, July 10.

Baking with Brits

'The Great British Baking Show' heats up the ovens again

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

Move over, "MasterChef." Fox's culinary juggernaut isn't the only contest looking to find the best amateur in the kitchen this summer: PBS has a horse in the race, too. "The Great British Baking Show" premiered its third season July 1 and is continuing Friday evenings all summer.

It's a show that feels nice and familiar for fans of other amateur cooking competitions. A group of amateur but skilled home bakers are brought together and put through their paces with a series of increasingly difficult challenges that test their skill, knowledge and technique. Two judges taste and critique, someone gets sent home and, in the end, a winner is crowned. What sets this one apart from its contemporaries, though, is the British charm that its presenters and hosts bring to the whole affair. Sue Perkins and Mel Giedroyc were already well known as a comedic duo across the pond before "The Great British Baking Show" was even a glimmer in its creators' eyes. Their show, "Light Lunch" on Britain's Channel 4, was a popular talk show, and they've each found independent success as well.

Sue Perkins, Paul Hollywood, Mary Berry and Mel Giedroyc as seen in "The Great British Baking Show"

The duo brings a beautiful combination of wit and humor to the flour-coated proceedings, but of course, all of that lightheartedness has to have a balance. Luckily, the competition's two judges provide the necessary gravitas.

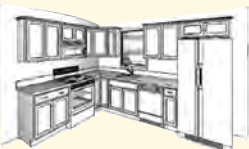

Food writer Mary Berry sure knows her stuff. With more than 70 published cookery books published to her name, she's not one to be trifled with in the kitchen; she's even been recognized by Queen Elizabeth II for her contribution to culinary rights in her country.

Sitting next to Berry is Paul Hollywood. Baking is in this man's blood: his father was a baker, and he has followed in his sire's footsteps to become one of the most recognized artisan bakers in the U.K. He's a master of bread: he's written a book about it ("100 Great Breads"), hosted a TV show about it ("Paul Hollywood's Bread" on BBC Two) and even created what was said to be the most expensive bread in Britain — an almond and Roquefort sourdough.

Video releases

The Divergent Series: Allegiant

At last, the dictatorial leader of the walled city of Chicago is dead, and Evelyn (Watts) is in charge of the populace. As she consolidates her hold on power, her son, Four (James), and series heroine Tris Prior (Woodley) venture beyond the city's protective walls. After braving and barely surviving the harsh, desolate wasteland that surrounds Chicago, the duo finally comes to another city where they meet its leader, the charismatic but enigmatic David (Daniels), who agrees to help them return peace to Chicago. His motives, however, may not be entirely pure.

Director: Robert Schwentke.
 Stars: Shailene Woodley, Theo James, Naomi Watts, Jeff Daniels, Octavia Spencer, Zoë Kravitz. 2016. 120 min. Action.

Green Room

The members of a small punk band, "The Ain't Rights," are touring the beautiful Pacific Northwest when a local radio host secures a gig for them at a nightclub. When the band arrives, they discover that it's a bar for neo-Nazis, but they decide to play anyway and put on a successful show. At the end of the night, as they're preparing to leave, they witness a grisly murder in the club's green room. Now the only witnesses to the horrific crime, the bandmates end up in a fight for their lives to escape the green room, get out of the club and contact the police.

Director: Jeremy Saulnier.
 Stars: Anton Yelchin, Joe Cole, Alia Shawkat, Callum Turner, Mark Webber, Imogen Poots, Patrick Stewart. 2015. 95 min. Horror.

Miracles from Heaven

Anna Beam (Rogers) is a 10-year-old girl with a chronic and incurable illness. While climbing a tree, a branch gives way and Anna plunges dangerously to the ground, although much to her mother's (Garner) shock, she emerges from the ordeal with only a few scratches. Even more surprisingly, when doctors examine her after the fall, they can find no signs of the incurable illness that has ruled her life for so long, leading the Beam family to conclude that a miracle has happened.

Director: Patricia Riggen. Stars: Jennifer Garner, Kylie Rogers, Martin Henderson, Brighton Sharbino, Courtney Fanster. 2016. 109 min. Drama.

Shailene Woodley stars in "The Divergent Series: Allegiant"

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I know singer Lily Allen and actor Alfie Allen are brother and sister, and I think she even sang a song about him. Is anyone else in their family famous?

A: Certainly Lily and Alfie are the most famous of the Allen clan, but showbiz is in their blood. The pop songstress and the "Game of Thrones" star (Alfie plays Theon Greyjoy, for those who don't know) are the children of actor-comedian Keith Allen and film producer Alison Owen.

Keith has had roles in such major films as "Trainspotting" (1996) and "The Others" (2001), but is best known for his comedy career. As a longtime member of the comedy troupe The Comic Strip, he was a regular in the BBC series "The Comic Strip Presents," as was his brother, Kevin.

Alison Owen is most recently known for co-producing 2013's "Saving Mr. Banks," earning herself the American Film Institute's Movie of the Year award for her trouble. She also won an Emmy and a Western Heritage Award for co-producing the 2010 telefilm "Temple Grandin." Along with fellow mega-producers Tim Bevan and Eric Fellner, she was nominated for an Oscar for the critically beloved 1998 biopic "Elizabeth."

As you say, Lily Allen was family-oriented enough to write a song about her little brother Alfie, though it wasn't particularly flattering. The song, which appeared on Lily's debut solo album, 2006's "Alright, Still," describes her brother as a layabout who just stays home smoking marijuana and playing video games. If this seems a little harsh, she assures us in the chorus that, "I only say it 'cause I care."

In an interview with music site Pitchfork.com, she further defended the song. "When I wrote 'Alfie,' nobody really knew who I was. At first he was really upset about it, because he thought that I was just pointing out all of his bad points and attacking him. I thought it was really flattering [Laughs]. I thought he'd be really, really happy because it proved to him how much I loved him."

In a speech, Donald Trump said thousands of people in the United States are "sick with hate." Then Trump said: "I'd like to thank them for their support."

Donald Trump has called for a ban on all immigration to the United States. Of course, Trump said the ban would be lifted if he ever needs a new wife.

Today is Donald Trump's 70th birthday. For the occasion, Donald Trump's friends got together and said: "Wait — why are we friends with Donald Trump?"

Bernie Sanders is set to meet with Hillary Clinton this evening. Bernie said the meeting will give Hillary one last opportunity to bow out gracefully.

Two thieves stole $16,000 worth of iPhones from a New York Apple store by dressing as Apple "Geniuses." Police are on the lookout for two actual geniuses.

The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon

In a video for Father's Day, the children of NFL players Drew Brees and Antonio Brown list a bunch of things they like about their dads. Meanwhile, Tom Brady's kids just complain about him deflating their bounce-house.

Last night, the Cavs beat the Warriors to tie the series at three games apiece, and Steph Curry seemed really frustrated. In fact, he even got ejected after he got mad and threw his mouth guard into the crowd. Curry later said he was sorry, but the guy was like: "Sorry? After I sell this on eBay I'll never have to work again!"

The Late Show With Stephen Colbert

Last night, the last primary was held in Washington, D.C. The primaries being over reminds me what my brother used to say when I was a kid: "I'm going to keep punching you in the face, but it will feel so good when it's over."

It is now being reported that the Democratic National Committee was hacked by the Russians. Hey, maybe they know where Hillary's emails are!

While they were in the DNC cyber matrix, the Russians apparently stole opposition research on Donald Trump. Russia, what are you doing? If you want damaging information about Donald Trump, just wait for him to talk!

The British are about to vote on whether to exit the European Union. They call it the "Brexit," which, in America, of course, is the meal between breakfast and exiting breakfast.

The Late Late Show With James Corden

Today is Donald Trump's birthday! Trump may have turned 70, but his views about women are 150 years old.

I imagine it's tough to get Trump a gift. What do you get the man who hates everything?

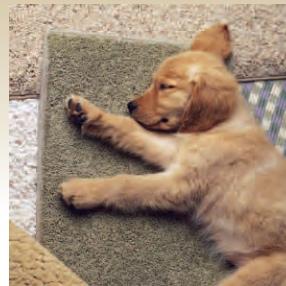

At Trump's party, they had cake, they had party favors and they played some really
