A new episode of 'Drunk History' welcomes more celebrities

By Jacqueline Spendlove
TV Media

Any designated driver who's been trapped in a rambling, disjointed conversation with a completely inebriated passenger might be surprised to hear of a TV series that's found great success in rambling, disjointed retellings of historical events from a completely inebriated narrator.

That, however, is precisely what "Drunk History" has managed to do. The show that began as a series of Funny or Die online shorts born of an actual drunken discussion has become a half-hour Comedy Central mainstay, now in its fourth season. Catch a new episode of "Drunk History" when it airs Tuesday, Nov. 1, on Comedy Central.

According to "Drunk History" lore, the idea for the show came to co-creator Derek Waters ("Hall Pass," 2011) during a boozy night spent with friend and "New Girl" star Jake Johnson. The two were discussing the death of singer Otis Redding and, according to Waters, he envisioned Redding telling the story in Johnson's words, moving his lips to what was being drunkenly spouted off.

The image, as it turned out, translated to the screen to great effect. Each episode of "Drunk History" recounts events from American history as narrated by a thoroughly soused comedian. The cast acts out what's being said, while lip-syncing the narration — complete with anachronisms, stammering, hiccups, curses and mistakes.

The more poorly the story is told, the funnier the reenactment comes across, from one narrator mistakenly referring to Richard Dreyfuss ("Jaws," 1975) while recounting a story about abolitionist Frederick Douglass, to another forgetting the names of pretty much all the reindeer in his recitation of "'Twas the Night Before Christmas" (unless I'm the one in the wrong and Santa does, in fact,

Will Ferrell guest stars in "Drunk History"

have reindeer named Shouter and Blinsen). Still another narrator needed to pause the story — not once, but twice — to, shall we say, void his system of eight vodka cranberries.

Part of the draw of the show is the big names involved. Since the early web series days, the ever-changing cast has included countless celebrities and Hollywood A-listers. The episode detailing the friendship between Abraham Lincoln and Frederick Douglass features Will Ferrell ("Anchorman: The Legend of Ron Burgundy," 2004) — who also co-produces the Comedy Central series — Don Cheadle ("Hotel Rwanda," 2004) and Zooey Deschanel ("New Girl"), and went on to win the award for Best American Short at the 2010 Sundance Film Festival.

Since moving to Comedy Central, the series has enjoyed the antics of Jack Black ("School of Rock," 2003), Winona Ryder ("Girl, Interrupted," 1999), Bill Hader ("Saturday Night Live"), Bob Odenkirk ("Better Call Saul"), Owen ("Wedding Crashers," 2005) and Luke Wilson ("Old School," 2003), John Lithgow ("3rd Rock From the Sun"), Greg Kinnear ("As Good as It Gets," 1997) ... the list goes on and on and on.

For the most part, each episode has focused on a city and related a number of historical events and figures associated with it. The show has looked at the Lincoln assassination and the Watergate scandal in Washington, D.C., the kidnapping of Patty Hearst in San Francisco, the story of Benedict Arnold in Philadelphia, and the activities of Bugsy Siegel in Las Vegas. While major people and events are certainly portrayed, the show's research team digs deep for lesser-known stories as well, so there's more than just the pieces of history everyone is taught in school.

"I think a lot of these stories have vanished, and they're about an injustice that has happened," said Duncan Trussell, one of this season's sloshed narrators, at an Awardsline Emmy screening back in June. "I think that underneath the intoxication and slurring, we've summoned up a soul that's getting a little bit of vengeance in the form of having their story re-announced to the world where it's mostly been dormant."

More recently, the show has branched into broader themes, and that's where things have landed for the current season. Season 4 kicked off with "Great Escapes," which looked at Timothy Leary's (Thomas Lennon, "The Odd Couple") flight from prison, the Devil's Island penal colony, and Titanic survivor Charles Joughin (Chris Parnell, "21 Jump Street," 2012).

"It's not just Abraham Lincoln stories," said Waters at this year's San Diego Comic-Con. "It's more like, 'Oh, this is a great story that more people need to know about,' like the Stonewall riots ... good stories that aren't necessarily going to be in history books, but people should know about."

The upcoming episode, titled "Siblings," sees Katherine Wright help her brothers build an airplane, the Kopp sisters fight to protect their home, and the Fox sisters' role in the creation and spread of Spiritualism. Elizabeth Olsen ("Godzilla," 2014), Jason Ritter ("Another Period"), Rachel Bilson ("Hart of Dixie"), Sarah Ramos ("Parenthood"), Sugar Lyn Beard ("50/50," 2011) and Jenna Fischer ("The Office") all lend their talents to the episode. Seriously, never has earnest drunken blathering been so entertaining. Check out the newest episode of "Drunk History" when it airs Tuesday, Nov. 1, on Comedy Central.

Giada De Laurentiis returns with more helpful holiday hints

Giada De Laurentiis in "Giada's Holiday Handbook"

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

October is over, and I think we all know what that means: the holiday season has arrived.

Thanksgiving is only a few weeks away, and Christmas only a month after that, so the time to start planning those holiday get-togethers is now. Luckily, Food Network's own holiday expert is ready to advise and inspire with her own party tips and treats.

The second helpful season of "Giada's Holiday Handbook" premieres Sunday, Oct. 30, on Food Network, with some last-minute Halloween ideas. "Everyday Italian's" Giada De Laurentiis wrote the book on holiday entertaining, and although Halloween may not inspire the peace, joy and togetherness that Thanksgiving and Christmas do, that doesn't mean that it can't bring people together.

In the premiere episode, Giada hosts an open house for the neighborhood kids and their families. Of course, anyone going to a get-together at a Food Network celebrity's home expects great food, and Giada doesn't disappoint.

For those of us who weren't lucky enough to get invitations to the party (I assume that mine was lost in the mail), Giada at least walks us through her spooky menu and gives helpful advice for preparing similar dishes at our own Halloween parties. Items on the menu include spooky chicken finger sammies, tasty coconut "bones" and scarily sumptuous witches' brooms.

Once Halloween is behind us, Giada moves on to the classic cocktail party. In the Nov. 6 episode, she hosts some friends for a vintage gathering, complete with throwback recipes with a modern twist, such as bacon onion dip, a Korean shrimp cocktail and a grown-ups-only gelatin mold.

Plus, if you missed last season's episodes full of helpful holiday advice and recipes, or even if you want a refresher, Giada's got you covered. Last season's first episode airs Saturday, Nov. 5, with the rest of the season's enlightening episodes to follow as the big day approaches — check your local Food Network listings for exact times and dates.

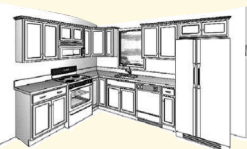

Giada De Laurentiis is so full of holiday advice and suggestions that it couldn't be contained in a single TV season.

Star Trek Beyond

When a small escape pod and its sole occupant are recovered by the starship Enterprise after drifting out of an uncharted section of space, Capt. James T. Kirk (Pine) and his crew embark on a rescue mission to save the survivors of its ship of origin. When they arrive in orbit around the hidden planet the ship is purportedly on, the Enterprise is suddenly attacked by a massive ship armed with incredibly destructive weapons, and Kirk is forced to issue an order to abandon ship. With the ship's officers scattered across the planet's surface and most of the surviving crew enslaved by their villainous attacker, Krall (Elba), Kirk must rely on his wits and quick thinking to save his friends and stop a terrible plot that could result in the deaths of millions.

On the way to the birthday party, a sudden accident leaves him in a coma, and he wakes up with his consciousness somehow in the body of the cat. When the pet store owner warns him that he has only a week to change his ways and connect with his family, he tries to alert his loved ones to his plight before he ends up trapped as a cat for the rest of his life.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: The last episode of "Castle" was terrible — many people I know didn't even notice that the end was supposed to be seven years later. The network needs to bring the show back where they left off, with them lying on the floor, and hopefully a neighbor or Castle's daughter would find them.

A: There's a lot to unpack in your question, but let me start with the basics: "Castle" is absolutely finished; no last-minute, heroic renewals are forthcoming. The actors have moved on to other things, and the head writers have written a note to fans and the crew, saying, "We will miss you profoundly."

In fact, putting a definitive end on the show is what that much-maligned last scene was all about.

Hollywood Reporter TV critic Daniel Fienberg called "Castle's" series finale "hilariously bad," and called the final, seven-years-later scene "a weak Plan B ending." And he's right — at least about the "Plan B" part.

Immediately before the flash-forward scene, Castle and Beckett are lying together, wounded, seemingly on the brink of death. A number of reports say that if ABC had renewed the show for a ninth season, this is how the episode would have ended. Stana Katic, who played Beckett, was known to be leaving the show, and Entertainment Weekly, for one, speculated that had the show been renewed, the new season would have revealed that she died in Castle's arms. But it wasn't renewed, so the writers had to go with an ending that gave fans some closure (however unsatisfying).

Fans might get more closure by following the lead actors on to their various new projects. Series star Nathan Fillion (who played Rick Castle) has a second season of his popular web series "Con Man" coming up, and he's also guest starring in the new season of "Modern Family" (another long-running show on ABC). If that sounds like a busy schedule, Katic has appeared in a whopping three films since "Castle" ended — indie films "Lost in Florence" and "The Rendezvous," and the Lifetime telefilm "Sister Cities."

Things are going kind of rough for Donald Trump right now. This weekend, a person or persons spray painted graffiti all over Donald Trump's new Washington, D.C., hotel. Police have narrowed their list of suspects down to "50 percent of the country." So they're not sure.

Donald Trump's charity, the Trump Foundation, is no longer allowed to accept donations in New York. This is really bad news for anyone who thought, "I'd like to make sure my money gets to the people who really need it. I know, I'll funnel it through Donald Trump!"

Cleveland Cavaliers star LeBron James has endorsed Hillary Clinton for president. Experts say LeBron's endorsement will help Hillary Clinton win in Ohio and lose in Florida.

The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon

We're just four weeks away from Halloween: people pretending to be somebody else, going door to door for handouts. Or, as that's also called, running for president.

Yesterday, LeBron James wrote an op-ed in which he endorsed Hillary Clinton. LeBron says he and Hillary are all about the same thing: taking forever to finally win something.

Lady Gaga told People magazine that her new album was influenced by the men in her life. Taylor Swift was like, "Hey! Stay in your lane, pal."

On Friday, Arnold Schwarzenegger was stopped in Germany by a police officer for riding a bicycle through a train station. Schwarzenegger may have gone unnoticed if he hadn't been frantically ringing the bell and shouting: "Get out of the way if you want to live!"

The Late Show With Stephen Colbert

Over the weekend, three pages of Donald Trump's 1995 tax return were leaked, revealing that he declared a $916 million loss from his three Atlantic City casinos. That's right. Donald Trump lost money on casinos. You know what they say: "The house always loses."

The Late Late Show With James Corden

Over the weekend, Donald Trump's private tax documents were leaked to the New York Times, showing that in 1995 he posted a loss of $916 million. The only people with a more embarrassing loss in 1995 were the prosecution team in the O.J. Simpson trial.

Trump lost $1 billion. Right now, Gary Busey is like: "Hold up, wait — didn't you fire me on 'Celebrity Apprentice' for losing the Snapple challenge?"

Jimmy Kimmel Live

Earlier tonight, you may have seen (though you probably didn't) the vice-presidential debate between Tim Kaine and Mike Pence, two mild-mannered and well-groomed white men selected by Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump to make you hate them less.

[The vice-presidential debate] was like watching a glass of whole milk do battle with a jar of low-calorie mayonnaise.

[Libertarian candidate] Gary Johnson has had a rough few weeks. First, he didn't know that Aleppo was the center of the Syrian refugee crisis, then he couldn't name a single foreign leader he likes, and now, Gary did an interview with the New York Times yesterday and couldn't seem to come up with the name of the leader of North Korea. The reporter asked him: "Do you know the name of North Korea's leader?" He said "I do." And then refused to say the

Late Night With Seth Meyers

The first and only vice-presidential debate of this election season was held tonight, and it was pretty much the same as the debate I had with my wife about painting the foyer: "Do we want eggshell or ivory?"

Kentucky officials recently announced that they discovered more than 5,600 marijuana plants in a corn field. Or, to put it another way, officials found a little bit of corn in a marijuana field.
