Much-lauded "Billions" stars Paul Giamatti ("Sideways," 2004) and Damian Lewis ("Homeland") return for a sophomore season of the Showtime drama, which also stars Malin Akerman ("Watchmen," 2009) and Maggie Siff ("Sons of Anarchy"). Last season's game of cat and mouse ended in an explosive confrontation between the brash U.S. attorney (Giamatti) and the hedge fund billionaire (Lewis), and the latter is out for revenge in season 2. "Billions" returns Sunday, Feb. 19, on Showtime.

Battle between high finance and power politics continues

By Jacqueline Spendlove
TV Media

I know, I know — you're getting utterly bombarded with news about the exploits of certain filthy-rich white men. Don't let that turn you off "Billions," though. True, the Showtime drama is driven by, well, the exploits of filthy-rich white men, but it's also smart, entertaining and, blessedly, fictional. Led by the much-lauded Paul Giamatti ("Sideways," 2004) and Damian Lewis ("Homeland"), the second season of "Billions" debuts Sunday, Feb. 19, on Showtime.

Last year, 12 episodes of cat-and-mouse in the world of high finance and power politics ended in an explosive confrontation between brash U.S. Attorney Chuck Rhoades (Giamatti) and self-made hedge fund billionaire Bobby "Axe" Axelrod (Lewis). Chuck is among the most powerful prosecutors in the country, and when he's tipped to a case of insider trading connected to Axelrod in the series pilot, he launches into what could be a career-defining investigation.

Career-defining maybe, but it's anything but simple. Ever aware of his blue-collar beginnings, Axe is generous, charismatic and a much-loved member of the community. A 9/11 survivor, he pays the first year of college tuition for all of the children of his former colleagues who were killed in the attacks. He has two darling kids and a beautiful wife, Lara (Malin Akerman, "Watchmen," 2009), who has a similarly humble background. Though we learn that he's definitely not above board, on the outside, Axe is the picture of a model citizen.

Making the situation even more complicated is Chuck's wife, Wendy (Maggie Siff, "Sons of Anarchy"), who has close ties to both men, and her own stake in Axe's firm. A sharp-minded psychiatrist, Wendy has worked with Axe from the start, helping him build Axe Capital from the ground up. She now has a lucrative career as the firm's in-house psychiatrist and performance coach, working closely with Axe, who recognizes her as a valuable asset and confidante. For Chuck, bringing down Axe Capital would be to bring down the company in which his own wife is heavily invested.

Much of the show's freshman season focused on the war the two men waged on one another, as Axe sought to expand his empire ever further and Chuck fought to expose Axe's financial corruption. While the conflict began with Chuck going after Axe, the latter is now out for revenge — and, as we know, he has the resources to achieve it.

Season 2 sees a power shift as Chuck falls under investigation for his questionable methods and conduct, and struggles to hold on to both his office and his family. Additionally, Chuck and Axe alike fight to get Wendy back, after she walked away from both of them at the end of last season.

"One of the interesting things about this show is the constant shifting of power dynamics," said Giamatti in a Showtime promo. "Everyone's in some kind of jeopardy."

"What's becoming clear is there's one castle, and there's going to be one king," added Lewis in a related video.

Season 2 brings both new and familiar faces to "Billions." Along with the core cast, David Costabile ("Breaking Bad") returns as Mike Wagner, Axe's apple-polishing right-hand man and the COO of Axe Capital. Chuck's own pointman is Bryan Connerty (Toby Leonard Moore, "John Wick," 2014), a chief assistant U.S. attorney who is a match for Chuck in his fervor for putting bad guys behind bars. Condola Rashad ("Money Monster," 2015) plays Kate Sacker, an ambitious young assistant district attorney with an Ivy League background. We saw some sparks fly between Kate and Bryan last year, and fans are looking forward to their relationship being fleshed out in season 2.

Also this season, Mary-Louise Parker of "Weeds" fame makes a one-off appearance as brilliant strategist George Minchak, and actor-writer Danny Strong ("Gilmore Girls") has a recurring role as "stylish and smooth hedge fund whale" Todd Krakow, who becomes yet another thorn in Axe's side. "Zoo's" James Wolk adds to the pile of fat cats as tech billionaire Craig Heidecker.

Asia Kate Dillon ("Orange Is the New Black") has a particularly noteworthy role this season. Dillon joins the "Billions" cast as Taylor Mason, an exceptional new intern at Axe Capital who, like Dillon, identifies as gender non-binary. It's a groundbreaking role; Taylor is the first gender non-binary character to be played by an actor of the same identification in a major TV series.

With the growing cry for more diversity on television, the character is certainly a feather in "Billions'" cap, though, as co-creators and executive producers

Brian Koppelman and David Levien told The Huffington Post, the creation of Taylor was simply "an organic process," and not a deliberate attempt to make a statement.

"The character needed to be exceptionally gifted in many ways. And then, having an awareness of the world, both inside and outside of finance, we decided to make gender identity a part of who Taylor is," they said. "Because of the story that flowed from this character, and because Asia is portraying them, we are thrilled we did."

There's a lot set to unfold in "Billions" in season 2. Watch the season premiere when it airs Sunday, Feb. 19, on Showtime.

'Chopped' everywhere: 'Junior' is another facet of venerable series

Daniel Churchill, Marcus Samuelsson and Allison Williams join host Ted Allen and contestants of "Chopped Junior"

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

When it comes to the TV dial, Food Network rules over a vast cooking empire. Its daytime programming is filled with how-to shows, while the prime-time slots are all about culinary competition.

If there's one show that's the jewel in Food Network's empire, though, it must be "Chopped." The venerable cooking competition premiered back in ancient times — 2009 — and has remained pretty much the same ever since, with only a few nips and tucks here and there over the years.

With great success has come a great number of spinoffs, specials and shows that follow a similar format to "Chopped." Take "Chopped Junior," for one. The fifth season of this pint-sized cooking competition just got underway earlier this month, with its format that's almost a cookie-cutter copy of the grown-up version.

Four accomplished home cooks enter the competition at the outset of each episode, and have to cook a series of dishes using the four ingredients found in a closed basket on their workstations — ingredients that they haven't seen before. Then, the clock starts ticking down until they have to present their culinary creations to a panel of discerning judges.

This week's episode, airing Tuesday, Feb. 21, on Food Network, is titled "Heads Will Roll," a name that should make it pretty clear what sort of thing is waiting for the kids in the appetizer round's basket. In the entrée round, the kids must deal with a cute candy, and for the dessert round, it's vegetables throwing them a culinary curvball.

Of course, shrinking "Chopped" down a few inches isn't the only way that Food Network has expanded on its winning format. "Guy's Grocery Games," "Cutthroat Kitchen" and "Cooks vs. Cons" may all be their own unique shows, but the "Chopped" DNA is definitely there, and even the many baking competitions on the channel have nearly 400 episodes of "Chopped" to look back on for guidance. That's not bad for a simple cooking competition. "Chopped's" smaller-sized sibling is currently airing its fifth season Tuesday nights on Food Network.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison

TV Media

Q: Why did the show "Moonlight" end on CBS in 2007?

A: A combination of reasons led to CBS's vampire drama "Moonlight" being canceled: Weak ratings, tough competition and the awkward case of "Jericho." No one of them would have been enough to kill it alone (vampires, along with their shows, being famously difficult to put down), but together they amounted to a stake through "Moonlight's" heart.

Its ratings were not terrible, but they were lower than the shows airing before ("Ghost Whisperer") and afterwards ("Numbers"). That's usually a bad sign.

Mentioning those shows brings to mind the fact that CBS had a heck of a schedule in the late '00s. All three CSIs were going strong, as were fellow procedurals "NCIS," "Cold Case" and "Criminal Minds." A little show called "The Big Bang Theory" was just entering its second season, building on the sitcom success started three years earlier with "How I Met

Your Mother." Also, reality shows "The Amazing Race," "Survivor" and "Big Brother" were still in their prime. That's a pretty tough schedule for a new show to squeeze into.

Adding to that, CBS had just recently shown a surprising amount of patience with a rookie show and been burned for it. When word got out that "Moonlight" might get canceled, its incredibly devoted fans organized a number of campaigns, including a charmingly innovative blood drive in the show's name, to push for a renewal. Unfortunately, the network had gone through the same thing the previous year with freshman series "Jericho": After CBS canceled it in 2007, rabid fans organized such a large save-the-show campaign that the network changed its mind and renewed it. But the ratings only got worse, so less than a year later, CBS had to go through the ignominy of canceling it a second time.

Over the weekend, 750,000 protesters attended the Women's March in downtown Los Angeles. The last time this many women gathered in downtown L.A., it was to testify against Bill Cosby.

There were marches across all seven continents, including Antarctica. To be fair to Trump, the protest in Antarctica was just the March of the Penguins.

The White House has admitted that Donald Trump did not write his inauguration speech. The speech was written late last Thursday by a disgruntled postal worker.

The Oscar nominations came out today, and the movie "La La Land" got 14 nominations. However, that's only because three to five million undocumented immigrants voted illegally.

It's come out that Donald Trump signed an executive order to call his inauguration day "A National Day of Patriotic Devotion." That was his second choice. His first was: "A Trumpful Day of Trumptastic Trumpiness."

President Trump announced he will nominate a new Supreme Court Justice sometime next week. Trump said: "I just need a few more days to come up with someone completely unqualified." It's going to be Scott Baio.

Senior aides to Donald Trump say they try to keep him from watching cable TV. And that's partly because the news channels upset him, but mostly because he's now bought over 300 Nutri-bullets.

The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon

Even though our studio can only hold 200 people, Donald Trump's press secretary says we've got two million people here tonight!

The Women's March in Washington was on Saturday, and it had three times as many people as Trump's inauguration. When he was told there were hundreds of thousands of women outside the White House, Trump said: "Wow, this Trump cologne really works!"

Yesterday was Donald and Melania Trump's 12th wedding anniversary. When asked what the traditional 12th anniversary gift is, Trump said: "I don't know, I've never made it this far." President Trump is still settling into the White House, and I read that Trump's gold curtains in the Oval Office are the same ones Hillary picked out for Bill Clinton back in 1993. So she may not be president, but Hillary still figured out a way to throw some shade.

There are reports that Trump adviser Kellyanne Conway actually punched a guy while trying to break up a fight at Trump's inaugural ball. Though she says it wasn't a punch, it was an "alternative high-five."

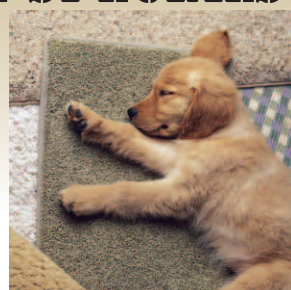

Jimmy Kimmel Live

Isn't it fun that every week now we get an all-new ridiculous phrase? Not since "consciously uncoupled" have I heard something as conveniently skewed as "alternative facts." I wish I'd known about alternative
