2012 Great Mississippi ROAD TRIP

SEPTEMBER 27-30

MISSISSIPPI
CENTER
FOR JUSTICE

A southern experience like no other. Enjoy a blend of education and entertainment as you journey through the rich history of the Mississippi Delta.

Visit important historical sites located in the heart of the civil rights struggle.

- Medgar Evers home and museum
- Fannie Lou Hamer Memorial Site
- Bryant's Grocery, where Emmett Till's fatal encounter launched a national movement
- Civil rights tour of the University of Mississippi campus

Soak in the sounds of local blues lore and legends.

- Po' Monkey's Lounge
- Late night ramble to grave of blues legend Robert Johnson

Imagine a future full of opportunity and justice in a region plagued by poverty. Learn more about the Mississippi Center for Justice's work to overcome modern-day barriers to justice and equality for all.

CELEBRATING ROBERT JOHNSON

Jook joints—small, local bars that hosted some of the great Blues musicians—once dotted the Delta's landscape. Transformed from a sharecropper's shack into a jook joint in the 1950's, Po' Monkey's Lounge is one of the last authentic jook joints in the Delta.

The B.B. King Museum celebrates the life and talent of one of America's most beloved musicians. A modern gateway to the Mississippi Delta, the museum's community room was once a cotton gin.
