Europe struggles with terror threats

By GREGORY Katz

LONDON — The military-style attack in Paris has made clear that Europe faces an enduring threat from terrorist groups that no longer require a disguise to hide.

It’s not just al-Qaeda, or the Islamic State. It’s not just the discipline of some furry, halo-illuminated paratroopers. Instead, security experts say, it’s now an Internet-savvy, generalized rage against Western society fueled by radicalized Muslims that can burst through at any time — with slaughter in Paris, an attack on an airport in Brussels, or the slaying of a soldier in the streets of London.
