PATRICK SANDMAN

Patrick Sandman of Mays Landing recently graduated from Oxford University in the United Kingdom with his Master's Degree. He is now pursuing his PhD in History before entering Georgetown University Law School in 2014. His Master's thesis analyzed the House Judiciary Committee's 1974 impeachment hearings of Richard Nixon. His interest in the subject arose from his grandfather, the late Charles W. Sandman, Jr. who served on the Committee. Patrick's doctoral thesis currently explores institutional shifts in Congress during this period. He earned research fellowships at the Dole Institute of Politics at the University of Kansas and at the Gerald Ford Presidential Library at the University of Michigan. Patrick is the son of Robert and Susan, grandson of Philip and Barbara Matalucci and Marion and the late Congressman Charles Sandman.
