NANCY RENKES:

BETH DARNELL:

in the Quad-Cities. She also was a part of a merger that created the Iowa Women's Connection in the Quad-Cities.

John Schultz

on the board of both organizations, with planning the need to formalize this arrangement, both boards approved the merger.

Women's Connection will become IWLC.

By making you number one!

We can only be number one,

by making you number one!

That's how Lujack's sells more new and used cars than anyone else.

Based on historic new and used vehicle sales data, 1954-2016 for all Lujack stores combined.
BETH DARNELL: THE GO-GETTER

Marketor brings real-life experience to the table

When Darnell was just 6 years old, she entered the family’s business, the Davamac Corporation, which her father and uncles started in their own basement. Today, Darnell is the CEO of DMW Design, a full-service creative design and marketing firm with offices in Davenport, Iowa.

Darnell’s entrepreneurial spirit and drive have led her to create a successful business that has grown from a small storefront to a full-service creative design and marketing firm with offices in Davenport, Iowa.

Darnell started her own business, DMW Design, in 2002, after graduating from Augustana College with a degree in visual communication.

In 2004, Darnell received an Athena Award for her outstanding achievements in business.

Darnell’s business experience has helped her to grow her business and to continue to be successful in the industry.

Darnell’s leadership style and business acumen have earned her numerous awards and recognitions throughout her career.

With her entrepreneurial spirit and drive, Darnell has continued to grow her business and to make a difference in her community.

Through her work and her personal life, Darnell has demonstrated her commitment to helping others and to making a positive impact on her community.

Darnell’s dedication to her business and her community has earned her numerous awards and recognitions, including the Athena Award.
