Everyone has something to hide in ABC's 'Quantico'

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

It's tough to have a network TV hit these days, but thanks to a heady mix of intrigue, romance and mystery, freshman ABC thriller "Quantico" seems to have audiences hooked. In fact, ABC has shown its confidence in the new hit drama by giving the series a full-season pickup — a total of 19 episodes, and possibly more to come.

Created by "Gossip Girl" writer Joshua Safran, the show follows a group of FBI recruits through their training at the famed FBI Academy. A new episode of "Quantico" airs Sunday, Nov. 1, on ABC.

In the series premiere in September, New York's Grand Central Station had just been hit by the city's worst terrorist attack since 9/11, and new FBI recruit Alex Parrish (Priyanka Chopra, "Fashion," 2008) had been arrested for the crime. "Quantico" follows Parrish's escape and subsequent struggle to prove her innocence, while also using flashbacks to tell the story of her training at the FBI training academy.

"Quantico" is a show where you can't trust any character. You can't trust anyone — you can't trust Alex," Chopra explained in an ABC press clip. She went on to say: "Everything is deception. There's conspiracy, there's setups. Even I don't know what's going to happen in the end of the show. Even I don't know who the terrorist is. And I'm looking forward to finding out with everyone else."

If Parrish was truly framed as she claims, it seems just about everyone else is a suspect in the bombing. At the FBI facility in Quantico, Virginia, Parrish makes the acquaintance of other new recruits, each of whom seems to have something to hide.

Shelby Wyatt (Johanna Braddy, "UnREAL") is a blonde beauty who's been secretly communicating in Arabic with a mystery caller. Wyatt's potential love interest — Caleb Haas (Graham Rogers, "Revolution") — initially flunked out of the FBI academy, but weaseled his way back in as an intelligence analyst. Yasmine Al Massri ("Crossbones") does double duty playing twins Nimah and Raina Amin, who are posing as one person, unbeknownst to the other recruits.

The twins seem to be of particular interest to Simon Asher (Tate Ellington, "Remember Me," 2010), a rookie who spent some time in Gaza. Parrish's biggest rival is Nathalie Vasquez (Anabelle Acosta, "Ballers"), who appears to be sporting a fake scar behind her ear. Ryan Booth (Jake McLaughlin, "In the Valley of Elah," 2007) is actually an undercover FBI agent posing as a new recruit so he can keep an eye on Parrish. Booth was planted by Liam O'Connor (Josh Hopkins, "Cougar Town"), the seasoned FBI agent who oversees the recruits, training under the direction of FBI mentor Miranda Shaw (Aunjanue Ellis, "The Help," 2011).

With increasing competition from cable channels and even streaming services, traditional broadcasters have taken a hit in recent years, but they're fighting back with high-quality shows like "Quantico," and stars like Chopra, who is the first South Asian actress to headline a major American drama. While American audiences may not be familiar with her work, she is an international superstar with more than 40 Bollywood films under her belt. Chopra fell into the acting biz after her mother sent some photos of her to Miss India, which led to her later being crowned Miss World 2000. Her win resulted in a number of movie offers. In an interview with ABC's Albert Lawrence, the self-proclaimed geek who once intended to become an engineer explained that when opportunity knocked, she answered.

"I've always been instinctive," said Chopra. "Whenever anything comes to me, I'm like 'Hmmm, that's interesting — let's do it, let's take a chance.'"

Priyanka Chopra stars in "Quantico"
