Devilishly good

D.B. Woodside, Tom Ellis and Tricia Helfer star in "Lucifer"

The devil returns to the City of Angels as Lucifer Morningstar (Tom Ellis, "Rush") continues to track down criminals with Det. Chloe Decker (Lauren German, "Chicago Fire") when "Lucifer" returns with its midseason premiere Monday, May 1, on Fox. D.B. Woodside ("24") co-stars as the angel Amenadiel, who is Lucifer's older brother, and sci-fi legend Tricia Helfer ("Battlestar Galactica") joined the cast at the start of the second season.

Sinfully handsome: 'Lucifer' with Tom Ellis returns from hiatus

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

The devil is in the details, or so the saying goes. When the details include red-hot stars and millions of viewers, the devil has a hit on his hands. Prime time heats up once again as Tom Ellis ("Rush") returns as the devil himself, Lucifer Morningstar, who's given up his post in hell to run a posh nightclub in L.A. in the midseason premiere of "Lucifer," airing Monday, May 1, on Fox.

Inspired by a character from Neil Gaiman's comic book series "The Sandman" and its spinoff "Lucifer," the fantasy drama follows Lucifer as he works with LAPD detective Chloe Decker (Lauren German, "Chicago Fire"), who intrigues Lucifer because she's inexplicably impervious to his powers and somehow renders him vulnerable to physical harm.

The new episode serves as the continuation of the second season, which was given a full-season pickup, fittingly, on Halloween. Fox executive David Madden had high praise for the series when the renewal was announced. "Lucifer" continues to deliver, with great blasts of dark humor and ambitious storytelling," he said. "The show has turned out to be a true wicked pleasure."

The series has been on hiatus since January, and it's clear the first half of season 2 struck a chord with viewers and critics. As of press time, the second season has earned a 100 percent approval rating on popular review aggregator site Rotten Tomatoes, and its success so far prompted an early 22-episode season 3 order from Fox in February. Shortly after that announcement, it was revealed that season 2 would consist of 18 episodes, and four stand-alone episodes would be shifted to season 3.

In early April, some of the cast and executive producers appeared at WonderCon in Anaheim, where they explained the move. "We were worried that we were going to have to sort of pad our arc that we had so carefully, lovingly constructed, but they actually said instead, let's do four stand-alone episodes that can go anywhere," explained executive producer Ildy Modrovich.

A super-sized season 3 is good news for fans, who seem particularly smitten with leading man Ellis. The actor was nominated for a 2016 Teen Choice Award for Breakout Star for his role in the Fox series, but "Lucifer" is hardly his first substantial role. Ellis cut his teeth as Dr. Oliver Cousins in the iconic BBC One soap opera "EastEnders" and as Gary Preston in the British comedy "Miranda" before endearing himself to American audiences in USA Network's "Rush" in 2014.

Co-star German began her Hollywood career in such romances as "Down to You" (2000) and "A Walk to Remember" (2002), but also has scream queen cred thanks to roles in "The Texas Chainsaw Massacre" (2003) and "Hostel: Part II" (2007). As for her television work, she starred as DHS agent Lori Weston in the second season of CBS's "Hawaii Five-0," and appeared as paramedic Leslie Shay in the first two seasons of NBC's "Chicago Fire."

The rest of the cast includes a mix of beautiful Hollywood up-and-comers and established TV actors. Lucifer's bestie is a demon named Mazikeen, or Maze for short, played by Lesley-Ann Brandt ("Spartacus: Blood and Sand"). Fox alum D.B. Woodside ("24") portrays Lucifer's brother Amenadiel, a dark-winged angel sent to Earth to try to convince his sibling to return to hell, and Lucifer's inner circle also includes his Earthly therapist Dr. Linda Martin, portrayed by Rachael Harris ("Diary of a Wimpy Kid," 2010). Near the beginning of season 2, Tricia Helfer ("Battlestar Galactica") joined the cast as Lucifer's mother, who escaped from her prison in hell and took over the body of a recently murdered lawyer.

Chloe's allies include her estranged husband Det. Dan Espinoza (Kevin Alejandro, "Arrow"), who was demoted for his involvement in police corruption. Child actress Scarlett Estevez ("Daddy's Home," 2015) plays Chloe and Dan's daughter, Trixie, who befriends Lucifer. Aimee Garcia ("Dexter") joined the season 2 cast as Chloe's LAPD colleague Ella Lopez.

In other season 2 casting news, Michael Imperioli ("The Sopranos") signed on as Uriel, Lucifer and Amenadiel's other brother. While it appeared Lucifer had finished off Uriel in the first part of the season, Imperioli's appearance in the mid-season finale has fans wondering if they'll see more of him.

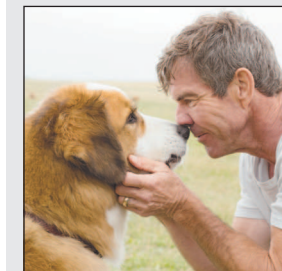

New cast members aren't the only things changing for "Lucifer." After filming the first two seasons in Vancouver, B.C., the show will move to Los Angeles. While the move is undoubtedly a loss for the Vancouver entertainment industry, it makes sense for the show, which is, of course, set in L.A. The move was prompted by new state tax credits that make filming stateside more appealing.

It appears millions of TV viewers find "Lucifer" intriguing. According to Fox, the show averages eight million multi-platform viewers, so it looks as if the show may be around for a while yet. Find out what happens in the midseason premiere of "Lucifer," airing Monday, May 1, on Fox.

A scene from "A Dog's Purpose"

A Dog's Purpose

A dog's soul, living through several lives, comes to discover its purpose. When puppy Bailey (Gad) is rescued from a hot vehicle by a young Ethan (Gheisar), the two form an immediate bond that lasts lifetimes. Bailey and Ethan grow up together, but when the faithful canine saves his family during a catastrophic house fire, Ethan suffers a traumatic injury, ending his dreams of a football scholarship and transforming him into a bitter, self-pitying man. Over the next few decades, Bailey reincarnates, returning as other dogs each time he passes away, but even as he contemplates his purpose in the universe, he never forgets Ethan.

Director: Lasse Hallström.
Stars: Josh Gad, Dennis Quaid, Bryce Gheisar, K.J. Apa, Juliet Rylance, Luke Kirby. 2017. 100 min. Adventure.

Rings

In this third film in The Ring series, Samara Morgan's (Morgan) cursed videotape continues to spread. When Julia (Lutz) learns that her boyfriend, Holt (Roe), has watched the infamous video, which causes anyone who watches it to die in seven days unless they can get someone else to watch a copy of it, she watches it herself to save his life. However, researcher Gabriel (Galecki) notices something different about Julia's copy of the tape, and the three of them launch an investigation.

Director: F. Javier Gutiérrez.

Late-night homecoming: 'The Late Late Show With James Corden' books ticket to London

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

Late-night homecoming: James Corden is heading home. The host of CBS's "The Late Late Show" announced that he's taking a trip to his home city of London next month, marking the late-night talk show's first international foray since Corden took the reins in 2015.

From June 6 to 8, the cheeky Brit will broadcast from the city's historic Central Hall Westminster, while giving his unique blend of comedy and music an extra bit of a British twist.

When Corden took over "The Late Late Show" from Scottish comedian Craig Ferguson ("Celebrity Name Game"), he immediately put his own stamp on the venerable franchise. As a Tony Award-winning actor, he has music in his blood, and he's transformed the nightly talk show into a melodious hit on both sides of the Atlantic.

It's segments like Carpool Karaoke and Crosswalk the Musical that have helped to endear Corden to red-eyed viewers on this side of the pond, but it's not only audiences that have fallen in love with his brand of humor; his late-night talker has also won two Critics' Choice awards and an Emmy.

"To bring 'The Late Late Show' to London is a dream come true for me," Corden said in a statement announcing his trip. "I'm incredibly proud of the show, and we're going to do our best to make this week in London memorable." The episodes will also be broadcast in the U.K. on Sky 1 and Now TV.

This isn't the first time that "The Late Late Show" has visited the United Kingdom. Ferguson filmed a week's worth of shows in Scotland in 2012. It is, however, a chance for Corden to show off his own home city and country when the episodes air June 6 to 8, on CBS.

Hardwick gets 'Awesome': NBC has expanded its relationship with Chris Hardwick. The actor and comedian has hosted the game show "The Wall" on the peacock network since last December, pulling in strong ratings, and now he and legendary reality TV producer Mark Burnett ("The Voice") have paired up for a new science-based program.

"The Awesome Show," which doesn't yet have a premiere date, has been given a six-episode order. In it, Hardwick explores the cutting edge of scientific advancement and innovation, finds the pioneers of tomorrow and celebrates the achievements of humanity — those that are happening right now, as well as ones on the cusp of happening.

As a fast-paced series about innovation's cutting edge, "The Awesome Show" couldn't have found a more qualified host than Hardwick. "The opportunity to develop a prime-time show that celebrates science and technology was too good to pass up," he said in a news release. "I started Nerdist 10 years ago as a tech news site. I was a contributor to Wired magazine for several years, and hosted 'Wired Science' on PBS."

Burnett, who has been behind some of TV's biggest reality hits, including "Survivor" and "Shark Tank," gave the host his personal seal of approval. "Chris Hardwick has the perfect balance of humor and knowledge when it comes to exploring the depths of what is possible, and the audience will be entertained while, at the same time, having their minds blown!"

NBC's "The Awesome Show" is still early in production with no premiere date as of press time.

Homeward bound: National Geographic is hard at work on its next event series. "The Long Road Home," based on the best-selling book of the same name, has begun production in Fort Hood, Texas, with a planned release in 171 countries worldwide later this year.

The eight-episode series will depict one of the defining battles of the Iraq War, when the 1st Cavalry Division from Fort Hood was ambushed in Baghdad's Sadr City suburb. The epic drama will show both the soldiers' battle for survival against the Iraqi insurgents and the struggles of their families back home in Fort Hood, who know only that the battle has taken place and have no knowledge of whether their loved ones have even survived.

Emmy nominated actors Jason Ritter ("Gravity Falls") and Michael Kelly ("House of Cards") headline the cast as members of the armed forces fighting to save as many of their men as they can in the face of fierce enemy firepower. Other cast members include E.J. Bonilla ("The Guiding Light"), Kate Bosworth ("Superman Returns," 2006), Sarah Wayne Callies ("The Walking Dead") and Jeremy Sisto ("Law & Order").

There's talent lined up for the project behind the camera, too. A pair of Emmy winners, Mikael Salomon ("Band of Brothers") and Phil Abraham ("Mad Men"), have signed up to direct, and they've also joined the series' creative team.

"The Long Road Home," National Geographic's latest event series, is scheduled to premiere later this year.

Q&A Hollywood

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: When is Muse Watson going to get a new series?

A: Fan-favorite actor Muse Watson, who played Mike Franks in fan-favorite series "NCIS" for nine years, has been keeping a low profile since leaving the show in 2015. He's done a couple of indie films since then, but hasn't returned to TV. But that's about to change — depending on your definition of TV.

Tough-faced, squinty-eyed Watson has a new chance to squint and look tough in the premiere episode of the upcoming serial-killer procedural series "Mindhunter," which debuts on Netflix in October.

Being a Netflix series, it's not really "television," since it's only available online. This is a problem for some, who either don't want to watch things on a tiny computer screen or don't want to figure out how to connect their televisions to the Internet.

But for everyone else, "Mindhunter" has a lot to offer, and not just the chance to see Watson again. It's getting a lot of attention due to the fact it's produced, and partially directed, by David Fincher. Not only is Fincher an established, Oscar-nominated Hollywood filmmaker, but he was the man behind two of the best-loved serial-killer films of recent years: "Zodiac" (2007) and "SE7EN" (1995).

Q: Are Rufus Sewell and Ian McShane related? They're both British, and there is a strong resemblance.

A: The two actors do share similar curly-hairedness and sunken, penetrating eyes, which might be why they've both gravitated toward more villainous, or at least complicated, roles (the eyes might, at least — I don't know if curly hair is supposed to be particularly villainous). However, the relation ends there.

Though both are English, they hail from very different parts of the country.

Rufus Sewell, best known these days for his recent turn as Lord Melbourne in the PBS historical drama "Victoria" or as John Smith in the Amazon alternate-historical drama "The Man in the High Castle," is from Twickenham, a rather upscale city on the outskirts of London.

Ian McShane, best known as the foul-mouthed saloon owner Al Swearengen in "Deadwood" or previously as the titular antiques dealer in A&E's turn-of-the-'90s mystery show "Lovejoy," is from the very working-class city of Manchester. That said, his family was part of a particular kind of working class — his dad was a professional soccer player for Manchester United.

Q: I know Charlie Sheen and Martin Sheen worked together a fair bit, but what about Martin Sheen and Emilio Estevez?

A: Given that brat-packer Emilio Estevez opted to go with a different last name when he began pursuing an acting career, not everyone knows that he's also the son of American film great Martin Sheen (and thus the brother of the perhaps less-great Charlie Sheen).

And though they were never quite as high profile as 1987's "Wall Street" (the biggest Martin-and-Charlie collaboration), Martin and Emilio have worked together on quite a few projects. All of them have taken advantage of their familial relationship somehow.

They've taken on the natural roles of father and son in a number of films, most recently (and heartwarming) in the 2010 indie drama "The Way," about a father recreating his dead son's pilgrimage through Spain. They also played father and son in the less-heartwarming 1996 drama "The War at Home," about a Vietnam veteran's difficult relationship with his stern father, and 1982's "In the Custody of Strangers," about a troubled teen left in jail overnight as a lesson by his parents.

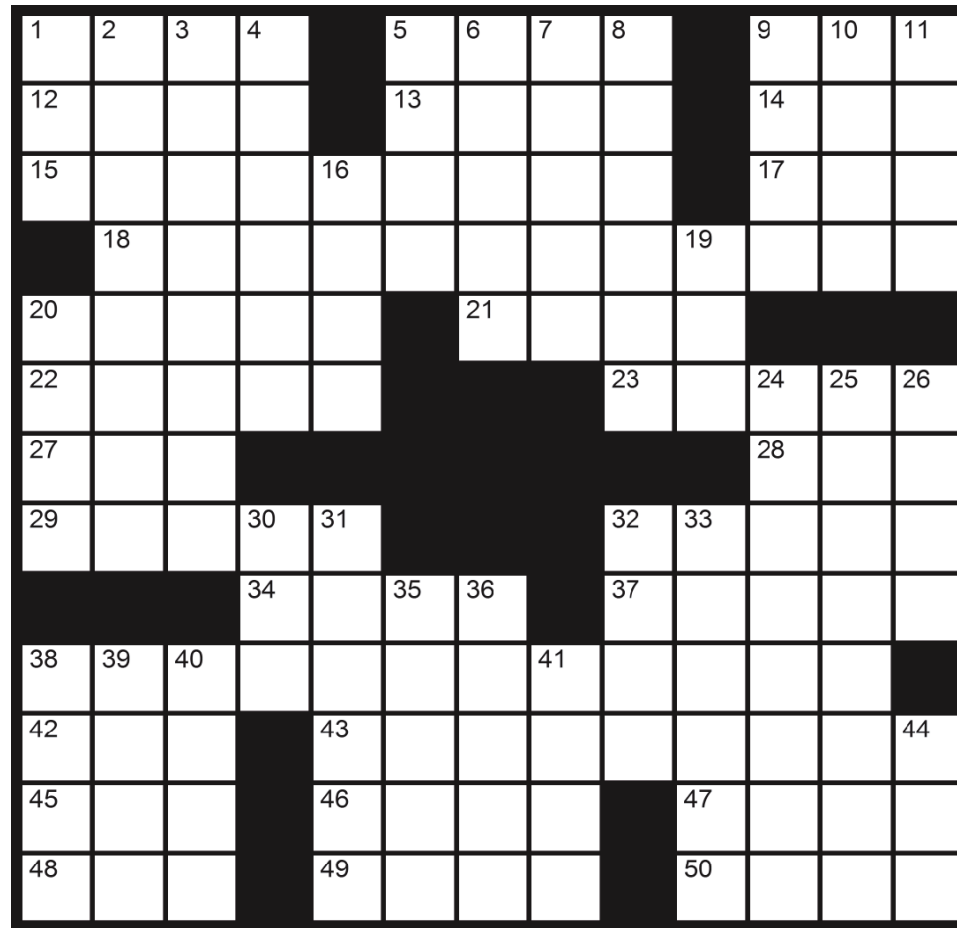

However, filmmakers have also taken advantage of the fact that Emilio looks more like his dad than Charlie does. Emilio played a young version of his father's character in the 1989 political-drama telefilm "Nightbreaker" and in an episode of Martin's hit TV series "The West Wing" in 2003.

Interestingly, all three of them teamed up only once. Both Emilio and Charlie, 11 and eight years old at the time, were extras in Martin's 1973 film "Badlands."

Real talk

By Jacqueline Spendlove
TV Media

Colorful language: Word on the street is there are more than 320 million people living in the United States. That's kind of a lot of people. That's also a lot of people whose parents, grandparents, far-off ancestors or they themselves came from other places, bringing with them their own cultures, traditions, values and opinions.

Sociopolitical comedian W. Kamau Bell ("Totally Biased With W. Kamau Bell") has already spent one Emmy-nominated season unpacking a few of the country's many subcultures in his humorous docuseries, "United Shades of America," which returns for its sophomore season Sunday, April 30, on CNN.

According to Bell, the series was first pitched to him with the idea of a black guy traveling around the country to "white" places. "Well, it's not the '90s anymore. I think you need to have more than just white places, because there you can only go to the country club so many times a season," he quotes himself in an interview for Splitsider.com.

He therefore presented the idea of opening up the show to any and every group of people, races and cultures in America, which became "United Shades." Each episode explores a different community or subculture, examining the many different definitions of what it is to live in America.

The first episode was a memorable one, following Bell, who's black, as he drove down a long country road in Arkansas to meet with fully bedecked KKK members and witnessed a cross burning. While the series isn't necessarily laugh-a-minute funny, it's infused with Bell's spot-on comedic interjections, which manage to lighten even the heaviest of scenarios.
