Weedville woman jailed on charges

By Katie Weidenboerner

ST. MARYS — A Weedville woman is alleged to have stabbed a man who was holding a toddler in his arms in the early morning hours Saturday.

Rosalind Amanda Gursky, 22, 2885 River Road, Weedville, is charged by state police with aggravated assault, assault, recklessly endangering another person, and harassment. Charges were filed with District Judge Mark Jacob of St.

Marys Saturday.

Around 2 a.m. in the morning Cody Allen Moore was transported by ambulance to Penn Highlands Elk, along with his toddler, for treatment of wounds sustained during the early morning stabbing.

When interviewed in the emergency room, Moore told police that he received a phone call from Kayla Nero who said Moore's son had been abused by Gursky's current live-in boyfriend. Nero said Gursky told her that her new boyfriend Danny Linhart threw the child across the room and off the wall.

Following the phone call, Moore traveled to Gursky's Jay Township residence in an attempt to get his son.

He knocked on the door several times, then opened the door and called in to see if anyone was there and said that he was there to get the child.

At that time Linhart told Moore he couldn't get the child. Moore then entered and went to the second floor looking for the boy who was with his brother.

When Moore told Gursky he was taking the 2-year-old from the abusive situation, Gursky grabbed a knife and told him "I will kill you before I let you leave here," according to court records.

Moore told Gursky to put the knife down and then scooped the toddler up in his arms, whisking him downstairs and out of the home. As Moore walked downstairs he felt several striking blows to his back which stung between his shoulder blades.

A representative of The EADS Group presented plans for a new CVS Pharmacy store in DuBois to the city council Monday night.

National pharmacy moving into DuBois

By Nick Hoffman

DuBOIS — A national pharmacy is moving its store into the City of DuBois.

The city council accepted conditional plans for CVS Pharmacy's new store near the western edge of the city. CVS' lease at its current site in the Sandy Plaza will be expiring, prompting the move to a new location.

The site is where the former Gratton's Store sat, at the corner of DuBois Street and DuBois Avenue. It is bounded to the south by the Pennsylvania Railroad and to the west by Cawthra Street.

There are six properties involved in the purchase of the site. CVS plans to close those sales in March, build the new store this summer and open it in October.

The city's Planning Commission reviewed the plans and recommended their acceptance pending resolution of several items, including:

- Final purchase of all properties under contract.
- Plans revised to reflect the new Commercial Highway Zoning District.
- Plans revised to show the correct street names.
- Permit approval for discharge from the Clearfield County Conservation District and or the state's Department of Environmental Protection.

- Highway occupancy permit from PennDOT for both driveways.
- Approval of final stormwater management plan in compliance with the city's ordinance.
- Approval of the city engineer for building design requirements.

The Planning Commission asked CVS to offer something other than its prototype flat roof building and representatives from The EADS Group did just that at Monday's council meeting. The modified design was received favorably by the council.

Man sentenced for threatening to kill Jefferson County judge

CLEARFIELD — A Jefferson County man who is currently incarcerated in the state prison in Houtzdale was ordered to serve additional time in state prison for threatening to kill Jefferson County Judge John Foradora in addition to his ex-girlfriend and a police officer.

Clearfield County President Judge Fredric J. Ammerman ordered Todd C. Lingenfelter, 20, to serve two years to four years in the state prison on three counts of terroristic threats and is to be served consecutive to all charges being served.

Lingenfelter was charged with writing a letter to Foradora and sending it to the Jefferson County Courthouse. He also mailed letters to his ex-girl friend and police officer.

Prior to sentencing, the court asked Lingenfelter why he had written the letters and he told the court that he was not taking his psychiatric medication and was not thinking right.

When asked why he threatened his ex-girlfriend, he said he did not know.

Lingenfelter is currently serving a state sentence of 30 months to five years from Jefferson County on a probation violation. On this case, he was charged with simple assault, institutional vandalism and defiant trespass.
