NB man, 93, is trapped for 29 hours after crash

AGNESS — A 93-year-old North Bend man was rescued Tuesday after being trapped for more than a day when he drove over an embankment.

Alfred William Sweet set out from his Agness area cabin to his North Bend home on Monday afternoon, but he didn't arrive. His family reported him missing Tuesday.

Oregon State Police, Curry County Sheriff's Office and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service personnel began searching the roads from Agness to North Bend. Around 8:38 p.m., Curry County Deputy Walter Scherbarth noticed grass that had been disturbed along Agness Road. When he peered over the embankment, he saw Sweet's car resting on its side about 50 feet from the road.

Sweet was unhurt, but he couldn't scale the embankment. He was trapped for about 29 hours.

Curry County Search and Rescue and the Gold Beach Fire Department used ropes and a basket to carry Sweet back to the road. He was taken to Curry General Hospital by air ambulance.

Sweet suffered dehydration and minor scratches but was otherwise fine.

Red Cross hopes to cut into nationwide blood shortage with strong summer in the Bay Area

BY EMILY THORNTON
The World

COOS BAY — Tess McKinney said she hated donating blood the first time in high school because she didn't know what to expect.

"I went on YouTube and checked it out," she said. She discovered it wasn't that bad.

"I thought, 'Oh, I'm saving people!'"

McKinney was among the donors Wednesday at the Red Lion Hotel, where the American Red Cross sets up shop about once a month. Now is a critical time to donate, since the Red Cross is 50,000 blood donations behind its nationwide goal for June, according to its website.

That level constitutes an emergency, and the organization is asking anyone who is eligible to donate blood.

Type O negative is the most-needed blood, according to Elaine Graves, a Red Cross nurse. O positive, A negative and B negative also are particularly valuable, she said.

"O negative has the most antibodies," Graves said. "They can give to everybody."

Graves, who has worked with the Red Cross for 14 years, said summer is a difficult time to get donations.

"People go on vacations. There's more disruption in their routine," she said. Car crashes strain the supply, she said.

"Accidents require more blood. It taps into resources," she said. "Each one uses a few units or more."

Disasters, such as the tornadoes in Oklahoma or bombings in Boston, are other reasons for low blood supplies, Graves said.

The Red Cross gives patients three blood extracts: red cells, plasma and platelets, Graves said.

"We rarely use whole blood to help patients, because we can get more use out of the same donation by dividing it," she said.

Graves said the group likes recruiting high school students, because they often become lifetime donors. Nicole Wilkerson, a Montana State University senior who donated Wednesday, said she started donating regularly in high school. She slowed down during college because of her softball schedule.

"It was hard to give blood and play," she said.

Someone needs a blood transfusion every two seconds, according to the Red Cross website. About 44,000 donations are needed daily.

Klaus Radtke, a volunteer, has given well over six gallons of blood, starting in 1957. He

Feds collect telephone records

■ National Security Agency gathers information daily on Verizon's 121M customers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Security Agency currently is collecting the telephone records of millions of U.S. customers of Verizon under a top secret court order, Britain's Guardian newspaper said Wednesday.

The order was granted by the secret Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court on April 25 and was good until July 19, the newspaper said. The order requires Verizon, one of the nation's largest telecommunications companies, on an "ongoing, daily basis" to give the NSA information on all telephone calls in its systems, both within the U.S. and between the U.S. and other countries.

The newspaper said the document, a copy of which it had obtained, shows for the first time that under the Obama administration the communication records of millions of U.S. citizens were being collected indiscriminately and in bulk, regardless of whether they were suspected of any wrongdoing.

The Associated Press could not authenticate the order because documents from the court are classified.

Verizon spokesman Ed McFadden said Wednesday the company had no comment. The White House declined comment and referred questions to the NSA. The NSA had no immediate comment.

Verizon Communications Inc. listed 121 million customers in its first-quarter earnings report this April — 98.9 million wireless customers, 11.7 million residential phone lines and about 10 million commercial lines. The court order didn't specify which type of phone customers' records were being tracked.

Under the terms of the order, the phone numbers of both parties on a call are handed over, as is location data, call duration, unique identifiers, and the time and duration of all calls. The contents of the conversation itself are not covered,

New sidewalk and fence aim to protect pedestrians

BY TIM NOVOTNY
The World

By Tim Novotny, The World

The city of Coos Bay is working with several partner agencies to erect a fence along the railroad tracks downtown. The sidewalk along U.S. Highway 101 will need to be moved to accommodate the project.

COOS BAY — It started with port officials' need for a fence along their railroad tracks south of downtown Coos Bay. It grew into a multi-agency project to increase pedestrian connectivity along U.S. Highway 101.

The outcome will be a concrete railing and sidewalk along the highway from the Historic Railroad Museum to Front Street.

"This has come together rather quickly," City Manger Rodger Craddock said. "My guess is, work will begin before the end of the summer."

With the railroad shut down in recent years, people have gotten into the habit crossing the tracks to reach a prime fishing area south of the boardwalk, Craddock said. The recent return of rail traffic created a safety issue.

Earlier this year, the Oregon International Port of Coos Bay went to the city with a plan to erect a vinyl-coated chain-link fence. But there were concerns about the fence's appearance and the lack of a sidewalk.

Creative negotiations evolved into a plan. The Oregon Department of Transportation will pay most of the cost, about $146,000, according to Craddock. State officials will handle engineering and construction. The city has agreed to do the demolition work and prepare the new fence.

The fence will match existing concrete fencing near the boardwalk. It will consist of 1940s-era bridge railings, which the city is powder coating to add durability. The Historic Railroad Museum gave the city the railings in exchange for some future work by the city.

NORTH BEND — A car and a semi-truck collided on U.S. Highway 101 near the Mill Casino-Hotel on Wednesday afternoon, blocking two lanes.

according to Detective Jon Bohanan of the North Bend Police Department.

They were in a rental car and appeared to be visiting, Bohanan said. The crash happened at about 3:45 p.m.

Bohanon said the car's driver failed to yield to the semi. The crash remains under investigation.

Both died while in office. The stone memorial for Andy Jackson is on the right side of the stairs, with Nikky Whitty on the other side. The entire memorial consists of five stones around the front of the courthouse with new garden areas.

Cafe Cardinal is no more

COOS BAY — After five years, Cafe Cardinal is hanging up its aprons.

The annual charity event, held at Cardinal Services' office in Coos Bay, featured grilled sandwiches, musical entertainment and celebrity chefs. Last year, volunteers served 951 lunches, raising money for the American Cancer Society and the Crossroads Cafe.

"It was time to recognize three things," said Bud Freeman, owner of the 30-year-old staffing company. "First, June is the middle of the hiring season, a ridiculous time for us. Second, people support different charities. If we want folks to make a difference in the community, they need passion for their volunteer efforts. Third, it turns out, not all of us are sandwich makers."

Several Bay Area companies, groups and individuals have aided Cardinal Café over the years.

"That's the hardest part," Freeman said. "By year five, there was incredible community support for Cafe. We would like to thank all of those who helped make it happen."

BANDON – Get set, Bandon, for the first monthly Alive After Five Art Walk from 5-8 p.m. Friday, June 21.

The Greater Bandon Association's events and promotions committee created the event so organizations in Bandon could collaborate their activities and at the same time create another fun experience for young and old alike.

The event grew out of GBA coordinator Harv Schubothe working with artists and galleries to introduce an art walk to Bandon. Meanwhile, GBA board member Tara Shaw was working with merchants on creating a once-a-month evening where merchants would remain open later.

When it became known that both groups were targeting the third Friday of each month, it didn't take long before GBA suggested combining efforts, Schubothe said.

Planning for the Alive after Five event is still under way, but it is hoped that other groups will be interested in joining the effort.

"For example, we are working with vineyards, musicians, perhaps even vendors at the Old Town Marketplace might be interested in staying open a few more hours for one Friday a month," Shaw said.

"We understand that this event may start small, but we are hoping that as people experience Alive After Five that many more will join us. With the Face Rock Creamery and the Washed Ashore Project open until later as well, there will just be an awful lot going on in our downtown."

Schubothe sees this as a year-round activity.

"We understand that the tourist season will end," Schubothe said. "But it is in the winter months that people are looking for things to do including those not that far away from us who do not see a 30-minute drive as an obstacle. We see a late Friday afternoon start time as perfect for this activity as tourists are just arriving for the weekend and looking for things to do while many local people are winding down their work week and are ready to relax."

For more information on the Alive After Five event, contact any of the GBA events and promotions committee members Peter Braun, Rushel Reed, Dean Conyers or Tara Shaw, or call GBA at 541-297-2342.

Congress should take the lead on pot

In the wake of ballot measures in Washington and Colorado, Oregon voters could have another shot at legalizing marijuana as early as 2014.

Oregon voters just last November rejected Ballot Measure 80, probably because that particular measure was loony. If there's a better-written pot-legalization measure on the 2014 ballot, our hunch is that the measure will pass.

And Oregon state law on marijuana will lurch into head-on conflict with federal law.

The Obama administration hasn't given much guidance on this matter to its federal attorneys in Washington state and Colorado after the marijuana votes in those states. In fact, Obama himself said that his administration had "bigger fish to fry."

Now, though, the fish looks like it's just going to get bigger — and there's the sense, as U.S. Rep. Earl Blumenauer told our editorial board last week, that the U.S. public is ahead of Congress on this issue. Recent national polls have suggested that, for the first time, a majority of Americans favor legalization of marijuana.

If Congress doesn't take advantage of this opportunity to lead, Americans will take matters into their own hands, one state at a time.

Pay raise for state workers is no way to reform PERS

Following PERS reform in the Oregon Legislature is like watching pachinko. That's the Japanese version of pinball, where dozens of small balls are fired through a forest of brass pins in the hope that one or two will eventually fall into a pocket, redeemable for a prize.

At the start of the current legislative session, close to 40 bills were introduced to reform the state's Public Employees Retirement System. The one bill that made it to Gov. John Kitzhaber for his signature is a prize not worth redeeming. Senate Bill 822 saves little, reforms less and borrows from the future.

Now the governor is quietly negotiating with union leaders on a side deal.

As The Oregonian recently revealed, the governor is proposing that schools and municipalities would stop contributing 6 percent to each employee's PERS fund in exchange for a 6 percent raise.

Yes, you read that correctly. Public employees would get a lavish raise — which they then would deposit into their own retirement fund. Only in state government would this sleight of hand be considered a serious proposal.

When you play pachinko, you play with your own money. In state government, the game is easier: You play with other people's money.

Grill FBI nominee about warrantless wiretapping

President Obama's nomination of James Comey as director of the FBI serves as an unintended reminder that there are constitutional limits on the government's power to intrude upon the privacy of Americans.

Comey was second in command at President George W. Bush's Justice Department in 2004. Serving as acting attorney general when his boss was hospitalized, Comey refused to reauthorize the Bush administration's warrantless wiretapping program. He was widely and rightly praised.

The Obama administration has not only failed to restore the balance between national security and civil liberties that was first skewed by the Bush administration, it has worsened that imbalance.

Last year Obama signed a five-year extension — and expansion — of the broad electronic eavesdropping powers that legalized the warrantless wiretapping program. Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., has warned that "most Americans would be stunned to learn" the extent of the government's surveillance.

Comey is not without blame for the government's warrantless surveillance program, which was expanded while he was in the Justice Department.

Wyden should question Comey about that involvement during his confirmation hearing and about his willingness to insist, as he did nearly a decade ago, that the government fully adhere to the Constitution.

Taste never takes a vacation

Why do so many people think that the arrival of summer means it's time to pack away all the clothes that actually fit them? That it's time to reveal their out-of-shape bodies by wearing Speedos and tube tops? Noel Coward used to ask, "Why do all the wrong people travel?" Now, I'm pretty sure he would ask, "Why do all the wrong people wear skimpy clothes?"

On that show "Cops," every time they show up to arrest some guy, he answers the door (or climbs out the back window) shirtless. It's as if shirts hurt criminals the way Kryptonite hurts Superman: "Don't let it touch my skin, it burns!" Do their shirts cause a rash, or are they just trying to keep them clean for their parole officers? You don't want to show up for an important meeting with crack ashes all over your only shirt, do you?

Going skimpy is one thing if you're the reigning Mr. or Miss America; it's quite another if you're just some ordinary working schlub waiting to buy a soft-serve ice cream cone in the summer heat. I don't want to stand behind you wondering if you comb your back hair or if it just naturally looks that way. And it can't be good for the soft-serve ice cream business if you're making the other customers so sick that they get out of line.

I remember the first time I saw a sign that said, "No shirt, no shoes, no service." It struck me as extremely funny that you would have to tell someone that they're expected to wear a shirt and shoes when they're not actually on the beach. Doesn't everyone know that? Or is there a sign on the inside of everyone's front door that says, "Don't forget to wear pants today!"

I grew up near a beach town with plenty of tourists. Just because they were on vacation, they didn't seem to think that they had suddenly turned into swimsuit models with buns of steel or that they should suddenly start dressing as if they had gotten there by hopping a freight train. They seemed to know that it's not right to break fashion rules on vacation any more than it is to break traffic laws.

If you don't have any muscles, don't wear a muscle-T. You don't look tough; you look like a suspect.

If you are not an Olympic swimmer or diver, or European, do not wear a Speedo. I'm not nearly as afraid of creeping European-style socialism as I am of creepy European-style beachwear.

Don't put that white zinc oxide on your nose if you're not a lifeguard. Even if you are a lifeguard, it's questionable. It makes you look as if you were on your way to a war dance but it got cancelled due to good weather. Sunscreen and a hat will work just fine.

Wear age-appropriate clothing. Spandex is not supposed to have wrinkles. If you have the body of a shuffleboarder, don't dress like you're a volleyballer. You may win the volleyball match, but only by default because everyone else has left in disgust.

Wearing black socks on the beach is even worse than wearing a tie on the beach. Which is even worse than wearing a thong. The worst possible beach outfit? Black socks with a thong.

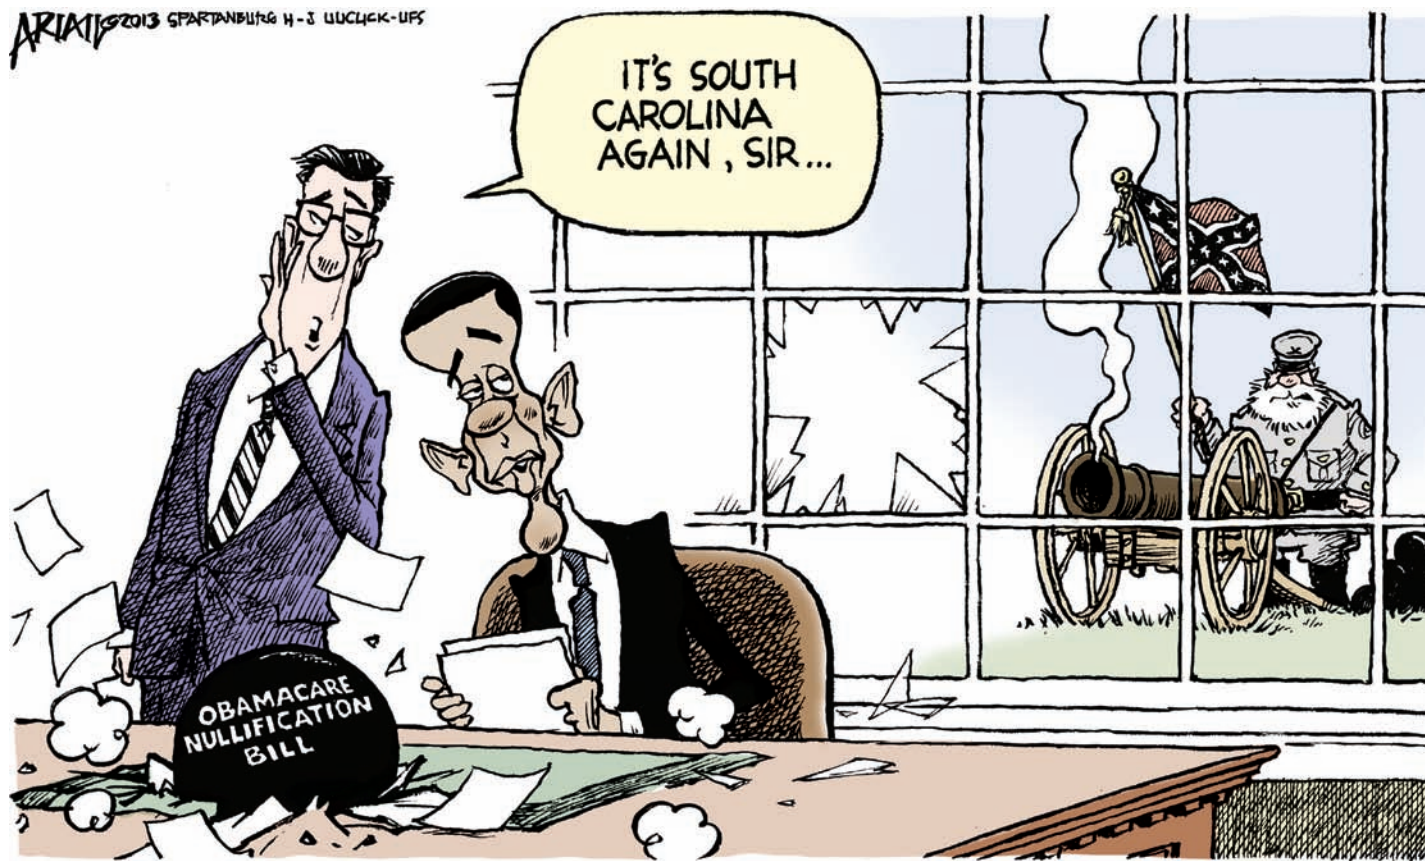

If Jimmy Buffett won't wear it, should you? If you limbo under his very low fashion bar, it will be hard to tell if you're on vacation or just a local on a bender.

Unless your name is Elly May, leave the cut-off short-shorts at home. "Let It All Hang Out" is a song, not fashion advice. Save it for when you're alone at the cement pond.

Paper misstated restaurant events

On page C1 of the Saturday, June 1, paper, Business Editor Gail Elber published an update on my claim for damages against the Bay Area Chamber of Commerce. That claim was based on two, but now three, documented instances in which volunteer(s) at the chamber's visitor center disparaged my restaurant, the Blue Heron, and advised visitors not to eat there.

Ms. Elber misrepresents what I told her when she called me that preceding Monday. During that call I told her that a third person, a customer of mine, had gone into the Visitor Information Center, posing as a tourist, asking about local restaurants and specifically about the Blue Heron. According to Ms. Elber, I told her that the center volunteer said that "the Blue Heron had German food, but she didn't know if it was authentic."

In so doing, she is not quoting me but Timm Slater, the manager of the center, who appears to be happy to report the evasions of his volunteer(s) as fact, most likely for CYA-reasons. What I told Ms. Elber on the phone (while quoting from a report I had made of the incident) was that the center volunteer leaned over, as in confidence, and made a face stating she would not find German food here. My customer then objected that she'd heard there WAS a German restaurant in Coos Bay. The volunteer's reply: Yes, we have one right on this corner but I don't advise you to go there; you won't like it. She added that she wouldn't advise anyone to eat there.

So much for the chamber's motto: "Our business is helping your business." Maybe it works the same at The World.

How can Bandon oppose a pool?

This is in regard to the swimming pool in Bandon. I find it appalling that the majority of this town is against something that could be a positive thing for our young people. We live in a great little town (although some officials are trying their best to make it a town for snobs), with a relatively low crime rate. But it won't stay that way for long if we don't give our students and kids something to do in this town other than to go to school.

A pool would give them a place to go without getting into trouble, but it would also help teach them how to swim, which in turn could cause fewer deaths in the ocean. It is also a great form of exercise, which everyone knows this nation is sadly lacking in and why there are so many overweight people.

The school district and others need to stop thinking about themselves and start thinking about what will benefit our young people. They need to start thinking about what will happen if these young people don't have somewhere positive to go to release excess energy. They need to be thankful that we live in such a great town, and that we are truly blessed to have such wonderful young people in our town. We could be one of those

Reader takes action to turn the world into a better place

DEAR ABBY: It is easy to watch or read the news and think people are awful and this world is going nowhere fast. At New Year's I made a resolution to try and DO something about how I view society. I decided I'd do 30 random acts of service for strangers.

I know it may seem small and insignificant, but at least I can say I'm trying to make this a better place to live. I'm hoping it will spread a message of love and caring in a world with too much hurt and violence. Ideally, one or two people will notice and pay it forward.

DEAR ABBY

JEANNE PHILLIPS

I t's spring, and so far I have volunteered as a math tutor at a local school and shoveled the snow off a neighbor's sidewalk. But I'm already falling behind, and I'm struggling to come up with some good ideas. I know you and your readers often have creative suggestions. Can you suggest more acts of service I can do for strangers? — TRYING TO BE NICE

DEAR TRYING TO BE NICE: You could volunteer at a local food pantry. Or find an organization that delivers food to shut-ins and take meals to the clients they serve a couple of days a month.

You could bring a garbage bag with you when you take walks in the morning or evening and pick up paper cups, plastic bags, cigarette butts and candy wrappers that litter our streets and beaches. Or simply acknowledge the presence of others by smiling and saying, "good morning," "good afternoon" and "good evening" to people you encounter.

Readers, if you'd like to chime in, I'd be interested in your ideas.

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, when I was a senior in high school, a guy became overly attached to me. He shared many very private feelings with me about his lack of friends and severe depression. After trying to help him, first by myself and later with a school guidance counselor and even involving his parents, I decided his problems were too much for me to handle and ended the friendship. I know I hurt him, but I saw no other alternative. After high school we didn't speak for about a year.

We are now in the same college and he's trying to force himself back into my life and be friends again. Abby, he hasn't changed at all. I feel bad, but I have no interest in becoming his friend.

What should I do? I have a hard time saying no because he is so persistent and I feel guilty. — FEELING PITY IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR FEELING PITY: Tell him the truth. Say, "I can't be your friend because your problems overwhelm me. But YOU can do something about them by going to the student health center and asking for counseling, and by joining some clubs and activities so you can interact with new people."

DEAR ABBY: Why are brownies called brownies if they are black? — JUST WONDERING IN HOUSTON

DEAR JUST WONDERING: I took your question to Lachlan Sands, executive chef at Le Cordon Bleu College of Culinary Arts, Los Angeles, who says, "The first mention of 'brownies' is in a Fanny Farmer cookbook published in 1906. They are not called brownies because of the color, but were named after Celtic pixies."

P.S. If your brownies are turning out black, you may be baking them too long.

A genetically modified test strain of wheat that emerged to the surprise of an Oregon farmer last month was likely the result of an accident or deliberate mixing of seeds, the company that developed it said Wednesday.

Monsanto: Modified wheat 'isolated occurrence'

PORTLAND (AP) — A genetically modified test strain of wheat that emerged to the surprise of an Oregon farmer last month was likely the result of an accident or deliberate mixing of seeds, the company that developed it said Wednesday.

Representatives for Monsanto Co. said during a conference call that the emergence of the genetically modified strain was an isolated occurrence. It has tested the original wheat stock and found it clean, the company said.

Sabotage is a possibility, said Robb Fraley, Monsanto chief technology officer.

"We're considering all options and that's certainly one of the options," Fraley said.

Fraley said the company has a test it has shared with other countries that could "fingerprint" the exact variety of wheat that carried the gene, and it's awaiting samples from the U.S. Department of Agriculture or the Oregon farmer to test for the exact variety that emerged.

The USDA has said the Oregon wheat is safe to eat and there is no evidence that modified wheat entered the marketplace.

No genetically engineered wheat has been approved for U.S. farming.

Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack said he would not address Monsanto's suggestions that it could have been sabotage.

Fifteen inspectors from the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service are working on the investigation.

Vilsack said the department's priorities are to investigate and also to focus on getting markets open as quickly as they can after some overseas markets balked at the discovery of the modified crop.

He said the department believes it is an isolated situation because tests in the farmer's adjoining fields have turned up negative, as have tests on neighboring fields so far.

Bill would regulate tracking devices for kids

SALEM (AP) — It hasn't happened yet in Oregon, but some lawmakers want to be prepared for the day schools replace roll call with tracking devices.

The Oregon Senate passed a bill Wednesday in a 28-2 vote that would require schools to notify students, parents and the state Board of Education before integrating radio-frequency technology that would track students' locations on campus.

Radio frequency identification devices are computer chips used to track cattle, consumer products and, in some U.S. schools, kids.

The devices can be implanted into student ID cards or attached to clothing for the purpose of monitoring students' location on campus, replacing the need to take attendance.

So far, only a few schools in Texas and California have integrated the technology.

Rep. Phil Barnhart, D-Eugene, the bill's sponsor, said the legislation was triggered by a story he read about a Texas high school student who was suspended for refusing to wear an identification card implanted with the tracking device.

"You can certainly imagine a whole lot of very beneficial and useful reasons for being able to know where students are, but I can also think of a whole lot of difficult ones that would be a serious detriment," Barnhart said in testimony.

Barnhart said Oregon should take action now to safeguard students' privacy before the technology starts popping up in schools.

Amid pushback from the tech industry, lawmakers rolled back an initial proposal that would have banned schools from requiring students to wear, carry or use

RFIDs to track kids.

Supporters of the devices say the technology offers a cost-effective security tool that can be used to locate students quickly in emergency situations.

"We need to know who is inside our schools at all times," Jim Gingo, representing the Security Industry Association, wrote in testimony in May. "This is no different than asking a person to submit a state-issued ID, taking roll call at the start of class or scanning a barcode. The only difference is that (an RFID) allows all of this to be done quickly and automatically."

Gingo said restricting the technology could close the door on innovations that would improve school security.

But opponents say the technology tramples students' civil liberties and right to privacy.

Obituary

Geraldine Elizabeth Downer

Nov. 11, 1920 - June 2, 2013

A celebration of life for Geraldine Elizabeth Downer, 92, will be held at a later date in the North Bend area. At her request, there will be no funeral service. Cremation rites were held at Ocean View Crematory in Coos Bay.

After a brief illness, and with her family by her side, Geraldine Elizabeth (Moffitt) Downer passed away peacefully June 2, 2013 at Good Samaritan Hospital in Corvallis. Geri was born in Portland on Nov. 11, 1920, to Chester and Florence (Hanson) Moffitt (Florence died from complications of childbirth when Geri was just a few months old). Geri grew up in North Bend and graduated from North Bend High School in 1938. In 1939, she married her high school sweetheart, Clarence Downer, and they had been married 73 1/2 years. Geri taught piano to 30-40 students a year until she "retired" at the age of 89 — having taught for approximately 55 years. She was a member of the Order of Runeberg and member of the First United Methodist Church since she was 8 years old. She accompanied the North Bend First Methodist Church choir for many years and "retired" from that responsibility just a few years ago. Her love of music and family was always shared with all those she came in contact with.

After being lifetime residents of North Bend, Geri and Clarence just recently moved to Corvallis on March 30, 2013, to be near family. As in North Bend, their new found friends in Corvallis found out that to know Geri was to love Geri and they felt blessed to have known her even if it was for such a short period of time.

She is survived by her husband, Clarence of Corvallis; two sons, Jerol (Shirley) of Des Moines, Wash., and Ken (Susan) of Corvallis; three grandchildren, Debbie (Bob Mitzel), Karen Downer and Brian Downer; six great-grandchildren; and three great-great-grandchildren.

Remembrances may be made to the North Bend United Methodist Church, P.O. Box 132, North Bend, OR 97459, or to the charity of your choice.

Arrangements are under the direction of Coos Bay Chapel, 541-267-3131.

Forestry Board looks for more from forests

GRANTS PASS (AP) — The Oregon Board of Forestry has taken on a tough job: figuring out how to produce more logs as well as better fish and wildlife habitat through logging on state forests.

The board voted unanimously Wednesday in Salem to embark on a new management plan for three state forests in the northwest corner of the state — the Tillamook, Clatsop and Santiam.

There has been widespread dissatisfaction with the current plan — including from the governor — for failing to meet the statutory goals of producing economic, environmental and social benefits through active management.

Board Chairman Tom Imeson said in a statement that the current plan, from 2001, was based on the best information at the time, and he believes the board can do better.

Lobbying bill may create unintended loophole

SALEM (AP) — A bill tweaking Oregon's government ethics laws could end up creating a new loophole that would allow lobbyists to buy food, drinks and entertainment for senior state officials without reporting the expenditures.

The bill is intended to eliminate a requirement that lobbyists report the cost of their meals when they lobby other lobbyists.

But many senior officials in the governor's office and state agencies are registered lobbyists because they advocate the governor's agenda in the Legislature.

Ron Bersin, director of the Oregon Government Ethics Commission, says the bill would make money spent lobbying a government official exempt from disclosure if the official is also a registered lobbyist.

Paul Cosgrove, president of the Capitol Club lobbyist organization, disagrees with that conclusion. But he says the bill can be changed if it's ambiguous.

Stolen taxi recovered in Vancouver, Wash.

PORTLAND (AP) — Police say a taxi stolen during an assault in downtown Portland has been recovered in Vancouver, Wash.

Sgt. Pete Simpson says no suspect has been arrested.

The cab driver told police he was at an intersection Tuesday night when a man in his 30s with tattooed arms ran up to the stopped vehicle and began assaulting him. When the taxi driver got out of the car to defend himself, the suspect jumped behind the wheel and drove off.

Simpson says three passengers were able to get out safely.

been fatally shot. While detectives aren't sure what happened early Wednesday, French says they have no reason to believe anyone other than the couple was involved.

The spokesman identified the dead couple as 56-year-old Bradley Chauran and his 53-year-old wife Kelly Chauran.

Bill requires American flag in all classrooms

SALEM (AP) — The Oregon Senate has passed a bill that would require charter schools to display the American flag in their classrooms, as public schools are already required to do.

The Senate approved the bill in a 28-2 vote on Wednesday.

The original bill would have required schools to lead students in a daily recital of the Pledge of Allegiance. Lawmakers backed off that proposal, which riled civil-rights advocates. It would impose on students' free-speech rights, as well as their religious freedom because of the phrase: "under God."

Existing state law requires schools to give students the opportunity to say the Pledge of Allegiance at least once a week.

The bill goes back to the House, which backed the original draft but must sign off on the changes.

Bill gives break to some young sex offenders

SALEM (AP) — The Oregon Legislature has narrowly approved a bill that would allow some young offenders convicted of having sex with underage partners to request the crime be removed from their records.

In a 16-14 vote on Wednesday, the Senate sent the bill to Gov. John Kitzhaber. A spokeswoman says he intends to sign it.

The bill would apply to some teens and young adults convicted of sex crimes that did not involve coercion or force. The offender would have to complete all required court-ordered programs and treatments, among other conditions.

Proponents say the punishment for such offenses does not fit the crime. Opponents say people convicted of sex crimes often reoffend and should not be able to have their records expunged.

Honolulu police arrest man in visitor death

HONOLULU (AP) — Honolulu police say they've arrested a man in connection with the death of a visitor from Oregon.

The Honolulu Police Department says the 38-year-old is being held on suspicion of murder in the death of Ivanice "Ivy" Harris.

Harris was last seen outside a Waikiki bar on May 16. Her body was later found on the leeward coast of Oahu.

Harris came to Hawaii from Portland with some friends to celebrate her 29th birthday.

Judge backs dying Pa. girl who needs new lungs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A federal judge has temporarily allowed a dying 10-year-old girl to move up the adult waiting list for a lung transplant, though an expert has questioned the decision on medical and ethical grounds. “We are beyond thrilled,” Janet Murnaghan, the girl’s mother, told The Associated Press on Wednesday after U.S. District Judge Michael Baylson intervened in the case. “Obviously we still need a match.”

The Associated Press

Baylson suspended an age factor in the nation’s transplant rules for 10 days for Sarah Murnaghan, who has been at Children’s Hospital of Philadelphia for three months with end-stage cystic fibrosis.

The judge’s ruling lifting the age requirement applies only to Sarah, at least until a June 14 hearing on the request for a broader injunction.

An expert questioned Baylson’s decision, which came a day after Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius declined to become involved in the case, despite urgent pleas from several Pennsylvania congressmen.

Lung transplants are the most difficult of organ transplants, and children fare worse than adults, which is one reason for the existing policy, said Dr. Arthur Caplan, a bioethicist at New York University Langone Medical Center.

He called it troubling, and perhaps precedent-setting, for a judge to overrule that medical judgment, and predicted a run to the courthouse by patients who don’t like their place on the waiting list.

Ore. berries blamed for Calif. man’s hepatitis A

ENCINITAS, Calif. (AP) — Geoff Soza was celebrating his 30th wedding anniversary in Yellowstone National Park when the 64-year-old man learned the hard way that his seemingly healthy breakfast habit of mixing thawed berries with Greek yogurt had exposed him to a national outbreak of hepatitis A.

Dozens of illnesses have been reported, and federal officials have recalled a frozen berry mix sold by Costco and Harris Teeter in seven states.

Soza hadn’t felt right in the weeks before leaving for Yellowstone on May 29 — but his lack of appetite and disorientation didn’t merit canceling the trip.

On the second night of their trip, the Sozas called paramedics who examined Geoff and recommended he visit St. John’s Medical Center.

They thought they could wait until morning, but after a few hours, Rita drove three hours on dark rural roads to Jackson, Wyo.

Doctors initially thought Geoff Soza’s gall bladder needed to be removed after finding signs of inflammation and stones.

But general surgeon Dr. Michael Rosenberg halted the surgery, scheduled for June 1, because of Soza’s elevated liver enzymes.

After more tests, Soza was diagnosed with hepatitis A, Rosenberg said.

Hepatitis A can be spread by the ingestion of a microscopic amount of fecal matter from an infected person, typically a food worker who hasn’t washed their hands.

A dust cloud rises as people run from the scene of a building collapse on the edge of downtown Philadelphia on Wednesday.

Search halted in Philly building collapse; 6 dead

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — After a slow but steady overnight search buoyed by the discovery of a woman in the rubble, rescue workers at the scene of a building collapse that killed six people took a temporary break today in what had been a round-the-clock dig for additional victims.

A building under demolition collapsed onto a neighboring thrift store Wednesday morning, injuring at least 14 people, including a 61-year-old woman pulled from the debris nearly 13 hours later and hospitalized in critical condition.

Authorities have not officially ended the search, but the sense of urgency has subsided after workers combed through bricks and rubble using buckets and their bare hands well into the night.

“We’re going to keep searching until we’re absolutely sure no one else is there,” battalion fire chief

Charles Lupre said shortly before dawn. He said there were no reports of anyone missing, but there was always the chance that someone was inside who wasn’t reported missing.

It was unclear what role the demolition work might have played in the collapse, but the accident raised questions about how closely the highly visible spot on Market Street, one of Philadelphia’s signature boulevards, was being monitored, particularly amid word of the demolition contractor’s many legal and financial troubles. Officials from the U.S. Department of Labor and Occupational Safety and Health Administration were at the scene.

For weeks, people working nearby had watched with growing concern as a crew took down the vacant four-story building next to a Salvation Army thrift store at the edge of downtown.

A roofer atop another building didn’t think the operation looked safe. A pair of window washers across the street spotted an unbraced, 30-foot section of wall and predicted among themselves the whole building would simply fall down.

On Wednesday, that’s what happened. The unstable shell of a building collapsed into a massive heap of bricks and splintered wood, taking part of the thrift store with it.

“Our thoughts and our prayers go out to those who lost their lives, and their families,” Mayor Michael Nutter said at a late-night news conference at which he announced the death toll. “At the same time, we pray that those who survive will recover not only physically, but certainly mentally from the trauma of being in a building and it suddenly collapses.”

Witnesses said they heard a loud rumbling sound immediately before the collapse.

Nice gesture helps Florida widow, 84, win big jackpot

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — When Gloria C. MacKenzie went to a Florida supermarket near Tampa last month to buy a Powerball ticket, another person in line did something nice for the 84-year-old widow.

“While in line at Publix, another lottery player was kind enough to let me go ahead of them in line to purchase the winning Quick Pick ticket,” she said in a statement Wednesday.

The nice gesture turned out to be a life-changing one for MacKenzie and her family. She came forward Wednesday to claim the biggest undivided lottery jackpot in history, $590 million.

A retiree from Maine and a mother of four who lives in a modest, tin-roof house in Zephyrhills, Fla., where the lone winning ticket in the May 18 drawing was sold, MacKenzie took her prize in a lump sum of just over $370 million. After federal taxes, she is getting about $278 million, lottery officials said.

Wearing large sunglasses and dressed in a pink sweater and white pants, she clasped her son’s arm after visiting the lottery offices as they made their way to a silver Ford Focus and left quickly. She did not speak to a crowd of reporters outside the building. She was accompanied by two unidentified attorneys.

MacKenzie bought the winning ticket at a Publix supermarket in the town of about 13,300, which is 30 miles northeast of Tampa. It is best known for the bottled spring water that bears its name — and now, for one of the biggest lottery winners of all time.

The $590 million was the second-largest lottery jackpot in history, behind a $656 million Mega Millions prize in March 2012, but that sum was split, with three winning tickets.

MacKenzie let the lottery computers generate the numbers at random. She said she had previously bought four other tickets for the drawing.

WORLD DIGEST

Turkish leader slightly mellows his tone

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkish Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan appears to have moderated his rhetoric regarding the anti-government protests in his country.

Speaking at a news conference in Tunisia today, Erdogan acknowledged that some Turks have been involved in the protests out of environmental concerns. But he suggested his government would press ahead with redevelopment plans for Istanbul that sparked the nearly week-long unrest.

He also insisted that some "terror groups" were involved in the demonstrations. His comments were carried by Turkey's state-run Anadolu Agency.

All eyes were turned on his tone, which could be decisive in determining whether the protests fizzle out or rage on and continue to shake his mainly Muslim but secular country, which has been touted as a model of stability in the region.

Study shows origins of French winemaking

PARIS (AP) — Scrapings from the bottoms of 2,500-year-old pottery containers have shed new light on the origins of French winemaking.

A team of archaeologists led by University of Pennsylvania's Patrick McGovern used biomolecular analysis to confirm that fifth-century B.C. Etruscan amphorae found near Montpellier in southern France once contained a type of wine flavored with thyme, rosemary and basil.

Archaeological evidence and ancient texts have long provided reasonable certainty that seafaring Etruscans from central Italy introduced imported wine to their trading outpost of Lattara, now the French city of Lattes. The new evidence backs this up.

The study, published in the May 1, 2013 issue of Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, also demonstrates that local Celts had begun making wine at Lattara by the end of the fifth century B.C.

Venezuela frees U.S. filmmaker jailed as spy

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — A U.S. filmmaker jailed for alleged espionage in Venezuela was expelled from the country and returned to the United States on Wednesday in a gesture that could signal a thaw in tense relations between the two countries.

The release of Timothy Tracy, 35, occurred just hours before the top diplomats of both countries agreed during a meeting in Guatemala to discuss restoring ambassador-level relations.

It was secured with the help of former U.S. Rep. William Delahunt, who has long worked to improve often strained U.S.-Venezuelan ties and was hired by Tracy's family as an attorney in the case.

Eurozone recovery proves elusive

LONDON (AP) — Several economic figures for the 17 EU countries that use the euro all showed the same thing Wednesday — there's no sign of a recovery from recession.

Eurostat, the European Union's statistics office, confirmed that the eurozone's economy as a whole shrank 0.2 percent in the first quarter of the year from the previous three-month period, with most sectors declining. Both companies and consumers have shown little willingness to invest and spend as they struggle with high debt, tight credit markets and record unemployment of 12.2 percent across the eurozone. As a result, the bloc's economy has shrunk for six straight quarters.

Though the performance is not uniform across the eurozone and was slightly better than the previous quarter's 0.6 percent contraction, Eurostat confirmed that nine of the region's 17 members have seen their economies shrink for at least two quarters, the common definition of a recession. They are Cyprus, Finland, France, Greece, Italy, the Netherlands, Portugal, Slovenia and Spain.

Austria withdrawing its U.N. Peacekeepers from Golan

VIENNA (AP) — Austria announced today that it is withdrawing the country's 377 U.N. peacekeepers from the Golan Heights after the Syrian conflict briefly spilled over to an area near their position.

In a statement, Chancellor Werner Fayman and Foreign Minister Michael Spindelegger said that "the development ... has shown that further waiting can no longer be justified."

Rebels briefly overran a border position near the destroyed city of Kuneitra early today before Syrian government troops retook it. The peacekeepers receive most of their supplies through that position from Israel.

Austria's soldiers make up the largest contingent of the approximately 900 U.N. peacekeepers posted to the Golan Heights separating Syria and Israel.

There has been an Austrian U.N. peacekeeping force present there since the start of the Golan mission in 1974 to separate Israeli and Syrian forces.

The two Middle East adversaries agreed to creation of the U.N. Disengagement Observer Force after Syria launched military action in 1973, in a failed effort to retake the area it lost to Israel in 1967.

The Philippines and India also have peacekeepers posted to the Golan. Croatia withdrew its contingent in March.

The Philippine military announced that one of the country's peacekeepers was wounded earlier today during fighting between Syrian government and rebel forces.

The soldier suffered a leg injury from an artillery or mortar shell that landed at Camp Ziouni, a logistics base for the U.N. force. He was in stable condition.

French unemployment rises to 10.8 percent

PARIS (AP) — French unemployment continued its nearly two-year rise today, increasing to 10.8 percent in the first quarter, according to an estimate from the national statistics agency.

The Insee agency said that unemployment rose from 10.5 percent at the end of 2012. It had originally reported unemployment was 10.6 percent in the fourth quarter.

French President Francois Hollande has promised to reverse the rise in unemployment by the end of this year, but that is looking increasingly unlikely. Some economists say it won't peak until at least next year.

According to Eurostat, the European statistics agency, which calculates the figure differently, unemployment is already at 11 percent in France.

Joblessness has been rising in the country since mid-2011, but France has not seen the astronomically high unemployment rates of its neighbors, like Spain. And it has been slower than other European countries to cut spending and reform its labor market and benefits system.

There are concerns that the worst is yet to come for France. Its economy is now officially in recession again, after gross domestic product shrank 0.2 percent in the first quarter.

Bible's strong comeback surprises secular Norway

OSLO, Norway (AP) — It may sound like an unlikely No. 1 best-seller for any country, but in Norway — one of the most secular nations in an increasingly godless Europe — the runaway popularity of the Bible has caught the country by surprise. The Scriptures, in a new Norwegian language version, even outpaced "Fifty Shades of Grey" to become Norway's best-selling book.

The sudden burst of interest in God's word has also spread to the stage, with a six-hour play called "Bibelen," Norwegian for "the Bible," drawing 16,000 people in a three-month run that recently ended at one of Oslo's most prominent theaters.

Officials of the Lutheran Church of Norway have stopped short of calling it a spiritual awakening, but they see the newfound interest in the Bible as proof that it still resonates in a country where only 1 percent of the 5 million residents regularly attends church.

Scholars aren't surprised at the success of the plays or the new Bible translation, explaining that faith is a deeply personal matter in this nation of taciturn Scandinavians who regularly withdraw from city life to spend holidays at remote cottages in the solitude of the mountains, fjords and forests.

"Church attendance is a poor measure of the Norwegian state of faith," said post-doctoral fellow Thorgeir Kolhus at the University of Oslo. "Religion is a very private thing for Norwegians."

China's frustration with North Korea offers hope for U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — China's growing frustration with longtime ally North Korea offers the United States a glimmer of hope about a once unthinkable prospect: holding discussions between Washington and Beijing about what to do if the government in Pyongyang collapses.

There is no sign that the North Korean regime is in danger or that U.S. President Barack Obama and Chinese President Xi Jinping will discuss that possibility when they meet this week in California. Any such talk would alarm North Korea if word got out.

But in China, talk of a North Korean collapse is no longer the taboo subject it once was. Academics are increasingly willing to discuss it and a former top U.S. admiral said he has detected, during informal meetings, a willingness of Chinese officials to consider such discussions.

That reflects internal debate in China and dismay about North Korean brinkmanship in the aftermath of rocket and nuclear tests this winter that defied China, which supplies the North with crucial food, energy and diplomatic support.

North Korean leader Kim Jong Un appears to have consolidated control since taking power, and the spike in tension that followed its February nuclear test has eased in recent weeks. But there's a perennial threat of fighting with South Korea on one of the world's most militarized frontiers. China would want to avoid any conflict that could draw in its forces from the North, and U.S. forces from South Korea, as during the 1950-53 Korean War. Both

Koreas to talk on reopening joint factory

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — North and South Korea today agreed to hold talks on reopening a jointly run factory complex and other cross-border issues, after months of deteriorating relations and a day before a U.S.-China summit in which the North is expected to be a key topic.

The envisioned talks could help rebuild avenues of inter-Korean cooperation that were obliterated in recent years amid headline stances by both countries, though the key issue isolating the North from the world community — its nuclear program — is not up for debate.

powers would be concerned about the fate of North Korea's arsenal of chemical weapons, missiles and nuclear weapons and facilities.

But China also has reason to fear a North Korean collapse. That could trigger an exodus of hungry refugees across its border and lead to a reunified Korea allied with the United States, hosting American troops on China's doorstep.

Analysts say that until Chinese leaders decide among themselves what kind of outcome they are prepared to accept on the Korean Peninsula, they won't discuss the subject with U.S. officials. Still, they see some changes in China's attitude.

Court: Girls can buy morning-after pill for now

NEW YORK (AP) — Girls of any age can buy generic versions of emergency contraception without prescriptions while the federal government appeals a judge's ruling allowing the sales, a federal appeals court said Wednesday.

The order, the latest in a series of rulings in a complex back-and-forth over access to the drug, was met with praise from advocates for girls' and women's rights and scorn from social conservatives and other opponents, who argue the drug's availability takes away the rights of parents of girls who could get it without their permission.

The brief order issued by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Manhattan permitted two-pill versions of emergency contracep-tion to immediately be sold without restrictions, but the court refused to allow unrestricted sales of Plan B One-Step until it decides the merits of the government's appeal. It did not specify why the two-pill versions were being allowed now, though it said the government failed to meet the requirements necessary to block the lower-court decision.

Department of Justice spokeswoman Allison Price said the government was reviewing the court's order.

Center for Reproductive Rights President Nancy Northup called the day of the court's order a "historic day for women's health."

"Finally, after more than a decade of politically motivated delays, women will no longer have to endure intrusive, onerous and medically unnecessary restrictions to get emergency contraception," she said in a statement.

The center's litigation director, Julie Rickelman, said the government has two weeks to decide whether to appeal the 2nd Circuit's decision on the stay to the full appeals court or the Supreme Court. Even if there is no appeal of the stay ruling, it was unclear how soon drugstores would move the two-pill emergency contraception from behind the counter. She said she hoped the pills would be available without restriction within a month.

"What it does mean is that generic two-pill products are going to be readily available to women without age restrictions, on any drugstore shelf," Rickelman said. "It'll be like buying Tylenol. You'll be able to go get it off the drugstore shelf, no ID, at the regular counter."

Anna Higgins, director of the Family Research Council's Center for Human Dignity, where she focuses on issues including conception and end-of-life care, said the ease of access to the drug was the problem. She described the court's order Wednesday as "confounding."

"Our reaction in general is a concern for the safety of young girls and the rights of parents," she said.

But Dr. Georges Benjamin, of the American Public Health Association, said the court was right to allow women of child-bearing age to have access to emergency contraception, saying he was "hopeful that the full appeals court, when it finally decides, will have the same view."

The government has appealed U.S. District Judge Edward Korman's underlying April 5 ruling, which ordered emergency contraceptives based on the hormone levonorgestrel be made available without a prescription.

The government asked the judge to suspend the effect of that ruling until the appeals court could decide the case, but the judge declined, saying the government's decision to restrict sales was "politically motivated, scientifically unjustified and contrary to agency precedent." He also said there was no basis to deny the request to make the drugs widely available.

Holder praises slain activist Evers

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Attorney General Eric Holder on Wednesday praised slain civil rights leader Medgar Evers, saying that the black activist's vision and leadership helped make it possible for Holder and President Barack Obama to rise to the positions they now hold.

During a ceremony marking the 50th anniversary of Evers' death, Holder said that Evers should be remembered as a pioneer who helped to lay the foundation for much of the nation's racial progress over the last five decades.

"In the eye of history he stands with Garvey, with Wilkins, with Malcolm and with King," Holder said, referring to black activists

"We pledge that we will never forget the man, the foundation that he laid, nor his broad shoulders that made possible the election of the first African-American president and the selection of the first African-American attorney general," Holder said.

Former President Bill Clinton and Evers' widow, Myrlie Evers-Williams, joined Holder for a wreath-laying ceremony at Arlington National Cemetery, where Evers was buried.

In December 1954, Evers became the NAACP's first field officer in Mississippi, organizing voter registration efforts and leading public investigations into the murder of Emmett Till, a 14-year-old Chicago boy who was murdered in Mississippi after being accused of flirting with a white woman.

Evers was 37 when he was shot and killed outside his home in Jackson, Miss., on June 12, 1963. The man accused of his murder, Byron De La Beckwith, was freed in 1964 after two trials ended with deadlocked all-white juries. In 1994, he was retried and found guilty of murder. He died in prison in 2001.

Clinton called Evers the first assassination victim of the civil rights struggle. The former president said it was a time when African-Americans could fight and die in combat overseas but, in many Southern states, couldn't vote or run for office.

"The next time you hear people complaining around Washington about what a rough business democracy is, we might do well to remember what it was like 50 years ago and the sacrifices that were made," he said.

"When you get angry about what you see and frustrated in Syria and the aftermath of the Arab Spring, remember 1963 when we lost a genuine soldier, citizen, hero, and left his wife to chart her own course for 50 years."

After Evers' death, Evers-Williams worked as a civil rights advocate and was chairwoman of the NAACP, continuing the work of her late husband.

VERIZON

Scope of records is unusual

The Guardian said.

The broad, unlimited nature of the records being handed over to the NSA is unusual. FISA court orders typically direct the production of records pertaining to a specific named target suspected of being an agent of a terrorist group or foreign state, or a finite set of individually named targets. NSA warrantless wiretapping during the George W. Bush administration after the 9/11 attacks was very controversial.

The FISA court order, signed by Judge Roger Vinson, compelled Verizon to produce to the NSA electronic copies of "all call detail records or telephony metadata created by Verizon for communications between the United States and abroad" or "wholly within the United States, including local telephone calls," The Guardian said.

The law on which the order explicitly relies is the "business records" provision of the USA Patriot Act.

Scientists: Put wild mustangs on the pill

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A scathing independent scientific review of wild horse roundups in the West concludes the U.S. government would be better off investing in widespread fertility control of the mustangs and let nature cull any excess herds instead of spending millions to house them in overflowing holding pens.

A 14-member panel assembled by the National Science Academy's National Research Council, at the request of the Bureau of Land Management, concluded BLM's removal of nearly 100,000 horses from the Western range over the past decade is probably having the opposite effect of its intention to ease ecological damage and reduce overpopulated herds.

By stepping in prematurely when food and water supplies remain adequate, and with most natural predators long gone, the land management agency is producing artificial conditions that ultimately serve to perpetuate

Ducks are doing fine on diamond

I was following Oregon's NCAA regional baseball game against Rice on Monday when a comment on Twitter stunned me.

The Ducks were losing to the Owls, and being eliminated from the NCAA tournament in the process, when an Oregon fan tweeted out that the "baseball project" must be a failure for the Ducks, because it's been five seasons since Oregon restored its program and the team still hasn't reached the College World Series.

A couple of people who closely follow the program instantly called out the guy for his preposterous comment.

How ridiculous to think any school, no matter how much money Nike pours into the program, should reach such lofty heights so quickly. Only eight schools make it to the World Series each year.

Of course, standards are higher in Eugene.

After all, the football team has been to elite bowl games the past few seasons, the volleyball team reached the championship last fall, and the women's cross country and indoor track teams both won national titles.

Both the men's and women's outdoor track teams are expected to be among the best teams at this week's NCAA meet at Hayward Field, and the softball team reached the Women's College World Series last year and won the Pac-12 title this spring.

The men's basketball team won the Pac-12 tournament and made a run to the Sweet 16. And the acrobatics and tumbling team — created for Title IX purposes when Oregon added baseball — won its third straight national title, though only a few schools offer that sport at the varsity level.

So Oregon fans have been spoiled, and some automatically expect the best.

The only major sport at Oregon that has consistently struggled the past few years has been the women's basketball team.

What about the baseball team?

Within five seasons, the Ducks went from not having a program to hosting the regional round two years in a row, finishing second in the Pac-12 both seasons. I can't imagine any standard by which that wouldn't be considered a success.

Oregon announced it was restoring baseball shortly after Oregon State won back-to-back national championships. The Beavers haven't made it back to the World Series since then, though they hope to advance when they host Kansas State in the super regionals this weekend.

I can't imagine expecting more success from Oregon on the field. Certainly, Duck fans can hope for more, but it's unrealistic to think a program so young would be an annual College World Series participant.

If there's anything to be disappointed about, it's that there weren't more fans at PK Park for the regional games. Of course, the same could be said for Oregon's basketball games — both men's and women's — at the new Matthew Knight Arena.

Granted, the baseball team was competing for an audience with the Pre Classic and its annual sell-out crowd on Sunday, when the baseball numbers were their lowest. But the Ducks didn't draw particularly well the other three days, either.

A team on the verge of advancing in the baseball tournament deserves the near-capacity crowds the Beavers were getting in Corvallis over the same weekend.

That's something to tweet about.

Pirate camp gives players a head start

BY GEORGE ARTSITAS
 The World

COOS BAY — More than 20 years after it was started, Marshfield's youth football camp still draws throngs of local youngsters.

Around 140 kids in grades 1 through 8 have been spending their afternoons at Marshfield's football field this week.

The camp started shortly after Kent Wigle started coaching the Pirates in 1989.

Current Marshfield head coach Justin Ainsworth took over four years ago. Ainsworth says the camp is more about drumming up excitement for the South Coast Youth Football League, for players in grades 3 through 6, than about developing future Pirates.

"Everybody thinks they're a quarterback or a tailback," Ainsworth said. "Were trying to expose them to the different drills and different positions in the game, because you don't know at this age what they're going to be. That's all going to work itself out."

The camp is two hours each day and starts off with plyometrics to warm up. Then the players rotate through drills covering skill sets for specific positions. The last 35 minutes is reserved for touch football scrimmages. Some of the drills are even plucked right from Marshfield's practice.

"These kids have done it so many times, especially some of these seventh- and eighth-graders, they're almost on autopilot," Ainsworth said.

Andrew Dunning is one eighth-grader who's new to the program. He has been playing football for three years and will play at Millicoma Intermediate School this year, but this is his first year at the camp. He's excited to play on a nice field and soak up some solid coaching.

"Our field has dry spots, brown spots and little patches of green," Dunning said. "Learning new things about playing the games. We've already learned some new things."

Ainsworth recruits some of his current Pirates to help out with the camp. Bill Fields, a junior offensive lineman, has been coming to the camp since he was in fourth grade. He runs some of the drills and finds the experience rewarding.

Christopher Campbell, 7, runs at a tackling dummy during the Pirate Football Camp at Marshfield High School on Wednesday.

"It's a lot of fun; it's not work," Fields said. "It's really a nice feeling knowing they come out, they're happy to be here, they want to see us, and they want to play football."

Bassett reaches steeplechase final

THE WORLD

EUGENE — Marshfield graduate Jared Bassett cruised into the final for the 3,000-meter steeplechase at the NCAA track and field championships Wednesday.

Bassett finished fourth in his heat of the event to earn his spot in the final, which will include 12 runners Friday.

Bassett was timed in 8 minutes, 43.23 seconds. Anthony Rotich of Texas-El Paso, who also was in Bassett's heat, posted the fastest time Wednesday, finishing in 8:32.50. Six of the eight fastest runners were in that heat.

Bassett is the only runner from the University of Portland who qualified for the meet. The fifth-year senior graduated with a nursing degree earlier this school year.

Kenyan wins NCAA 10,000

EUGENE (AP) — Iowa State senior Betsy Saina was so disappointed by her second-place finish in the 5,000 meters at the NCAA indoor championships that she resolved to end her college career on a better note.

Pressured all the way by Wichita State's Aliphine Tuliamuk-Bolton, Saina pushed at the end to win the 10,000 at the NCAA outdoor track and field championships Wednesday night at Hayward Field.

"I needed my happiness back," she said. "I needed my smile."

Saina took the lead for good with about four laps to go and surged down the stretch to win in 33 minutes, 8.85 seconds. Tuliamuk-Bolton was second in 33:14.12.

The Kenyan also won the 2012 indoor 5,000 and the individual cross country championship last November. She ran the 10,000 this year at the Payton Jordan Cardinal invitational in 31:37.22, the third-best collegiate time ever run.

And she's not done quite yet: Saina also plans to compete Friday in the 5,000.

Other winners on the meet's opening day included senior Chelsea Cassulo of Arizona State, who won the women's hammer with a throw of 226 feet, 9 inches, the first title in the event in Sun Devils' history.

Seattle's Kyle Seager, center, is greeted at home following his grand slam against the Chicago White Sox in the 14th inning Wednesday.

Mariners rally in 14th, lose in 15th

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEATTLE — After each team scored five runs in the 14th inning to break open a scoreless tie, Alejandro De Aza and Alex Rios hit RBI singles in the 16th and the Chicago White Sox stopped an eight-game losing streak by beating Seattle 7-5 Wednesday.

According to the Mariners, with information from Elias Sports Bureau, it was the first game in major league history when each team scored five or more runs in the game when it was 0-0 through the ninth.

Addison Reed (2-0) got the win despite allowing Kyle Seager's tying grand slam with two outs in the 14th. Seager became the first player to hit a tying slam in extra innings.

Hector Noesi (0-1) took the loss.

Astros 11, Orioles 7: The Houston Astros hit six home runs and won for the seventh time in eight games, beating Baltimore.

Jason Castro, Carlos Pena and J.D. Martinez each had two-run homers, and Jose Altuve, Matt Dominguez and Marwin Gonzalez added solo shots as the Astros came one home run shy of a single-game franchise record for home runs.

Royals 4, Twins 1: Jeremy Guthrie lasted six shaky innings and the Kansas City bullpen held off Minnesota Twins the rest of the way, wrapping up a victory that ended the Royals' franchise-record 11-game home losing streak.

The Twins jumped out to a first-inning lead off Guthrie (6-3), but the right-hander escaped a bases-loaded jam with the help of a nice catch by first baseman Eric Hosmer to prevent any additional damage.

Yankees 6, Indians 4: CC Sabathia (6-4) retired the first 14 batters and pitched his first complete game of the season, leading the New York Yankees over Cleveland for a three-game sweep.

Travis Hafner and Brett Gardner homered for the Yankees.

Rangers 3, Red Sox 2: Elvis Andrus hit a tiebreaking, two-run double in the seventh inning after earlier ending a 1-for-18 slump and the Texas Rangers beat Boston.

Neal Cotts (1-0) got the win despite walking three of the four batters he faced. Joe Nathan pitched the ninth for his 18th save in 19 chances.

Rays 3, Tigers 0: Matt Joyce hit a sacrifice fly to break a scoreless tie in the ninth inning, lifting the Tampa Bay Rays over Detroit.

Evan Longoria added an RBI single later in the ninth off Doug Fister (5-3), who pitched well again for the Tigers but got no offensive support.

Rockies batter fill-in Cincinnati starter

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Carlos Gonzalez tied his career high with three of Colorado's six homers, and Troy Tulowitzki went 5-for-5 with a pair of homers Wednesday night, powering the Rockies to a 12-4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The Rockies hadn't hit six homers in a game since they had that many against the Marlins on July 4, 2008, according to STATS LLC.

Gonzalez got Colorado's splurge going with a solo shot and a three-run drive off Pedro Villarreal (0-1), who was roughed up by one of the NL's top offenses in his first big league start. Tulowitzki tied his career high with five hits, including a two-run homer and a solo shot.

Todd Helton also homered as the Rockies piled up a season-high 20 hits, the most allowed by Cincinnati since 2009. The Reds came in with the second-best earned run average in the NL.

Arizona 10, Cardinals 3: Paul Goldschmidt hit his second grand slam in five days for Arizona, and Wade Miley bounced back from his two worst outings of the season.

Arizona has won four of five. St. Louis, with the best record in the majors, dropped back-to-back games for the first time since April 28-29.

Goldschmidt became the first Arizona player with two slams on the same road trip. He hit one in a 12-4 win at the Chicago Cubs on Saturday.

The Associated Press
Colorado's Carlos Gonzalez watches his two-run home run against the Cincinnati Reds in the eighth inning Wednesday. Gonzalez hit three homers in the game.

Miley (4-5) gave up three runs and 11 hits over 6 2-3 innings. He had given up seven earned runs in each of his previous two starts.

Braves 5, Pirates 0: Julio Teheran carried a no-hitter into the eighth inning, leading Atlanta to the win.

Pinch hitter Brandon Inge singled to left with two outs in the eighth for Pittsburgh's only hit of the game. Teheran (4-2) then received an ovation from Braves fans, who also cheered after the inning ended on Starling Marte's popup. Teheran finished with 11 strikeouts.

Padres 6, Dodgers 2: Jason Marquis took a no-hitter into the sixth inning and the Padres rebounded after dropping the first two games of the series.

Marquis (7-2) had his no-hitter broken up when Skip Schumaker doubled to deep center field with two outs in the sixth. Adrian Gonzalez followed with a RBI single that trimmed San Diego's lead to 3-1.

Phillies 6, Marlins 1: Cole Hamels had a season-high 11 strikeouts in seven dominant innings, Domonic Brown hit another homer and the Phillies completed a three-game series sweep.

Hamels (2-9) allowed one run and four hits to snap a personal six-game losing streak. Brown has 10 homers in the last 12 games and leads the NL with 18.

Mets 10, Nationals 1: Marlon Byrd maintained his mastery of Dan Haren with a pair of home runs, and the Mets snapped a four-game losing streak.

The win put the Mets above .400 and the Nationals below .500 — a succinct reflection of the mixed fortunes of both clubs — and also dropped preseason favorite Washington to third place behind Philadelphia in the NL East. The Nationals trail division-leading Atlanta by eight games.

INTERLEAGUE

Athletics 6, Brewers 1: Bartolo Colon (7-2) won his fourth straight start and Brandon Moss hit a three-run homer to power the Athletics to the victory.

Oakland has won 16 of its last 19 games.

Blue Jays 4, Giants 0: R.A. Dickey (5-7) allowed two hits in 8 1-3 innings and sparked a four-run fifth inning with an RBI double, helping Toronto to a split of the two-game series.

Barry Zito (4-4) was done in by the one big inning and lost at home for the first time since last August. The defending World Series champion Giants have lost 11 of 18 games heading into a nine-game road trip.

Cubs 8, Angels 6, 10 innings: Anthony Rizzo hit a three-run double in the 10th inning and the Chicago Cubs overcame a pair of homers by Mark Trumbo to beat the Los Angeles Angels.

Cody Ransom added a three-run homer for the Cubs.

Karl's departure comes shortly after Masai Ujiri, the league's executive of the year, left to become general manager of the Toronto Raptors.

Karl guided the third-youngest team in the NBA to the third-best record in the Western Conference with a franchise-record 57 wins, but the Nuggets were bounced from the first round of the playoffs for the fourth straight season.

He had one more year on his contract. The news was first reported by Yahoo! Sports.

Clinic founder Anthony Bosch has agreed to talk with MLB, according to numerous reports, and union head Michael Weiner said the commissioner's office has assured the union that "no decisions regarding discipline have been made or will be made until those interviews are completed."

Alex Rodriguez, Ryan Braun, Nelson Cruz, Melky Cabrera and Bartolo Colon are among more than a dozen players whose names have been tied to the now-closed clinic, Biogenesis of America.

Nationals put Strasburg back on disabled list

WASHINGTON — The Washington Nationals placed pitcher Stephen Strasburg on the 15-day disabled list because of a strained muscle in his back.

The Nationals made the move after Strasburg skipped a scheduled bullpen session. The session was supposed to determine whether he could make a start Saturday. Strasburg was removed after two innings in his last start, Friday against Atlanta, because he was grimacing and flexing his shoulder.

Strasburg is 3-5 with a 2.54 ERA. He was 15-6 with a 3.16 ERA last season, when the Nationals made the much-debated decision to shut him down before the playoffs because of a team-imposed innings limit in his first full season following elbow surgery.

Brazil drops to No. 22 in FIFA's world rankings

ZURICH — Brazil has dropped to a historic low of No. 22 in the FIFA rankings a year out from hosting the World Cup, and the United States rises one place to No. 28.

The South American country can make up ground when it hosts the eight-nation Confederations Cup warm-up event this month.

World and European champion Spain stays at the top. Germany, Argentina and Croatia are next.

Solo returns to U.S. team for matches

CHICAGO — Star goalkeeper Hope Solo is back with the national team.

Solo was one of 23 players chosen by coach Tom Sermanni on Wednesday to prepare for two games against South Korea. Solo has been out since having left wrist surgery in March.

Solo, who has 135 international appearances, will be available for both matches, her first time back with the U.S. women since February. The Americans will play South Korea on June 15 in Foxborough, Mass., and five days later in Harrison, N.J.

Sermanni chose 18 of the 21 players who trained in Canada for a week leading up to a 3-0 victory against the host country last Sunday in Toronto. He also added Solo, midfielder Megan Rapinoe, who will have completed her season with Lyon, France; midfielder Yael Averbuch (Gyteborg in Sweden); and defender Meghan Klingenberg (Tyresv in Sweden).

Rain postpones first round at LPGA major

PITTSFORD, N.Y. — A steady rain punctuated by heavy downpours has forced the postponement of the first round of the LPGA Championship today.

The LPGA's second major of the year will begin Friday morning, the second round will be staged on Saturday, and the players will attempt to complete 36 holes on Sunday, the LPGA said.

Two weeks ago at the Bahamas LPGA Classic, the course was closed for two days because of severe flooding, and when the tournament finally got under way it was shortened to 12 holes.

Astros again have top pick in baseball draft

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros have improved their farm system from worst to near first in the last couple of years.

Tonight, they'll have a chance to boost their young talent again when they pick first overall in the draft for the second consecutive year.

In 2012, they selected high school shortstop Carlos Correa with the No. 1 pick. This year they'll look to add another top-tier player to help with their long-term rebuilding process.

General manager Jeff Luhnow said they have whittled their list to between three and eight players, but both he and scouting director Mike Elias insist they haven't zeroed in on a choice yet.

"The decision will be made at some point on Thursday," Elias said. "We continue to have discussions all week. We get as much information in front of us as possible and we hear from every voice, and we don't feel like there's any need or advantage to making the decision earlier than we have to."

Top prospects in this year's group include Oklahoma pitcher Jonathan Gray and Stanford pitcher Mark Appel. Gray has been drafted twice before and Appel was taken eighth overall by the Pirates last season, but returned for his senior season after failing to work out a deal with the Pirates.

There's also San Diego slugger Kris Bryant, who hit .329 with 31 homers, 62 RBIs and an .820 slugging percentage as a junior. Another strong hitting prospect is North Carolina third baseman Colin Moran, who hit .348 with 86 RBIs this year.

If Houston wants to go the high school route again, there's a duo of Georgia outfielders at the top of the heap in Clint Frazier and Austin Meadows. Frazier is a speedy player who many believe has advanced hitting skills for a high schooler. Meadows seems to have a bigger upside than Frazier, but his skills are more raw. Still, his athleticism and defensive skills, coupled with his left-handed hitting, have him among the top talents in this draft.

Another interesting top prospect is Houston high school pitcher Kohl Stewart. Signability could be an issue with Stewart because he's also a star quarterback who is committed to play at Texas A&M in the fall.

Texas A&M coach Kevin Sumlin said Wednesday he's had several conversations with Stewart and his family, but doesn't know which way he's leaning. Either way the Aggies have told him they would welcome him into the program later if he decides to try baseball first, like former Oklahoma State quarterback Brandon Weeden did.

James can avenge 2007 loss to Spurs

San Antonio beat Cavs in LeBron's first trip to Finals

MIAMI (AP) — Before reaching the top of basketball, LeBron James was run over by the San Antonio Spurs.

The Spurs swept James' Cleveland Cavaliers in the 2007 NBA Finals, so long ago that the winning game plan focused on exploiting James' weaknesses. Those are nearly impossible to find now, and James essentially warned the Spurs that they shouldn't bother looking.

The Spurs already know. "He'll be a lot more of a problem than he was in '07, that's for sure," Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said Wednesday.

Tim Duncan told the beaten James minutes after that series that the league would someday belong to him, and he was right. The NBA's MVP guided Miami to last year's championship and the league's best record this season.

Now the Spurs will try to take it back.

But James is now the best player in the game, is surrounded by more talent in Miami than he ever had in Cleveland, and still carries the memory of the beating the Spurs laid on him six years ago.

"I have something in me that they took in '07. Beat us on our home floor, celebrated on our home floor. I won't forget that. You shouldn't as a competitor. You should never forget that," James said.

He joined the Heat in 2010, experienced more finals failure a year later, then was finals MVP last year when Miami beat Oklahoma City in five games. Another title now would put him halfway to the four that Duncan and Popovich have won together.

"That's what I'm here for," James said. "I'm here to win championships, and you're not always going to be on the successful side. I've seen it twice, not being on the successful side."

He was just 22 at the end of his fourth year in the league when he carried to the Cavs to their first finals appearance. But there were no wins in his game, from an unreliable jump shot to an undeveloped post game, and the Spurs took advantage of every one of them.

James shot 36 percent in the series, including a ghastly 10 for 30 in Game 4, and committed 23 turnovers.

"Well, LeBron is a different player than he was in '07," Popovich said. "That was like ancient history. He was basically a neophyte at the time, wondering how all this stuff worked and how it's put together. We were very fortunate at that time to get him so early. But at this point he's grown."

James wasn't interested in discussing much of that series, but he recalled the way the Spurs' strategy kept him from getting into the paint and dared him to shoot jumpers.

There's no blueprint now that would encourage a guy who made 56.5 percent of his shots this season to shoot the ball.

"If you go under my pick-and-roll now, I'm going to shoot. And I'm confident I'm going to make every last one of them," James said. "I'm just more confident in my ability to shoot the ball."

"But at the same time, I also have a lot more weapons this time around going against this team, where in '07 they loaded three guys to me a lot on the strong side of the floor. So like I said, I'm a better player, and you can't dare me to do anything I don't want to do in 2013."

Sharapova reaches French Open final

PARIS (AP) — Defending champion Maria Sharapova overcame 11 double-faults and earned a return trip to the French Open final today, beating Victoria Azarenka 6-1, 2-6, 6-4 in a match punctuated by shrieks and grunts.

Sharapova's opponent Saturday will be the winner of the semifinal between No. 1 Serena Williams and Sara Errani. Sharapova beat Errani in the final last year to complete a career Grand Slam.

The two most notorious grunTERS in tennis wailed with nearly every swing, matching pitch and volume. Their shots were much less consistent. Sharapova hit 12 aces but was erratic with her second serve, and her groundstrokes were also unpredictable.

She needed five match points to seal the victory. Serving for the match for the second time, she held at love, finishing with an ace.

Frantisek Cermak and Lucie Hradecka of the Czech Republic won the French Open mixed doubles title today, beating Daniel Nestor of Canada and Kristina Mladenovic of France 1-6, 6-4, 10-6.

In the super tiebreaker, the Czechs won four straight points to go up 9-5 and clinched victory when Mladenovic netted a backhand volley.

It's the second Grand Slam title for Hradecka, who also won the 2011 women's doubles title, and the first for Cermak. The pair lost in the Australian Open final in January.

Meanwhile, Rafael Nadal is on another roll at the French Open, winning his past 12 sets heading into a semifinal showdown Friday against top-ranked Novak Djokovic.

After falling behind in each of his first three matches, Nadal looks dominant again. He swept Stanislas Wawrinka in the quarterfinals Wednesday and is 57-1 at Roland Garros and on the verge of becoming the first man to win eight titles at the same Grand Slam event.

Djokovic, meanwhile, also won in straight sets, beating Tommy Haas 3-6, 7-6 (5), 7-5.

The Nadal-Djokovic winner will play for the title Sunday against No. 4-seeded David Ferrer or No. 6 Jo-Wilfried Tsonga, who meet in the other semifinal.

Orb is Belmont favorite

NEW YORK (AP) — Back home again, Kentucky Derby winner Orb is the horse to beat in the Belmont Stakes.

Orb was made the 3-1 morning-line favorite in a field of 14 entered for Saturday's final leg of the Triple Crown at Belmont Park, and trainer Shug McGaughey is confident his colt can bounce back from his fourth-place finish behind Oxbow in the Preakness.

"He's been here for three weeks, and I think it has to be a help not only mentally but being familiar with the footing as well," McGaughey said. "He's done well here and trained well here. ... I'm going to strike a line through the Preakness. It wasn't his day. It was (trainer) Wayne Lukas and Oxbow and Gary Stevens' day. We're going to regroup and hopefully you'll see the right horse here on Saturday."

Orb drew the No. 5 post Wednesday, with Oxbow two gates over in No. 7. Revolutionary, one of trainer Todd Pletcher's record five entries, is the second choice at 9-2. Oxbow is next at 5-1.

"I think Shug has established his horse as the favorite today, and that's right," said Lukas, who has won a record 14 Triple Crown races, including the Belmont four times. "But I think he knows he has to take care of business in getting us out of the way, too."

The field for the 1 1/2-mile Belmont is the largest since 1996, when Lukas won the race with Editor's Note.

"It's a great advantage to be on your home court, where you train your horses," said Lukas, who used to have a Belmont-based stable. "They don't have to ship in and get settled, and then get over the surface. They've already been doing that."

Orb, under Joel Rosario, navigated his way past 16 rivals in the final half mile of the Derby to win by 2 1/2 lengths. In the Preakness, Orb was unable to find running room outside after breaking from the rail, and Oxbow led wire-to-wire under Gary Stevens.

McGaughey is well-versed in what it takes to deal with the Belmont — one long trip around the spacious oval.

"The jockey is really going to have to read the race — it's what separates the top riders from some of those that aren't," said McGaughey, who won the Belmont with Easy Goer in 1989 and spoiled Sunday Silence's Triple Crown try. "If you turn down the backside at Belmont, it's not like turning down the backside at Churchill Downs, or Pimlico or the Fair Grounds.

"You've got a long way to go, and big open space through there, and you better be patient. If you're not, it's going to get to you."

Orb comes into the race with five wins in nine starts for owners Ogden Mills "Dinny" Phipps and Stuart Janney III, while Oxbow's Preakness win was just his third win in 11 starts for Calumet Farm.

Pletcher is looking for his second Belmont win. He won it in 2007 with the filly Rags to Riches, and Unlimited Budget could make him 2-for-2 with his Belmont fillies if Rosie Napravnik can pull off the upset and become the second female rider to win a Triple Crown race (Julie Krone won the 1993 Belmont with Colonial Affair).

"She's a big, strong, talented filly. From a physical standpoint, she is going to match up well," Pletcher said. "My biggest concern is the mile-and-a-half, with her not as strongly bred as Rags to Riches. But she's trained very well."

Pletcher will also send out Overanalyze, Palace Malice and Midnight Taboo. Mike Repole owns Unlimited Budget, Overanalyze and Midnight Taboo.

Unlimited Budget, who won her first four starts before running third in the Kentucky Oaks, and Peter Pan winner Freedom Child are co-fourth choices at 8-1.

The last Derby-Belmont winner was Thunder Gulch in 1995, and the last Preakness-Belmont winner was Afleet Alex in 2005. The last rematch of the Derby and Preakness winners was in 2011, when Preakness winner Shackleford ran fifth and Derby winner Animal Kingdom sixth behind Ruler On Ice.

The field from the rail out is Frac Daddy (Alan Garcia, 30-1), Freedom Child (Luis Saez, 8-1), Overanalyze (John Velazquez, 12-1), Giant Finish (Edgar Prado, 30-1), Orb (Joel Rosario, 3-1), Incognito (Irad Ortiz, Jr., 20-1), Oxbow (Gary

TRACK Crouser wins men's shot put

Mississippi sophomore Sam Kendricks won the pole vault at 18-8 1/4, also the first title in the event for Ole Miss. Earlier this year at the Texas Relays, Kendricks cleared over 19 feet, giving him confidence for the championships at Hayward Field.

"The plan was to make first attempts on every jump," said Kendricks, who is coached by his dad, Scott. "And if you make first attempts on every jump, you never lose, right?"

TCU junior Lorraine Ugen won the long jump with a leap of 22-2 1/2, while Georgia freshman Freya Jones won the javelin with a throw of 180-3. Oregon sophomore Liz Brenner, who has taken part in four sports for the Ducks, finished an unexpected eighth in the javelin with a personal best of 168-8.

Oregon native Ryan Crouser, a sophomore at Texas, won the shot put at 66-7 1/4.

Southern California senior Bryshon Nellum easily advanced in the 400, finishing first in his preliminary heat in 45.42. He's doubling up in the meet and will run in the 200 semifinals today.

"The first one's always the hardest one, you know? You've got to get it out of your system," he said.

Nellum redshirted his 2009 season for the Trojans after he was shot in the legs at a party by gang members who thought he was someone else. Told he might not ever reach an elite level on the track again, Nellum beat the odds and finished third at the U.S. Olympic trials in Eugene last year — earning a spot on the team for the London Games. Nellum was part of the 1,600 relay team that won the silver medal.

In the semifinals for the 100, TCU senior Charles Silmon topped the men's field in 9.92, and sophomore Octavious Freeman of Central Florida finished in 10.99 on the women's side.

Local favorite Elijah Greer, an Oregon native who runs for the Ducks, qualified seventh for the 800 in 1:48.76. Greer, considered a favorite in the event, won the 800 at this year's NCAA indoor championships.

But the Ducks took a hit in the 400 meters, where junior standout Mike Berry failed to advance to the finals. And in the decathlon, Oregon's Dakotah Keys was in just 15th place midway through the decathlon. Their results likely leave the Ducks out of the chase for the men's team title.

Oregon's women, on the other hand, had a strong day Wednesday.

English Gardner had the second-best time in qualifying for the 100 meters and teammate Jenna Prandini also reached the final. Phyllis Francis advanced in the 400 meters and Lauren Roesler won her heat of the 800. The Ducks also won their qualifying heat in the 4x100 relay.

The only spots where the Ducks missed out on possible points were when Jillian Wear missed qualifying for the hammer final and when Chizoba Okodobe finished fifth in her heat of the 400 and did not advance to Friday's final.

Also in women's qualifying, Georgia freshman Shaunae Miller of the Bahamas topped the field in the 400 prelims, setting up a battle in the final with Arkansas senior Regina George. Stanford junior Cori Carter and Arizona senior Georganne Moline each ran under 55 seconds in their heat in the 400 hurdles, making it one of the fastest NCAA preliminaries ever run.

In the prelims of the men's 400 relay, Oregon's team featured speedy running back De'Anthony Thomas but the Ducks came in sixth in their heat and failed to qualify.

Thomas, who is known for his speed, said he's gotten faster since Oregon defeated Kansas State in the Fiesta Bowl earlier this year.

"I take track really serious. I really wish I could do it all year and really enjoy it. I came here for football, but I contribute to the track team also," he said.

Auburn's team advanced with the top time in the relay, running in 38.76.

There's no right to claim parking spot on public street

Dear Tom and Ray:

My question regards parking etiquette. Recently, a neighbor has been parking his car in front of our house on a daily/nightly basis. From what I can gather, this neighbor lives in a "group house" of about four individuals. Their driveway fits only two cars, and there's room for only one at the curb in front of the house. So, this neighbor has adopted my curb as his car's new home. While I am aware that it's technically a "public" street, this is, in my opinion, very rude — but more importantly, it's inconvenient. I have a single-lane driveway for both my car and my wife's car. I often travel to the airport and come home late at night, or have a need to travel to an early-morning meeting. So I have need to use my curb to park my car, on occasion. My car is a manual transmission, and my wife cannot drive a stick, so any movement of my car requires me to do it. As it stands, I often am forced to park down the street or around the corner from my own house. And I recently held a dinner party where my guests could not park in front of my house. We live in suburbia, not the city — everyone here has a driveway and plenty of room to park. At a minimum, it's unsightly and annoying, and very unneighborly. I've left polite notes to this neighbor letting him know these facts, and in a recent note, I mentioned "I don't park my car in front of your house, so why do you park your car in front of mine?" Do you have any advice? — Duane

RAY: Yeah: Start by apologizing. It's not "technically" a public street, Duane. It IS a public street. So you have no right to claim it as private property.

TOM: Can you ask your neighbor, as a favor, to leave that spot open for you when possible? Sure. And if you have a neighborly relationship, and he has other reasonable options, he'll probably accommodate you. But you've started off the negotiations on the wrong foot by accusing him of behaving badly.

RAY: When someone starts a conversation with you by saying, "Hey, jerk!" how open are you to helping the guy?

TOM: Now, we know, you say you started off politely. But you may think you're being more polite than you are. Saying "I don't do this rude thing to you, yet you do it to me" puts the other guy on the defensive. And since he has the law on his side, you've given up your most potent weapon: an appeal to his good nature and benevolence.

RAY: So here's what I'd do: Start over. Start by getting to know your neighbors. Nothing helps resolve a situation like seeing each other as actual human beings rather than "some jerk in a group house" or "some grouchy old guy who thinks he owns the street." Learn your neighbors' names, and find out what they do. Be neighborly first. You even might invite them over for a meal.

TOM: And poison them.
RAY: Don't listen to my brother. He's been hated in every neighborhood he's ever lived in. Once you have some kind of basic relationship established, then you'll be in a position to ask for a favor. That is, in fact, what you're asking for.

TOM: And here's the secret: Most people LIKE doing favors for other people. It feels good to help another person. They just don't like being forced to accommodate other people. So ask really nicely. Explain that you know he has every right to park anywhere on the street. But say that because of your work and family situation, it really helps you a lot if you can park in front of your house, and you're wondering if he might do you a favor and leave that space open whenever it's not inconvenient for him.

RAY: And ask him if there's anything you can do for HIM in return. It's possible that this relationship has already been poisoned, and you're just going to have to live with the life-shortening effects of having a bad neighbor. But maybe you still can turn it around.

TOM: Understanding your position (that you need a favor from him) is an important starting point in any negotiation. Good luck, Duane.

BRIDGE

Josh Billings, the pen name of humorist Henry Wheeler Shaw, said, "There are people who are always anticipating trouble, and in this way they manage to enjoy many sorrows that never really happen to them."

Bridge experts, though, are always anticipating trouble, and in this way they manage more plus scores than those who always assume everything will work out perfectly.

In today's deal, South opens and closes the auction with his three-spade bid. West leads the diamond 10. East wins with his ace and returns the diamond two. What should South do now?

The traditional requirements for a weak three-bid are two of the top three or three of the top five honors in the seven-card suit and 5-10 high-card points. These days the requirements have been lowered by many players, especially at favorable vulnerability. But it does not hurt to have a textbook hand occasionally.

North thought about raising to four spades, but knew game was unlikely. And he hoped that East might balance, allowing North to double the opponents and gain a sizeable penalty.

It is tempting for South to win the second trick on the board and immediately to play a trump. However, with this layout he would go down. West would take the trick and give his partner a diamond ruff. East would cash the heart ace, and West would get a second trump trick.

South should anticipate the 5-2 diamond break. (In theory, if East had started with three diamonds, he would have returned his higher remaining diamond, not the two.) Before touching trumps, declarer should cash dummy's top clubs and discard his third diamond.

Your Birthday:

FRIDAY, June 7, 2013

There is a strong likelihood in the year ahead that you will acquire a compassionate and understanding new pal. This relationship will produce many benefits for both parties, and will prove long-lasting.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Instead of dwelling on what you don't have, be appreciative of what you've got. Gratitude not only produces peace of mind, it also builds friendships.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Even if certain companions sometimes annoy you, concentrate on appreciating what they do right. It's imperative that you stay on the sunny side.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — If you have to work with someone whom you've disagreed with in the past, try to let bygones be bygones. It's time to learn how to work together.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Although circumstances might force you to socialize with someone whom you've been trying to avoid, don't let your true feelings show. It will only make you look bad.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Be careful about how you treat a workplace rival. Others are watching you closely, so be a gracious and fair competitor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Even if you believe your ideas are far superior to those of your companions, you should treat them fairly. A balanced conversation will only improve everyone's thinking.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Try to think beyond the material. Don't be concerned about how much you can get, but about the goodwill and consideration that you can generate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — If you are too forceful and insistent, you're apt to be disappointed. People won't want to follow a domineering leader.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Though you're aware of the plight of someone who has helped you in the past, you might take no action to alleviate matters. This would be a shame.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — When around a friend who is constantly demeaning others, don't stand idly by. Do what you can to change the situation for the better. You could be an instrument for this person's good.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Your reputation could be shaky, so tread lightly. Behave as if the whole world is just waiting for you to make a mistake.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — No argument is worth the cost of losing a friend, especially if the issue is completely unimportant. You don't always have to be the one who is right.

SATURDAY, JUNE 8, 2013

Your chart indicates far more stability in the year ahead for your social and commercial interests. Focus your efforts on succeeding in these areas.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — You may need to take a calculated risk to advance an important objective. It's OK to be bold, just don't be brash or impulsive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Chances are you'll feel better spending a small surplus on something the entire family can enjoy. Don't give in to selfish whims.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Your sphere of influence is likely to be much bigger than you realize. Friends might do things for you unasked, in hopes of earning your approval.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Be grateful for any financial benefits that come your way through the kindness of another, even if you were expecting something bigger.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Any proposal presented to you must be screened with exceptional care and patience. Don't act until you understand and have access to all the pieces.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Although your insights are likely to be clear, your methods could leave a lot to be desired. Do your best to execute your ideas with care and rigor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — You'll know exactly what you want done, but might not be able to clearly convey your thinking to others. Concentrate as best as you can on communicating your ideas.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — The chances of achieving what you want are high. However, it would be best to steer clear of entanglements with people who have no real interest in your objectives.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Honor your commitments, even if you have second thoughts about them. Stand by your word — it will pay off in the long run.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Do your job to the best of your ability. If you resist the temptation to cut corners, which could be high, you'll be able to take justifiable pride in what you accomplish.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Don't discount your judgment when it comes to handling a risky endeavor, even if a know-it-all associate attempts to cast doubt on your ideas.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — If you do something nice for a friend or an associate, try to do so without incurring a sense of obligation. Allow your good deed to stand on its own two feet.
