Local crabbers suffer

Crab catch is doing well, but market price lags

By THOMAS MORIARTY
The World

CHARLESTON — Three months in, feedback on the Oregon commercial Dungeness crab season is mixed.

In a press release Friday, Oregon Dungeness Crab Commission Administrator Hugh Link said the season's harvest has already exceeded the 2011-2012 total. The Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife delayed the start of the season more than a month due to concerns over crab meat yield.

Link said the harvest had already totaled approximately 17 million pounds of crab. For comparison, the 2011-2012 season saw a total harvest of 14.2 million pounds.

But Charleston fisherman Jeff Reeves said it's been a lousy year for local crab boats.

"Maybe it was a big-boat season," Reeves said. "The big boats got 'em while little operations like my own starve to death."

Reeves said harvest numbers can be deceptive representations of actual commercial success. For one thing, fishermen just aren't getting the prices they're used to.

In most seasons, market prices start close to $2 a pound and will have exceeded $3 a pound by this point in the season, Reeves said.

During the 2011-2012 season, crab boats worked under a 22-day price lock at $2.30 a pound. This year, there was no price lock. In theory, this meant that crab prices should have taken off faster as the market drove up demand.

But that didn't happen. "The plants are still only paying around $3 a pound," he said.

Despite poor results, Reeves said he plans to keep fishing right up until the season's close in August.

Oregon's Dungeness crab fishery is composed of 425 limited-entry permit holders. The fishery received Marine Stewardship Council sustainability certification in 2010.

No hurry to replace Food Share director

By GAIL ELBER
The World

COOS BAY — Oregon Coast Community Action will take a month or two to decide how to replace the controversial director of South Coast Food Share.

Rollie Lobsinger's resignation was announced Monday, ending a saga of disputes with local food pantries and alleged conflicts of interest.

"We may create a position, or we may fill the position and change duties a bit," said Mike Lehman, ORCCA's executive director.

Lehman himself has been at ORCCA just two months. He said he's still learning how the organization works.

ORCCA is the South Coast's most far-reaching nonprofit agency, managing a broad range of social services. South Coast Food Share is ORCCA's food-distribution arm, supplying local food pantries as far away as Brookings. Starting in December 2011, some of those pantries publicly criticized Food Share, complaining of low-quality food and inaccurate billing. They criticized the relationship between ORCCA's then-CEO Mary Schoen-Clark and Lobsinger, who were longtime friends and had worked together at a housing agency in Iowa.

Lobsinger, who lived in a separate residence on Schoen-Clark's property, had been publicly accused of verbally abusing coworkers and volunteers.

ORCCA hired a consultant last year to help it resolve its issues, and Schoen-Clark resigned in September. The board replaced her with Lehman, a former state legislator who had been Coos County's human resources director.

Meal sites step up to fill the void

■ Crossroads Cafe's temporary closure means more business for other local food services

By TIM NOVOTNY
The World

NORTH BEND — With meals for the needy a constant issue on the South Coast, any setback can hurt. Such is the case with the temporary closure of the Crossroads Community Cafe in North Bend.

As The World reported last week, the cafe is being repaired after suffering severe water damage over Easter weekend. Cofounder Susan Fox said then that her biggest concern was for those who depend on the cafe's low-cost, home-style meals.

The Nancy Devereux Center and local senior centers probably are absorbing some of Crossroads' regulars, Fox said. But staff members at those sites aren't certain about that, partly because turnout already was rising at the Devereux Center and the North Bend Senior Center.

Melanie Harrison, the administrative assistant who oversees the free meal program at Nancy Devereux, said since she joined the cen-

Coquille man takes plea deal in sex abuse

COQUILLE — A Coquille man charged with multiple sex crimes struck a deal Monday that will prevent him from becoming a felon.

Steven Sutphin, 27, was scheduled for a court hearing Monday but reached a plea agreement with Coos County District Attorney Paul Frasier.

Sutphin originally was charged with first-degree attempted rape, first-degree unlawful sexual penetration and second-degree sexual abuse.

He was accused of trying to rape a woman Nov. 1. He pleaded guilty to touching the woman without her consent.

Both the sexual penetration and attempted rape charges were dismissed. The sexual abuse charge was reduced to a third-degree offense, which is a misdemeanor.

Sutphin must register as a sex offender until he meets all the terms of his probation. After that, he can shed his sex offender status.

Sentencing is scheduled at 8:30 a.m., April 22.

State lawmakers consider medical pot dispensaries

By LAUREN GAMBINO
The Associated Press

SALEM — State lawmakers in Oregon are considering a bill that would make medical marijuana dispensaries legal amid arguments that the state's 53,000 users don't always want to grow their own pot or buy directly from growers.

Dispensaries exist now in Oregon, but there is no law regulating their operations and some counties have chosen to shut them down. The proposal before the House Health Care Committee would require dispensaries to register with the state medical marijuana program and meet certain quality standards.

"Many patients do not have a grower, do not want to grow themselves, and have difficulty finding safe, reliable and legal access for the medicine they need," said Geoff Sugarman, director of Oregonians for Medical Rights and the bill's architect.

Under current law, cardholders must grow the pot themselves or find a grower to grow it for them. Sugarman said this has led to an abuse of the system.

"Marijuana being grown legally for patients is not finding its way into the hands of patients, but is instead being siphoned off into the black market," he told lawmakers.

Tom Chamberlain told lawmakers he thought it was legal to buy pot from the dispensary he uses in Portland. Chamberlain buys medical marijuana for his son, who was paralyzed last year in a car accident.

"I didn't know until recently it was illegal," he said. "Nor did I know that the products he was purchasing weren't tested, so there wasn't an

Strangulation case moves to Wednesday

THE WORLD

COQUILLE — A Coos Bay man accused of choking and kidnapping a woman has requested a brief delay of his trial.

Douglas Paul Reed, 49, was charged in January after a woman he previously had known reported being choked and assaulted. The incident allegedly took place after she walked past a house Reed was visiting on Welch Road. The woman said she was hit and dragged into the house by her neck.

Police determined that the two had known each other for five to seven years.

Reed is charged with four counts of first-degree kidnapping; one count of second-degree kidnapping; two counts of third-degree robbery; strangulation; menacing; coercion; and second-, third- and fourth-degree assault.

Kidnapping and second-degree assault are Measure 11 offenses that carry a 70-month minimum sentence if Reed is found guilty.

Reed will appear again in court at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Trial date set for CB domestic assault case

COQUILLE — A Coos Bay man will stand trial May 2 in a domestic assault case.

John Daniel Plott, 56, is charged with second-degree assault. The allegations stem from a Jan. 24 report of a domestic dispute in the 1900 block of Coos Bay's Lawnridge Loop.

Second-degree assault is a Measure 11 offense that carries a 70-month minimum sentence if Plott is found guilty.

Superheroes are fictional characters portrayed in movies and books as people who have a strong sense of responsibility and belief in justice. There are also real people in the community who have a calling to serve others, and could be called superheroes, according to the Southwestern Oregon Community College Foundation.

The Coquille Tribe is the first superhero to give $10,000 to the foundation to create a permanent scholarship fund. The Tribe has given the college more than $100,000, over the years for scholarships for tribal members, but this new permanent scholarship fund is for any SWOCC student.

Peter and Clarinda Hansen are the second superheroes to invest in a $10,000 endowed fund in honor of Henry and Elva Hansen, who lead the petition movement to begin the college in 1961.

Brenda Brecke is the third superhero. Friends and family have helped memorialize her late husband, Vernon Brecke and created an endowed scholarship fund.

The fourth superhero is the former congregation of the First Presbyterian Church of Coos Bay, which recently dissolved and gave a gift of $100,000 to the foundation.

The foundation is currently searching for new superheroes to invest $10,000 in a named scholarship fund.

Superheroes come in many forms and anyone who gives to a scholarship fund, whether you give $50 or $5,000, is a superhero in the foundation's eyes. Find out more by visiting the college website. www.socc.edu

Cheese factory sets opening

By AMY MOSS STRONG
The World

BANDON — The day has come at last. Cheese will once again be made in Bandon. Face Rock Creamery in Bandon will hold its grand opening from 1-5 p.m., May 8.

The Face Rock Creamery team will open its doors to the public with a ribbon cutting at 1 p.m. Immediately following the ribbon cutting, guests are invited to sample the creamery's aged cheddar, flavored cheddars, fresh flavored or regular curds and high-end cultured butter. Guests also can watch factory production and enjoy the view of the Bandon waterfront from the fireside tasting area.

Ongoing retail hours will be 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sundays. The factory is located at 680 Second St. S.E. on U.S. Highway 101.

Owner Greg Drobot addressed guests at a Bandon Visitor Center volunteer appreciation luncheon and has been visiting other area chambers of commerce to tell them about the soon-to-open facility.

Drobot is originally from the Seattle area and moved to Bandon in 2005 to help his father build The Colony condominiums along Beach Loop Drive. He then moved back to Seattle, but has wanted to come back to Bandon since.

"I fell in love with the area," Drobot said.

At the time he met some of the area's movers and shakers, including former Bandon Cheese Factory owner Joe Sinko, and the idea of building a new cheese factory was born.

"I think it was a dream in the rough and I knew the old cheese factory was very successful," said Drobot. "I love food and wanted to be a chef until I was about 14, probably because I love to eat, so cheese fits right with that. There's just lots of opportunities."

By Amy Moss Strong, The World
The Face Rock Creamery building along U.S. Highway 101 is nearly complete, with a public grand opening planned for May 8.

It's our 14th Anniversary!

When you need a gunslinger ...

Our view

An overtly religious legal foundation may be the perfect choice to help the city of Coos Bay handle the Mingus Park cross dispute.

What do you think?

The World welcomes letters. Email us at letters@theworldlink.com.

In old-time Westerns, when ranchers hired a gunslinger to stop cattle rustlers, they didn't ask about his political affiliations. All that mattered was whether he could shoot.

That seems to be the sound logic behind the city of Coos Bay's choice of lawyers to answer the Mingus Park cross challenge.

The city retained the Liberty Institute last week to assess the legality of the park's Vietnam War memorial, after the Wisconsin-based Freedom

From Religion Foundation objected to the cross mounted on its top. Liberty is a zealous advocate for causes dear to the religious right, having defended abortion opponents and the Boy Scouts' no-gays policy.

City Manager Rodger Craddock explained the overtly partisan choice without apology: If you want help defending a cross, you want somebody who knows how to defend crosses.

In other words, a gunslinger.

Some supporters of the Mingus cross contend it's not a religious symbol at all, but merely an emblem of remembrance for fallen soldiers. Engaging the Liberty Institute weakens that contention.

On the other hand, the institute may lend the city some valuable credibility with cross supporters. Many local veterans and devout Christians have made clear that the cross matters to them. They expect the city to fight for it. Any council member who wavers can expect backlash.

But it's a different story if the Liberty Institute advises a retreat. At this point, the institute has not proposed a court battle. It's merely evaluating the facts, in order to advise the city on its legal options. If the institute's lawyers conclude the city's case is weak (a real possibility), the council will be able to back away without enraging a vocal group of citizens.

The city's next move is uncertain. A legal opinion from Liberty may bring clarity.

Mourn for the Senate that was

WASHINGTON — What if they had a Senate race and nobody ran?

Not as fanciful as you think. It's only April and already seven lawmakers have announced they won't run again in elections still 18 months away. Almost certainly more will join them. Last year, 10 senators shied away from running.

Of all the institutions in American life, the Senate once seemed the sturdiest. Fortified with rules written by Thomas Jefferson, animated by an 18th-century Enlightenment outlook, protected by a generous sense of tenure, it had charm and stability and seemed impervious to change.

Within its walls, time stood still, in part because the traditions of the Senate defied time, because the rules of the Senate suspended time, because time could not dim the history — from Webster and Calhoun to Baker, Dole and three Kennedys — that was made within those walls.

Senators from another time regard their years in the chamber as among the richest, most rewarding in their lives, and almost universally they speak wistfully, nostalgically, almost romantically, about their time there. Yet these days the Senate is a wretched place.

DAVID SHRIBMAN
Columnist

There's the partisanship, which always existed but in the past was much more muted. There's the lack of comity, a favorite Senate word when there actually was some. There's the lack of respect from the public, which once regarded the Senate as the "upper house" even though longtime House denizens, particularly onetime Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., never bought that theory. There's the lack of a sense of accomplishment, mostly because the Senate doesn't accomplish much anymore.

In short, it's a lousy job, with little satisfaction because the Senate's work is consumed with routine filibusters, indefinite holds on legislation and nominations, and straight party votes dictated by leaders who watch helplessly as the chamber lurches from crisis to crisis.

Some figures make the case. Twenty years ago the Senate held 395 roll-call votes. Last year it held 251. Two decades ago it ratified 20 treaties. Last year it ratified none. Twenty years ago it confirmed 38,676 nominations. Last year it confirmed 24,296 — a reduction of about 37 percent.

Now, it is perfectly plausible to argue that a Congress that passes less legislation is a better Congress and, in a world where the country would do well to tend to its own knitting, the reduction of ratified treaties from 20 to zero is a good thing. But few people — Republicans or Democrats — go to the Capitol with the hope of accomplishing nothing. Few lawmakers, even in the age of the tea party, go to Washington with the stated intent of preventing legislation rather than promoting it.

The situation is so bad that GOP Sen. Saxby Chambliss of Georgia, 69, whose two terms in the Senate followed four in the House, stunned Washington recently by announcing he would not seek another term.

Chambliss was just the sort of lawmaker who in another era might have been counted for a long career. His service on the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and his chairmanship of the Intelligence and Homeland Security Subcommittee, along with his status as ranking Republican on the Senate Intelligence Committee, set him up to become that committee's chairman in a GOP Senate.

Instead, he decided to leave. There are, to be sure, some hopeful signs. In the first few months of 2013, there is more evidence of serious work on important legislation, especially immigration, than the Senate has seen in years.

Why is this little cross a big issue?

It is truly amazing to me that a monument that has been in the same place for 40 years is suddenly such a big issue. The really amazing part is that the majority of the people who are complaining didn't even know it existed until some out-of-state group made it an issue.

I stick with the majority of Coos Bay area people wanting our landscapes and monuments left alone. That poor little monument hasn't caused anyone to leave or join Christianity, as far as I've seen. So why is it a problem except to the bullies from Wisconsin? I agree with Mr. M. Brown of Coos Bay.

Angry at store for bottle policy

Perhaps it is just me, but returning cans for deposit has always been somewhat embarrassing. Even when I was dirt poor, I would find someone to give those cans too. Just because I didn't want to deal with that uneasy feeling of someone staring at me like I was less than.

As I've gotten older, I realized those nickels add up. Embarrassment be darned! As well, I like that Oregon cares about our environment and created a law that encourages recycling. So every couple of months my dad and I return cans to the store from which we purchased them.

The machines they have now are actually kind of fun. From time to time, I feel the stares from people, but now I realize I'm doing something good for our environment, and there is gold at the end of the rainbow.

Until recently, when I was somewhat dismayed by a comment from a cashier. After returning the cans we purchased several grocery items, including soda (well over the amount of the refund). I handed the cashier the refund tickets. She then announced that OLCC Law does not allow them to refund more than $7.20 per day.

Somewhat irritated and embarrassed, all I could think of is they sure didn't make a fuss when I purchased all these beverages and paid the deposit. Now I have to waste my time and gasoline to drive back into town, on several different occasions, to retrieve a refund I've already paid. Nice!

When I got home, I went directly to the OLCC website to read this law about which we were informed. You can imagine my surprise when I read the Oregon Bottle Bill, which states: Consumers may be limited to a maximum of 144 containers per person, per day, at retailers 5,000 square feet or more.

ORS 459A.715(3)(a) Notice also reads, "Oregon Law allows a dealer occupying 5,000 or more square feet to refuse to accept more than 144 individual beverage containers from any one person during one day."

Oregon Law doesn't prohibit retailers from refusing more than 144 cans in one day. That would be store policy. I take great issue when someone misrepresents information to me and doesn't take responsibility for their own (or their company's) decisions. Fortunately as a consumer, I can purchase my items elsewhere.

Cross foes force beliefs on others

Many war memorials, from the Revolutionary War to present day, have crosses on them. Crosses are on memorials all over this country, and most other countries. The cross signifies ultimate sacrifice; giving your life for freedom.

According to the Freedom From Religion Foundation's website, they are proud members of Atheist Alliance International. Atheism is a belief system; to me that makes it a religion. So why are they forcing their beliefs on us and this community?

FFRF chooses small towns, schools, etc., to threaten and bully because they know, or think, we will buckle under the pressure of lawsuit costs. They will keep it up until they think they are powerful enough to take our crosses from all over the nation. According to their website, they also want "In God we trust" removed from currency.

We are Christians but enjoy the beauty of the Choshi Garden in Mingus Park. We like to visit the Japanese garden in Portland, which represents Buddhists. I never thought to say you have to get rid of it. It seems the FFRF is only targeting Christian symbols. As one of our daughters stated, "There are so many things in this country that we should spend our energy on, like hunger, homelessness, abuse, but they choose to fight over a cross on a war memorial?"

Cross critic shows contempt, disdain

Mark McKelvey's remarks in his April 6 letter were couched in disdain: "Americans are not fond of atheists," and "Less than hospitable crowd," along with an intimation that an opponent of the cross is in danger of an unspecified injury; "She does so at appreciable personal risk." These are divisive words.

This is not unusual in the manner of attack against the quiet expression of felicity for the fallen in Coos Bay, Mingus Park.

The confidence of many citizens is that irrespective of privately held beliefs, we may honor our dead as we deem appropriate. Their sacrifice and service recognized by the pre-eminent emblem of sacrifice is appropriate to be respected and not be disturbed.

Unbelieving persons have not gone into Mingus Park, coming out Christian, because of the Mingus cross itself. It does not rise to the level of an establishment of religion.

Too often, people professing atheism require every expression of religious thought and practice be excluded from the public square. The undeniable effect of profaning public morals manifests.

You may not be shamed by acts against the public morality. You may contemptuously resist and defame piety or quiet expressions of a confidence you do not share. However, you may not disenfranchise a whole body of people because they believe not as you. You may not exclude them from opportunity of constitutionally protected, public or private, acts of religious expression.

NB firefighters know their stuff

I am writing to commend North Bend Fire Department as one of the top fire agencies to train at the Rocky Mountain Emergency Services Training Center. I have had the privilege to train some of the best aircraft rescue firefighters in the country, and I have found North Bend firefighters to be among the top to perform with us. There truly is a major difference between the tremendous abilities of the professional firefighters compared to the maintenance people I see train at the training center here in Helena.

I have been an instructor at the RMESTC for approximately 18 years, and have worked closely with both, so I fully understand the capabilities of each type of individual. Most maintenance personnel train on a limited basis, whereas the professionals train constantly, which makes a big difference by the time I get to train with them. The incredible adaptability with many firefighting scenarios we use at the training center shows the true efficiency of the departments, such as North Bend, which trains constantly with actual firefighting equipment.

The departments like North Bend Fire, which have the uncanny ability to know what strategy and tactics are required before we even start the scenarios, is an example of the true commitment that they have displayed for the last 15 years of training with us. Professional firefighters such as these demonstrate flexibility to quickly switch tactics at the last minute if the scenario dictates.

North Bend Fire Department's great connection with the RMESTC and the customers in their community, and the relentless perseverance to always make the customer happy, allowed them to become (in my opinion) the No. 1 department to train at the training center since my employment there.

Bisexual woman should show her rainbow colors

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to your answer to "Bi in the Deep South" (Jan. 2), the woman who is happily married to a man, but who now realizes she is bisexual and wants to come out.

My wife is an out bisexual woman. You were correct that it is possible to be bisexual without having acted on it, as people are not defined solely by the partner they have.

DEAR ABBY Precisely for that reason, some individuals feel that "bisexual" is who they are, and to omit it feels like living a lie.

JEANNE PHILLIPS The notion that stating one's bisexuality is "advertising that one is available" is why my wife chose to come out — to combat this misconception. Just as straights can be attracted to people of the opposite sex besides their spouse, so might a coupled bisexual person be attracted to other individuals of both genders. Bisexuals, however, are no more likely to ACT on this attraction than anyone else.

"Bi" should just be herself and tell anyone who needs to know when she feels comfortable telling them. And you're right, Abby — she should tell her husband first. But if her marriage is as strong and happy as she indicated, I'm pretty sure he already knows. I know I did. — JON IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR JON: Thank you for writing. The comments I received about that letter were passionate and informed.

DEAR ABBY: Bisexual women and men who begin identifying and clarifying their sexual identities in the context of committed relationships need spaces where they can sort through their understandings of themselves.

A support group that is either counselor- or peer-led, in-person or online, can be an important resource to help "Bi in the Deep South" recognize that others have also experienced what she is going through and she can learn from them. She will see there is a place of support and encouragement where it's OK to talk about what bisexuality means for her. Being part of such a group can be particularly liberating. — LICENSED COUNSELOR, AUSTIN, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: If "Bi in the Deep South" is comfortable enough with who she is to tell someone, she should not be advised to stay in the closet to any degree. She has the right to be honest with herself and her family and not go through life hiding.

As for posting one's sexual orientation on social media profiles, doing so does not change your relationship status. You can be both "in a committed relationship" AND "bisexual." They are not mutually exclusive. — BI IN THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST

DEAR ABBY: There is real power in coming out, in voicing your authentic self. There is an emotional cost to remaining silent. Many who do so feel like they are allowing others to assume things about them that are just not true.

I speak from personal experience. I was silent for five years, and the day I started talking about the fact that I am bisexual, I felt as though a huge weight had been lifted off me.

I hope "Bi in the Deep South" will find the courage to come out and fly her rainbow colors. Although she may have to correct some people's misconceptions of what it means to identify as bisexual, she will feel much better. — ROBYN IN MASSACHUSETTS

Girl next door Annette Funicello dies at 70

The Associated Press

Former "Mouseketeer" Annette Funicello gets set to put her hands in the cement at Walt Disney Studios Theatre, in Burbank, Calif., as she is honored with the Disney Legend Award. With Funicello is her husband, Glen Holt, right, and Jeff Hofman, left, Disney Studios official. Walt Disney Co. said, Monday, April 8, that Funicello, has died at age 70.

BY FRAZIER MOORE
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — She was the first crush for a generation of boys, the perfect playmate for a generation of girls.

Annette Funicello, who became a child star as a cute-as-a-button Mouseketeer on "The Mickey Mouse Club" in the 1950s, ruled among baby boomers, who tuned in every weekday afternoon to watch her on their flickering black-and-white television sets.

Then they shed their mouse ears, as Annette did when she teamed up with Frankie Avalon during the '60s in a string of frothy, fun-in-the-sun movies with titles like "Beach Blanket Bingo" and "How to Stuff a Wild Bikini."

Decades later, she endeared herself to baby boomers all over again after she announced in 1992 that she had multiple sclerosis and began grappling with the slow, degenerative effects with remarkably good cheer and faith.

Funicello died on Monday at Mercy Southwest Hospital in Bakersfield, Calif., of complications from MS, the Walt Disney Co. said.

She was 70 and had dropped from public view years ago.

"She really had a tough existence," Avalon told The Associated Press. "It's like losing a family member. I'm devastated but I'm not surprised."

Avalon said that when they were working together, she never realized how beloved she was. "She would say, 'Really?' She was so bashful about it. She was an amazing girl," he recalled.

The pretty, dark-haired Funicello was 13 when she gained fame on "The Mickey Mouse Club," a kids' variety show that consisted of stories, songs and dance routines. It ran on ABC from 1955 to 1959.

Cast after Walt Disney saw her at a dance recital, she appeared in the Mouseketeer uniform of mouse ears, a pleated skirt and a turtleneck sweater emblazoned with her first name, and captivated young viewers with her wholesome, girl-next-door appeal.

She became the most popular Mouseketeer, receiving 8,000 fan letters a month, 10 times more than any of the 23 other young performers.

"It was a happy time. They were wonderful times," she recalled in a TV interview as an adult — and she might just as well have been speaking for her "Mickey Mouse Club" audience.

Singer and composer Paul Anka, the one-time teen idol who briefly dated Funicello when they were on the concert circuit in the late 1950s, said that like seemingly every young American male of the time, he was in love with her.

"She was just the girl next door and they were drawn just to her," Anka said. "She had that thing. She had the it, and there was just no stopping it."

They eventually drifted apart, but during the time they were together, he said, Disney tried to end their relationship, resulting in one of Anka's biggest hits, "Puppy Love."

"The Disney crowd, and understandably so, didn't want her too involved at too young an age," Anka told the AP. "We had our professional careers and what have you, and they continued to tell her it was a puppy love, and marriage should not be in question. And I wrote about it."

Fisheries to see ecosystem approach

GRANTS PASS (AP) — Federal fisheries managers for the West Coast are poised for a major change in the way they make sure that plenty of fish remain in the sea.

The Pacific Fishery Management Council is meeting in Portland this week.

Today, it's expected to adopt a new ecosystem management approach to managing the catch off Oregon, Washington and California.

That means that when making decisions on sport and commercial fishing seasons, quotas and fishing methods, the council will take into account factors such as habitat, and the impacts on other marine species that may depend on another species for food or be a source of food for others.

The Fisheries Ecosystem Plan is nonbinding, but conservation groups are enthusiastic, especially about a key provision to consider future protections for forage fish that aren't already targeted by a fishery. Forage fish are the little fish that the big fish depend on for food. Forage fish that would otherwise be eaten by larger fish, such as tuna and salmon, are caught for bait, food for farm-raised fish, and fertilizer.

"It's the beginning of a paradigm shift in fisheries management," said Paul Shively, a campaign manager for Pew Charitable Trusts. "We've always managed our oceans on a species-by-species level. By developing an ecosystem plan we begin to look at how everything is connected in the ocean."

The old-style management has been an official failure since 2000, when federal fisheries managers had to declare a fishery disaster for Pacific groundfish after a decade of declining catches in the West Coast's biggest fishery, which include popular species such as rockfish and lingcod.

The government adopted strict fishing restrictions, brought out half the groundfish fleet, limited the areas bottom-dragging trawlers could fish, adopted habitat protections, and took steps to limit the numbers of unwanted fish dumped overboard dead — known as bycatch. Since then, species have been rebounding.

Deputies find alligator in shed

STATE DIGEST

MULINO (AP) — Clackamas County sheriff's deputies responding to a tip found an alligator that was being kept in a shed in a rural area south of Portland.

Sgt. Robert Wurpes says that although the person who lived at the Mulino property had moved, a relative had been returning to care for the 4-foot-long alligator named Wally. The sergeant says the gator is healthy and estimated to be 12 to 14 years old.

The problem: Wurpes says owning alligators is prohibited in Oregon without a special permit and no permit had been issued for Wally.

County accused of religious discrimination

EUGENE (AP) — A Christian group trying to expand a faith-based addiction treatment center alleges that Lane County discriminated against it.

The Eugene Register-Guard reports that a dispute over the expansion revolves around the facility's sewage system.

Teen Challenge International says in federal court the county's land-use rules discriminate against people with disabilities, and a county permit denial is religious discrimination.

A spokeswoman for the county says it is not at fault.

The center known as Hannah's House is limited to five residents. Teen Challenge wants to have 20.

Neighbors have opposed the expansion.

The county twice approved it, but the state land use appeals board overturned the decisions.

Then, a county hearing officer denied the permit, ruling there was no new data to show the wastewater would meet a state requirement.

Victims: Drop deadline for child sex-abuse cases

SALEM (AP) — Adult victims of child sex abuse are asking Oregon legislators to eliminate the deadline for prosecutors to file charges against alleged abusers.

Prosecutors are currently prohibited from filing charges in child sex-abuse cases after the victim turns 30. The House Judiciary Committee is considering a bill that would eliminate that deadline for certain sex crimes if the victim is a minor and the abuser is an adult.

The measure would apply only to crimes committed in the future.

Proponents say it can take decades for children who are sexually abused to be comfortable coming forward to authorities.

Critics worry about a defendant's right to a fair trial.

Keith Franklin Bushnell

Feb. 25, 1930 - April 4, 2013

An informal potluck celebration will be held for Keith Franklin Bushnell, 83, of Myrtle Point from noon to 3 p.m. Saturday, April 27, at the Myrtle Point Senior Center, 1441 Doborout St.

Keith was born Feb. 25, 1930, on Catching Creek, near Myrtle Point. He died April 4, 2013, in Canyonville.

After graduating from

Myrtle Point High School in 1947, he worked at the Safeway store until joining the U.S. Navy in August 1948. When he was discharged in March 1951, he returned to Myrtle Point and his Safeway store job. Throughout his working life he raised sheep and cattle, was a mill worker, logger, and bartender until retiring in 1995. Keith is survived by eight nieces and eight nephews.

Keith was a descendant of Linus and Lucinda Bushnell, homesteaders in the Ollala area of Douglas County in the early 1850s. His grandfather, Hamilton Bushnell, homesteaded on Catching Creek near Myrtle Point in 1909 and on that property is where Keith was born and raised. He was the eighth child born of nine to Carl and Vestie Bushnell who had five daughters and four sons.

He was preceded in death by his parents, sisters, and brothers.

Memorial contributions can be made to the Coos County Logging Museum, 705 Maple St., Myrtle Point, OR 97458; or a charity of your choice.

Arrangements are under the direction of Taylor's Family Mortuary, 541-679-6983.

Sign the guestbook at www.theworldlink.com.

Juanita E. "Nita" Robertson

March 27, 1930 - April 3, 2013

A graveside service will be held for Juanita E. "Nita" Robertson, 83, of Myrtle Point at 11 a.m. Saturday, April 20, at the Powers Cemetery.

Nita was born March 27, 1930, in Poplar Bluff, Mo., to Frederick Bland and Lillie (Morse) Bland. She passed away April 3, 2013, in Myrtle Point.

As a small girl she and her parents moved to Santa Ana Gardens, Calif., where she attended school. She moved in 1950 to Powers, where she met and later married James "Jimmy" Robertson. In the early years in Powers she worked at the Powers Market and rode the train to work in the cook house at one of the logging camps. She later managed a restaurant in Powers and worked at Georgia-Pacific and Douglas Fir Mill in Coquille.

In 1966, the family moved to Myrtle Point, where she continued to work at Douglas Fir Mill for a time. Nita, with her husband, Jimmy, owned and operated the Casino Bar and Restaurant in Coquille and the Colony Bar and Restaurant in Myrtle Point. She also opened the Myrtle Point Laundromat which she operated for several years. Nita loved being around people.

In the mid-1990s she and Jimmy moved back to Powers to retire. She was not retired for long, she once again managed two more bars in Powers.

Nita was a past worthy matron of the Order of Eastern Star.

Nita is survived by her children, Linda Robertson of Gold Beach, Debra Robertson Shorb and husband, Albert of Powers, Susan Robertson Shelton and husband, Mark of Myrtle Point and John Robertson of Ontario; nine grandchildren; 10 great-grandchildren; one great-great-grandson; brother, Doland Bland of Bullhead City, Ariz.; and foster son, Garry Gallino of Bandon.

She was preceded in death by her parents, husband, Jimmy Robertson; and infant sister, Leila.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests donations to the American Cancer Society, 31 W. Sixth St., Medford, OR 97501.

Feel good about vacationing

So, how are those summer vacation plans coming? If things aren't looking so good for you to get away from home this year, it's probably not because you don't have the time. According to a survey by Harris Interactive Inc., the American worker left an average of 9.2 days of vacation unused in 2012. That's up from 6.2 unused days in 2011.

Mary Hunt

More likely, you keep pushing a vacation to the back burner because you just don't have the money. After all, a vacation can be very expensive. These days, you'll spend a small fortune for a family trip to Disney World — plus airfare if you don't happen to live in Orlando, Fla.

Of course, there are any number of ways to cut the cost of a vacation, but could you get that cost down as low as $150 per adult? You just might be able to pull it off if you change your expectations a bit and adopt a new kind of vacation attitude.

Volunteer vacations are not new, but they've received more attention since Americans are no longer flushed with a lot of discretionary income.

For the cost of getting there, and a reasonable amount to cover the cost of your food — like $150 to $300 for a week — you throw your sleeping bag in the car, drive to a nearby park, and for as little as $150, spend a week in the wilderness rebuilding trails with other nature-lovers.

Don't know where to look? Go to VolunteerMatch.org, which has an impressive database of opportunities and groups that have been vetted to make sure they comply with U.S. tax and charity laws.

The site lists not just the well-heeled agencies, but also small organizations that are doing really interesting, innovative work but might not have the funds to advertise. Doug Cutchins, author of "Volunteer Vacations: Short-Term Adventures That Will Benefit You and Others," notes in an interview with Forbes Magazine the changing demographics for those taking volunteer vacations: "The stereotype (for volunteer vacations) used to be people right out of college or people who were retired. But we're seeing a lot of mid-career people. This is a way for people to go on vacation and also feel really good about it."

Working in a national park is one of the cheapest and most rewarding volunteer vacations you can find, according to Cutchins. He recommends trips organized by the Appalachian Mountain Club, Appalachian Trail Conservancy, Colorado Trail Foundation and the Bob Marshall Wilderness Foundation in Montana, among others.

Families see the money-saving and stress-reducing benefits of going on this type of vacation.

If you can't afford a trip this year, save up for next year. Although most trips within the United States are on the cheaper side, those wishing to go abroad may need more time to save, as the trips tend to range anywhere from $1,500 to $3,000 and up. This year, volunteer.

It'll do you and others, a lot of good!

J.C. Penney looks to old CEO for its future

NEW YORK (AP) — J.C. Penney is hoping its former CEO can revive the retailer after a risky turnaround strategy backfired and led to massive losses and steep sales declines.

The company's board of directors ousted CEO Ron Johnson after only 17 months on the job. The department store chain said late Monday, in a statement, that it has rehired Johnson's predecessor, Mike Ullman, 66. Ullman was CEO of the department store chain for seven years until November 2011.

The announcement came after a growing chorus of critics including a former Penney CEO, Allen Questrom, called for Johnson's resignation as they lost faith in an aggressive overhaul that included getting rid of most discounts in favor of everyday low prices and bringing in new brands.

The biggest blow came Friday from Ullman's strongest supporter, activist investor and board member Bill Ackman. Ackman had pushed the board in the summer of 2011 to hire Johnson to shake up the dowdy image of the retailer. Ackman, whose company Pershing Square Capital Management is Penney's biggest shareholder, reportedly told investors that Penney's execution "has been something very close to a disaster."

On Saturday, Ullman received a phone call from Penney Chairman Thomas Engibous asking him to take back his old job, according to Penney spokeswoman Kate Coultas. The board met Monday and decided to fire Johnson.

Neither Johnson nor Ullman was available for an interview.

The early investor reaction to the shake-up was negative. J.C. Penney shares tumbled $1.39, or 8.8 percent, to $14.48 in trading about two hours before the market opening today.

Storm brings high winds, snow to Colo.

DENVER (AP) — A storm that toppled trees, whipped up blinding dust storms and may have spawned some tornadoes brought blizzard conditions to parts of Colorado, where up to 20 inches of snow was possible in the mountains through today.

The storm has so far proved less potent than originally predicted in Colorado because a cold front has been lingering to the north. Wyoming has been hit harder, with over a foot falling in Lander.

Up to around 10 inches of snow had fallen in Colorado's mountains by dawn. Another 5 to 10 inches was possible in some locations but final snowfall amounts would vary quite a bit, National Weather Service forecaster Jim Daniels said.

Up to a foot had been expected in Denver but forecasters are now calling for around 5 inches.

The storm has canceled 465 flights at Denver International Airport and deicing was causing departing flights to be delayed by as much as a half hour.

The Associated Press
President Barack Obama looks at Nicole Hockley and her husband Ian, right, after she introduced him at the University of Hartford in Hartford, Conn., Monday. The Hockley's lost a child in the school shooting at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, Conn.

Obama says he's 'determined as ever' for gun legislation

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — With time running out on the chance to pass gun control legislation, President Barack Obama on Monday warned Congress not to use delaying tactics against tighter regulations and told families of the Sandy Hook Elementary School shooting victims that he's "determined as ever" to honor their children with tougher laws.

Obama's gun control proposals have run into resistance on Capitol Hill, leaving their fate in doubt. Efforts by Senate Democrats to reach compromise with Republicans over expanding required federal background checks have yet to yield an agreement, and conservatives were promising to try blocking the Senate from even beginning debate on gun control legislation.

"The day Newtown happened was the toughest day of my presidency," Obama said in an emotional speech from Connecticut's capital, an hour's drive from Newtown. "But I've got to tell you, if we don't respond to this, that'll be a tough day for me too."

Some of the Sandy Hook families are making an attempt to push through the bill. Obama met with them privately before his speech at the University of Hartford Monday evening, then brought 12 family members back to Air Force One for the trip back to Washington. The relatives want to meet with senators who've yet to back the legislation to encourage their support in memory of their loved ones.

"Nothing's going to be more important in making sure that the Congress moves forward this week than hearing from them," Obama said. His eyes teared as he described Nicole Hockley, who lost her 6-year-old son, Dylan, saying how she asks him every night to come to her in her dreams so she can see him again.

"If there's even one thing we can do to prevent a father from having to bury his child, isn't that worth fighting for?" Obama asked.

Obama's speech was interrupted repeatedly by standing ovations from the packed gymnasium. At one point, the room erupted with chants of "We want a vote!" Audience members, many wearing green ribbons in support of the victims, were stomping their feet on the bleachers and clapping their hands in unison with the chant.

Obama argued that lawmakers have an obligation to the children killed and other victims of gun violence to allow an up-or-down vote in the Senate. That would require 50 votes to pass, rather than a procedural maneuver some Republican senators are threatening to require 60 votes, potentially sinking the legislation.

Texting may have caused helo crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — Evidence gathered in an investigation of a fatal medical helicopter crash has raised questions about whether the pilot was distracted by personal text messages when he failed to refuel the helicopter before taking off and misjudged how far the aircraft could fly without more fuel.

The case, scheduled to be considered at a meeting today of the National Transportation Safety Board, underscores concerns the board has already expressed that use of cellphones and other distracting electronic devices has increasingly become a factor in accidents and incidents across all modes of transportation — planes, trains, cars, trucks and even ships. The Aug. 26, 2011, accident near Mosby, Mo., which killed four people, appears to be the first fatal commercial aircraft accident investigated by the board in which texting has been implicated.

The Associated Press
This photo shows the wreckage of a helicopter that crashed near Mosby, Mo., on Aug. 26, 2011. The pilot of an emergency medical helicopter may have been distracted by text messages.

The pilot, James Freudenbert, 34, of Rapid City, S.D., exchanged 20 text messages with an acquaintance over a span of less than two hours before the helicopter crashed into a farm field a little over a mile from where he hoped to refuel, documents made public by NTSB show. At least three of the messages were sent and five received while the helicopter was in flight, although not in the final 11 minutes of the last leg of the flight, according to a timeline prepared by investigators.

The timeline indicates Freudenbert also exchanged text messages at the same time he was reporting by radio to a company communications center that the helicopter was low on fuel. The helicopter was on the ground at the time waiting for the patient, who was being transferred from one hospital to another, and a nurse and a paramedic to board.

Although the pilot wasn't texting at the time of the crash, it's possible the messaging took his mind off his duties, interrupted his chain of thought and caused him to skip safety steps he might have otherwise performed, experts on human performance and cognitive distractions said.

Recalled food may have been served in schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of pounds of frozen food recalled amid an E. coli scare may have been served in schools, according to the company that manufactured the items.

Buffalo, N.Y.-based Rich Products Corp. has over the past two weeks recalled 10 million pounds of frozen food items after 27 E. coli illnesses in 15 states were linked to their foods. Of that, the company estimates that about 3 million pounds may still be in the marketplace and approximately 300,000 pounds may have ended up in school lunchrooms.

Dwight Gram of Rich Products said the main items shipped to schools were labeled as pizza dippers and pepperoni pizzatas.

E. coli infection can cause mild diarrhea or more severe complications, including kidney damage. According to the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, 81 percent of the people who fell ill were under the age of 21. Nine people were hospitalized and two have developed hemolytic uremic syndrome.

Bill would boost high-tech visas, but disputes arise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators finalizing a massive immigration bill are arguing over plans to boost visas for high-tech workers, Senate aides and industry officials say, with disputes flaring over how best to punish companies that train workers here only to ship them overseas.

Sen. Dick Durbin, D-Ill., who's taken the lead in pushing to crack down on outsourcing firms, also is seeking higher wages for workers brought in on the H-1B visas that go to specially skilled foreign-born workers, aides and officials say. High-tech industry officials say his efforts risk punishing companies not involved in the abuses he's trying to target, and lawmakers including Sen. Marco Rubio, R-Fla., are taking the other side.

At issue is overwhelming demand from companies like Microsoft, Apple and Google for the H-1B visas, which are now capped at 65,000 annually, plus 20,000 more that are reserved for foreign workers who have earned an advanced degree from a U.S. university. On Friday, the Homeland Security Department announced that after less than a week of accepting applications, it already had received more requests than visas available for the 2014 budget year.

Admiral says N. Korea is direct threat to U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top U.S. military commander in the Pacific says

WORLD DIGEST

North Korea's pursuit of nuclear weapons and long-range ballistic missiles represents a clear and direct threat to the United States and its allies in the region.

Adm. Samuel Locklear, commander of U.S. Pacific Command, will tell a Senate committee today that Kim Jong Un, the country's young and still relatively untested new leader, has used the past year to consolidate his power.

Locklear says North Korea is keeping a large percentage of its combat forces along the demilitarized zone with South Korea, a position that allows North Korea to threaten U.S. and South Korean civilian and military personnel.

Md. lawmakers pass medical marijuana bill

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The Maryland General Assembly on Monday approved a measure allowing medical marijuana programs at research centers that choose to participate.

The state Senate approved the measure, 42-4. Ten of the Senate's 12 Republicans joined 32 Democrats, while two Democrats and two Republicans voted against it. The action sends the bill to Gov. Martin O'Malley, who indicated he is likely to sign the bill.

MEALS Helpers needed to serve diners

ter about two years ago, it has fed almost 100 people per meal, and business is picking up.

"There's always a need in this community," she said.

The Devereux Center has about 30 steady volunteers. More helpers would be welcome.

"It's very important," Harrison said. "We work with veterans, the homeless and others who come specifically to eat a good meal. We have a lot of regulars but get new folks too."

The Devereux Center

relies on community donations. The North Bend Senior Center is one of the places that chips in when it can.

Carmen Nukala, who heads the senior center's board, said the center's chef delivers leftovers to places such as the Devereux Center, Shama House or even the fire department.

The senior center serves lunches in a restaurant-style setting at an affordable price. The center sees between 30 and 80 diners at lunchtime. Social interaction is a big part of the attraction.

"For our regulars, this is their home away from home," she said. In addition to the lunches, the center holds weekly events such as Zumba and other exercise programs.

Unlike the Nancy Devereux Center, the North Bend and Coos Bay senior centers charge for lunch. But Nukala said they never want to turn anyone away.

"Whatever we can do, we will do," she said.

ORCCA Local pantries are happier

The changes at ORCCA have been for the better, according to one formerly unhappy pantry leader.

"ORCCA's doing really well," said Terri Creager, director of the Charleston Food Pantry, which feeds about 400 people a month.

South Coast Food Share cut off food deliveries to the pantry in 2011, saying it wasn't paying its bills, then reinstated it after dealing with accounting problems.

Creager said the Charleston pantry's current relationship with ORCCA is "way good."

"We are very pleased with what's going on there," she said. "They've got a good staff now."

Lehman echoed that assessment.

"We all took a deep breath and everybody got back on the same page," he said.

"I attended a pantry network meeting a month ago and it was very positive, very upbeat."

But one pantry that parted with South Coast Food Share last year is waiting to see how things go before they renew their relationship.

"I guess I'm waiting for the dust to settle before we try to do that," said Lea Sevey, executive director of Oasis Shelter Home in Gold Beach, an emergency shelter for adults and children who are victims of domestic violence and sexual assault.

As with Charleston Food Pantry, South Coast Food Share ended deliveries to the shelter for allegedly unpaid bills during a period of billing problems at Food Share. Sevey said the relationship already had been strained by spoiled food, incorrect bills and conflicts with staff.

"It's been a long time since we've had good service from that organization. We're a little gun-shy," she said.

"We want to see how they prove themselves with their new administration."

assurance of quality?"

Under the bill, facilities would be required to test all batches of marijuana for pesticides, mold and mildew. It would also mandate that facilities meet certain security requirements.

Donald Morse, a co-director of the Human Collective dispensary in Tigard, said growing pot is not an option for many patients, especially those with full-time jobs who can't tend to the plant or those with disabilities.

"And for some, they simply have no more desire to grow their own medicine than they would to raise a chicken for tonight's dinner," he told lawmakers.

He said some cardholders are uncomfortable looking for growers without knowing who they are.

Rep. Wally Hicks, a Republican from Grants Pass, told lawmakers he does not support legitimizing dispensaries. He is backing an alternative approach that would make it easier for cardholders to connect with growers and would impose quality requirements on the products.

The committee also heard testimony on a bill that would limit the number of growers per grow site to three in an effort to crack down on commercial marijuana growing operations. There is currently no limit, which has resulted in sizeable plantations, especially in Southern Oregon.

Oregon voters last November rejected legalizing the recreational use of marijuana, but there is another effort under way in the Legislature that would try again to make it legal.

Oregon tax plan takes shape

SALEM (AP) — Democratic leaders in the Oregon House said Monday that their plan to raise more tax revenue would target corporations and wealthy individuals.

Speaker Tina Kotek and Rep. Peter Buckley, the House Democrats' budget chief, said their plan would limit the amount an individual can claim in tax deductions on a graduated scale beginning with individuals earning at least $125,000 and households earning more than $250,000. Those same taxpayers also would be eligible for a smaller share of the personal exemption — a $183 tax credit for every individual on a tax return.

The Democratic plan would eliminate the cap on the corporate minimum tax, which would affect corporations with more than $100 million in revenue. It also would try to collect more from multi-state and multinational corporations by trying to keep better tabs on how much of their revenue comes from Oregon and should be subject to taxes here.

The House Revenue Committee is scheduled to begin discussing the proposal today.

Democratic leaders have proposed raising $275 million in additional revenue over the next two years to help balance the state budget. They'll need at least two Republican votes in the House and Senate to reach the three-fifths majority required to raise taxes.

NB boys top Colts in tennis

THE WORLD

North Bend's boys tennis team blanked Class 6A Thurston 8-0 in a nonleague match in Coos Bay on Monday.

"I was pleased with the play of our doubles teams today," said North Bend coach Dustin Hood. "They served really well and had solid footwork."

North Bend won all eight matches in straight sets.

The winning doubles teams were Nathan Petrie and James Jordan, Brant Hamner and Clint Cheney, Stewart Lyons and Ian Bream, and Kyle Zomerschoe and Chris Seldon.

Singles winners included Keaten Baker, Kevin Johnson, Josh Dediego and Steven Chan.

SOFTBALL

Oakland 5, Reedsport 0: The Braves managed just five hits in a road loss to Oakland Monday as the teams made up a league game that was rained out Friday.

"Defensively, we had some great plays, but just couldn't get in a rhythm batting," Reedsport coach Jennie Nelson said.

Britney Manicke had two hits, including a double, for the Braves. Jessica Howell also had a double.

The Braves fell to 3-2 in the 11-team Class 2A-1A District 2.

Reedsport has a busy week filled with league games, visiting Glendale today, hosting Yoncalla on Friday and visiting Oakridge on Saturday.

BASEBALL

Gold Beach splits twin bill: Garrett Litterell had a huge day to carry Gold Beach to a split of a doubleheader with visiting Rogue River on Monday.

The Panthers won the opener 13-3 as Litterell clubbed two home runs. One of his homers was a grand slam and he finished with seven RBIs in the win.

Litterell hit another homer and a double in the nightcap, a 5-4 win by the Chieftains. Dustin Carter also hit a home run in the game, but the Panthers couldn't overcome too many walks issued to the Chieftains.

The loss was the first of the season for the Panthers, who return to league play Wednesday with a home doubleheader against Myrtle Point, make-up games for a twin bill washed out by rain last Friday. Gold Beach also hosts Marshfield on Friday.

POSTPONEMENTS

Marshfield's baseball and softball games against Springfield were postponed to today because of the weekend rains and wet weather Monday morning.

The Pirates host the Millers in baseball starting at 4:30 p.m. and softball starting at 5.

Reedsport's baseball team, meanwhile, wasn't able to play its makeup game with district foe Oakland on Monday or its regularly scheduled game with Bandon. The Braves visit Glendale today and will play Oakland on Wednesday. No date has been set for the game with Bandon, which is not a league game.

Frame is medalist at Bandon Trails

BY JOHN GUNTHER
The World

BANDON — Reedsport's Montana Frame used a blazing start to take medalist honors in the Bandon Trails Invitational on Monday at Bandon Dunes Golf Resort.

Frame birdied four of the first six holes on the way to a 2-under-par 69. That score left him far ahead of a field that included several of the golfers Frame is expected to battle for the individual state title later this spring.

Dylan Wu and Will Street of St. Mary's both shot 74, while defending state champion Kevin Murphy of Rogue River had a 76. Cascade Christian's Max Davis and Mark Stockamp of Westside Christian both shot 77.

Murphy and Wu are the only two players who beat Frame at the Class 3A-2A-1A state meet last year. St. Mary's won the team title, Westside Christian was third and Rogue River fourth.

As good as Frame's score was, he said he left some shots on the course.

"It could have been a better front nine," he said. "It could have been a better back nine."

It couldn't have been a much better start, though.

Frame birdied the par-3 second hole, just missed an eagle on the par-5 third, was within a foot of a hole-in-one on the par-3 fifth and also birdied the sixth.

"After I was 4-under through 6, I thought I could go really low," Frame said. "It got harder on the back nine when the wind picked up."

But while Frame took individual honors, the Braves were sixth overall and fifth among the small schools.

St. Mary's had four players shoot 80 or better and had a team score of 306, which easily beat runner-up Westside Christian (332). Rogue River finished at 340, Eagle Point at 341, Cascade Christian 352 and Reedsport 354.

Gold Beach was eighth and Bandon ninth.

Andrew Wall shot an 82 for Reedsport, while Gold Beach's top player, Cody Hawkins, shot an 84. Braden Fugate had an 89 to lead Bandon.

Far West League: Tyler Franke led Sutherland to the team title in the second of the league's five regular-season matches by shooting a 78 at Sandpines in Florence.

Inspired Cardinals beat Michigan for title

BY PAUL NEWBERRY
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Rick Pitino held court in a tunnel beneath the Georgia Dome, going on and on about the grittiest bunch of guys he's ever coached.

One of them sat in the corner of the locker room, a net around his neck, grinning away.

The Louisville Cardinals vowed to finish the job for Kevin Ware.

Boy, did they ever.

With their injured teammate cheering them on from the bench, Louisville capped its run through the NCAA tournament, coming back again from a 12-point deficit to beat Michigan 82-76 in the championship game Monday night.

"These are my brothers," said Ware, still getting around on crutches after a horrific injury in the regional final. "They got the job done. I'm so proud of them, so proud of them."

Ware is just getting started on what could be a yearlong recovery from a broken right leg, but he's already got something no one can take away — a championship.

They even lowered the goal so he could take a turn with the scissors, helping cut down the net that wound up around his neck.

"It meant the world to me," Ware said. "I don't really have any other words to describe how I feel right now."

Pitino knows how it feels to win a championship, having guided Kentucky to a crown in 1996. Now, working right down the road from Lexington, he became the first coach to win titles at different schools.

"This team is one of the most together, toughest and hard-nosed teams," he said. "Being down never bothers us. They just come back."

It was quite a capper to perhaps the best week of Pitino's life.

Earlier Monday, he was introduced as a member of the latest Hall of Fame class. On Saturday, his horse won the Santa Anita Derby to set up a run for the roses in the Kentucky Derby. And last week his son got the coaching job at Minnesota.

What's next?

His first tattoo, apparently. Pitino vowed to get inked up if his players won the championship. They intend to hold him to that promise.

"I have a couple of ideas," said Luke Hancock, who became the first backup in tournament history to be designated as most outstanding player. "He doesn't know what he's getting into."

"Our biggest motivation," Peyton Siva added, "was to get coach a tattoo."

Not a bad week for Louisville, either. The school has a chance to make it two national titles in 24 hours when the surprising women's team faces Connecticut on Tuesday night in the championship game at New Orleans.

On the eve of their big game, the women got together with hundreds of fans in a hotel lobby to cheer on the men.

"It's a great time to be a Cardinal," coach Jeff Walz said.

A great time, indeed. Hancock produced another huge game off the bench, scoring 22 points, and the Cardinals (35-5) lived up to their billing as the top overall seed in the men's tournament.

They sure had to work for it, though.

Louisville trailed Wichita State by a dozen in the second half before rallying for a 72-68 victory.

Former OSU standout Payton nabs spot in Naismith Hall of Fame

ATLANTA (AP) — Rick Pitino got the phone call of a lifetime and an incredible text at the same time.

Last Wednesday, John Doleva, the president of the Naismith Memorial Hall of Fame, called seven people to tell them they'd in the class of 2013.

Pitino was one of the seven.

"When I got the call I was trying to call my wife over so she could hear it and I'm trying to put it on speaker phone and a text keeps beeping as I'm getting this special call," Pitino said Monday, just hours before he led Louisville against Michigan in the national championship game. "I saw the text. 'Go Gophers. I got the job!'"

It was his son, Richard, who had just found out he was chosen to be the head coach at Minnesota.

It's been that kind of week for Pitino, who is among 12 people overall who will join the class of 2013.

The others announced Monday at a ceremony at the Final Four were college coaches Guy Lewis of Houston, Jerry Tarkanian of UNLV and Sylvia Hatchell of North Carolina, former NBA stars Bernard King and Gary Payton and former University of Virginia star Dawn Staley.

The inductions will take place in Springfield, Mass., on Sept. 8.

Inductees announced previously were: Edwin E.B. Henderson, a direct elect by the Early African Pioneer Committee; longtime Indiana Pacers guard Roger Brown; Oscar Schmidt of Brazil, the leading scorer in Olympic history; Richie Guerin, a star for the New York Knicks in the 1950s; and, Russ Granik, the longtime assistant commissioner of the NBA.

It was Pitino, however, who stole the show on a day that he later became the first coach to win the title at two schools. He won it all with Kentucky in 1996.

On Saturday, Goldcents, a horse which Pitino co-owns, won the Santa Anita Derby, a major prep race for the Kentucky Derby.

"I was looking around for lightning," Pitino joked. "This was such a special moment."

Pitino, the only coach to take three schools to the Final Four.

When he was a young assistant with the Knicks from 1983-85, Pitino forged a relationship with King, one of the most feared scorers in his playing days.

"I remember King as a very young coach, a coach starting his career, a coach who knew the game," said King, who averaged 22.0 points in his 15-year NBA career, including averaging 34.8 points in the 1984 NBA playoffs. "I remember Rick came with me to the NBA All-Star game and we were flying from Denver to San Antonio. We talked a lot about that even though we had some injuries we had to get off to a good start."

"That first game in San Antonio I scored 50 points. The next day in Dallas I had a milk shake and a turkey sandwich and scored 50 points again. I guess you can say this is the culmination of my life in basketball."

Payton was known as "The Glove" for his defensive prowess in his years with the Seattle SuperSonics. He was a two-time Olympic gold medalist.

Former Oregon State star Gary Payton holds his jersey during the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame class announcement Monday.

The Associated Press

"I was an offensive-minded guy when I went to Oregon State and coach Ralph Miller pulled me to the side and said 'You'll be one of the greatest defensive point guards ever and I said to myself 'Yeah right. I'm shooting every time I get the ball! I got really good at it and started liking it and took it from there,'" Payton said.

Lewis led Houston to five Final Fours in his 30 years with the Cougars. His teams featured future Hall of Famers Clyde Drexler, Elvin Hayes and Hakeem Olajuwon.

Tarkanian took three schools to the NCAA tournament but he will always be known for his teams at UNLV that made four Final Four appearances and won it all in 1990.

Hafner, Cano lead Yankees

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEVELAND — Travis Hafner drove in four runs in his return to Cleveland and Robinson Cano homered twice as injury-riddled New York ruined the Indians' highly anticipated first home game under manager Terry Francona with an 11-6 win Monday.

Hafner hit a three-run homer in the first inning off Ubaldo Jimenez (0-1) and added an RBI single in the third. Cano connected in the fifth and sixth for the Yankees.

Hiroki Kuroda (1-1) shook off a shaky, 34-pitch first and showed no signs of being bothered by a bruised right middle finger as the Yankees finally won a home opener after losing their own and Detroit's last week.

Red Sox 3, Orioles 1: Daniel Nava hit a three-run homer, Clay Buchholz pitched seven shutout innings and the surprising Red Sox won their ninth straight home opener.

New York's Travis Hafner hits a three-run home run off Cleveland Indians starting pitcher Ubaldo Jimenez in the first inning Monday.

(2-0) and Wei-Yin Chen (0-1) in the seventh inning with his second homer in two days.

The Red Sox are off to a strong start at 5-2 under new manager John Farrell.

Royals 3, Twins 1: Ervin Santana pitched eight strong innings, Alcides Escobar doubled home the go-ahead run and the Royals rallied to beat Minnesota in their home opener.

Twins right-hander Kevin Correia (0-1) limited the Royals to five singles and no runs the first seven innings before Lorenzo Cain doubled to right-center to lead off the three-run eighth. After Chris Getz's sacrifice bunt moved Cain to third, Alex Gordon singled him home to tie the score.

Escobar's double scored Gordon and chased Correia.

Rangers 5, Rays 4: Joe Nathan picked up his 300th career save when he got Ben Zobrist to look at a disputed strike three as Texas beat Tampa Bay.

The Rays scored once in the ninth and had a runner on first with two outs when Zobrist took a full-count pitch and started to take his base. Plate umpire Marty Foster called strike three, and later acknowledged he made the wrong call.

A.J. Pierzynski and Mitch Moreland hit consecutive home runs for the Rangers off Jeremy Hellickson (0-1) on his 26th birthday.

Mariners 3, Astros 0: Joe Saunders rebounded from a rough first start to throw 6 1-3 shutout innings and the Seattle Mariners debuted the new look of Safeco Field by sending Houston to its sixth loss in a row.

Kendrys Morales snapped Seattle's 0-for-14 drought with runners in scoring position by chopping an RBI single in the first and adding an RBI double in the third off Philip Humber (0-2).

Saunders (1-1) and the bullpen made it stand on a cool night with the stadium roof open. He combined with three relievers for the Mariners' second shutout. Tom Wilhelmson pitched a perfect ninth for his third save.

Flacco will play Unitas in movie

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — Joe Flacco, the Ravens' Super Bowl-winning quarterback, will play the part of Baltimore's greatest quarterback, former Colts star Johnny Unitas, in an upcoming movie entitled "Unitas We Stand."

The movie is being co-produced by Joe Unitas, the late quarterback's son.

He told WBAL-TV that Flacco will portray Unitas in scenes of the 1958 NFL championship game, in which Unitas led the Colts to victory over the New York Giants in sudden-death overtime, called the greatest NFL game ever played.

Judge approves NFL's settlement with retirees

MINNEAPOLIS — The $50 million settlement between the NFL and a group of retired players over publicity rights was given preliminary approval by a federal judge who likened some of the retirees to petulant children for complaining about the money now that it has been awarded.

The settlement of the class-action lawsuit was reached last month, but some of the plaintiffs opposed the agreement, arguing it's not good enough. U.S. District Judge Paul Magnuson said in his order that the contentious nature of the case and the complexity and expense of further litigation "weigh heavily in favor" of final approval of the settlement, which could take place this summer.

Former Auburn player gets prison sentence

OPELIKA, Ala. — Former Auburn defensive back Mike McNeil was sentenced to serve at least three years in prison after pleading guilty to first-degree robbery for an incident his attorney characterized as "possibly a prank."

Lee County Circuit Judge Christopher Hughes accepted McNeil's plea deal as his trial was set to begin. Under the deal, McNeil received a 15-year split sentence: He must serve three years, plus three years of supervised probation, and pay $2,000 in restitution. If he violates any terms, the judge could sentence him to the remainder of the 15 years.

McNeil, 24, and three teammates from the Tigers' 2010 national championship team were charged with armed robbery and dismissed from the team in March 2011.

Crosby not sure when he'll return to the ice

PITTSBURGH — Sidney Crosby said he's feeling pretty good but still isn't certain when he'll return from a broken jaw.

The Pittsburgh Penguins star addressed reporters for the first time since taking a redirected slap shot off his face in a win over the New York Islanders on March 30. Crosby underwent dental surgery and spent two days in the hospital. He's not quite sure how many teeth were either lost or damaged.

Crosby is still on a liquid diet but isn't concerned about weight loss. He has not been cleared to practice. Crosby can afford to take his time. The Penguins clinched a playoff spot on Sunday night and barring a massive collapse will lock up the Atlantic Division title.

Former star Messier receives Order of Hockey

OTTAWA — Mark Messier was one of three recipients of the Order of Hockey in Canada for his contributions to the game.

Messier, who won six Stanley Cups during a Hall of Fame career with Edmonton, the New York Rangers and Vancouver, was honored along with Paul Henderson and coach Dave King. During a two-hour ceremony held on Parliament Hill, Messier broke down as he spoke of the national pride he felt as a young boy watching Henderson score the goal that sealed Canada's hockey supremacy over the Soviet Union in the 1972 Summit Series.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Clemson hires UAB coach to lead women's team

Clemson has hired UAB's Audra Smith as its new women's basketball coach. Smith spent the past nine seasons with the Blazers, where she went 138-138. Smith teams were 57-39 over the past three seasons, however, and finished in the top-50 nationally in scoring defense.

Smith takes over for Itooro Coleman, fired last month after going 25-63 overall and 10-38 in Atlantic Coast Conference play.

SNOWBOARDING

Bode Miller's younger brother dies in California

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. — Snowboarder Chelone Miller, the younger brother of Olympic gold medalist Bode Miller, died Sunday in the area of Mammoth Lakes. He was 29.

The Mono County Sheriff's Office confirmed his death Monday in a statement. The cause of death is being investigated, but authorities say foul play is not suspected.

Miller, of Easton, N.H., was hoping to make the U.S. squad in snowboardcross for the 2014 Sochi Games. Nicknamed Chilly, Miller recently finished fourth at the 2013 U.S. Snowboarding Grand Prix in Canyons, Utah.

Brewers beat Cubs in Wrigley Field opener

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Marco Estrada pitched seven effective innings and doubled home a run Monday, helping the Milwaukee Brewers stop a five-game slide with a 7-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs in the first game of the season at Wrigley Field.

Estrada (1-0) allowed two runs and five hits while bouncing back from a lackluster season debut against Colorado. The right-hander also drove in Alex Gonzalez with a drive into the gap in right-center during Milwaukee's two-run seventh.

Norichika Aoki collected three more hits and Ryan Braun went 3-for-4 with two doubles after missing Milwaukee's weekend sweep by Arizona due to spasms on the right side of his neck Wellington Castillo belted a two-run homer for Chicago, which has dropped four in a row and five of six.

Reds 13, Cardinals 4: Brandon Phillips kick-started a nine-run ninth inning with a tiebreaking bloop double and Shin-Soo Choo made amends for two botched fly balls with a three-run double as the Reds spoiled the Cardinals' home opener.

Mitchell Boggs (0-1), the stand-in closer for St. Louis, yielded six runs while getting only one out and the Cardinals needed four more pitchers to get out of the ninth.

Phillips added his 150th career homer for the Reds, who have won six of seven since losing in extra innings to the Angels on opening day. Jay Bruce had four hits and Chris Heisey doubled twice with an RBI.

Braves 2, Marlins 0: Justin Upton went 4 for 4, including his sixth home run, and Paul Maholm allowed one hit in seven sharp innings to help Atlanta spoil Miami's home opener.

The Associated Press

Milwaukee's Carlos Gomez breaks his bat after striking out during the seventh inning Monday.

The Braves earned their fourth consecutive victory and improved to 6-1, their best start since 2007. The Marlins lost their third game in a row and fell to 1-6, their worst start since 2006.

Announced attendance was 34,439, with thousands of empty seats and many tickets sold at discounted prices. Some fans pledged to stay away this season because they're angry that owner Jeffrey Loria reverted to a frugal payroll only a year after the team opened a new ballpark built mostly with taxpayer money.

Upton hit a solo shot for a 2-0 lead against Kevin Slowey (0-2). Atlanta also scored in the fourth when Upton doubled, went to third on a flyout and came home on Dan Uggla's groundout.

Mets 7, Phillies 2: Matt Harvey threw seven impressive innings, John Buck hit a three-run homer and the Mets roughed up Roy Halladay in a victory over the Phillies.

Harvey (2-0) followed up a dominant first start with another sharp outing. He gave up one run and three hits and struck out nine. The 24-year-old righty allowed one hit and fanned 10 in seven scoreless innings against San Diego last Wednesday.

Meanwhile, Halladay (0-2) allowed seven runs and six hits in four-plus innings. He's given up 12 runs in 7 1-3 innings in two starts after a tough spring.

Giants 4, Rockies 2: Hunter Pence hit a three-run homer in the first inning, Buster Posey added a late RBI single and San Francisco snapped Colorado's five-game winning streak.

Madison Bumgarner (2-0) won his sixth decision in a row against the Rockies. The left-hander began his career 0-3 against Colorado in five starts.

San Francisco extended its winning streak against the Rockies to seven games and bounced back from a 14-3 loss to St. Louis a day earlier when ace Matt Cain was tagged for nine runs in the fourth inning.

Pence sent the first pitch he saw from Jorge De La Rosa (0-1) deep into the bleachers in left-center.

Pirates 5, Diamondbacks 3: Andrew McCutchen drove in two runs, Garrett Jones homered and Pittsburgh snapped a five-game losing streak by beating Arizona.

McCutchen doubled in a run in the Pirates' three-run first inning and broke a 3-all tie with his sacrifice fly after Starling Marte's leadoff triple in the fifth.

Jeanmar Gomez (1-0) got the victory in relief of Wandy Rodriguez, who left after 2 1-3 innings because of tightness in his left hamstring. Trevor Cahill (0-2) allowed four runs and four hits in five innings for the Diamondbacks, who had won four in a row and were coming off a three-game sweep at Milwaukee.

NCAA Hancock spurs Louisville rally

This time, they fell behind by 12 in the first half, then unleashed a stunning spurt led by Hancock that wiped out the entire deficit before the break.

"I had the 13 toughest guys I've ever coached," Pitino said. "I'm just amazed they could accomplish everything we put out there."

No one was tougher than Hancock, who matched his season high after a 20-point effort in the semifinal victory over Wichita State. This time, he came off the bench to hit four straight 3-pointers in the first half after Michigan got a boost from an even more unlikely player.

Freshman Spike Albrecht made four straight from beyond the arc, too, blowing by his career high before halftime with 17 points. Coming in, Albrecht was averaging 1.8 points a game and had not scored more than seven all season.

Albrecht didn't do much in the second half, but Hancock finished what he started for Louisville. He made it 5-for-5 from long range when he hit his final 3 from the corner with 3:27 remaining to give the Cardinals their biggest lead, 76-66. Michigan wouldn't go away, but Hancock wrapped it up by making two free throws with 29 seconds left.

While Pitino shrugged off any attempt to make this about him, there was no doubt the Cardinals wanted to win a title for Ware.

Watching again from his seat at the end of the Louisville bench, his battered right leg propped up on a chair, Ware smiled and slapped hands with his teammates as they celebrated in the closing seconds, the victory coming just 30 miles from where he played his high school ball.

Ware's awful injury will forever be linked to this tournament. Against Duke, he landed awkwardly, snapped his leg and was left writhing on the floor with the bone sticking through the skin. On this night, he hobbled gingerly onto the court with the aid of crutches, basking in a sea of confetti and streamers.

This one belonged to him as much as anyone on the court.

Siva added 18 points for the Cardinals, who closed the season on a 16-game winning streak, and Chane Behanan chipped in with 15 points and 12 rebounds as Louisville slowly but surely closed out the Wolverines (31-8).

Michigan was in the title game for the first time since the Fab Five lost the second of two straight championship games in 1993. Players from that team, including Chris Webber, cheered on the latest group of young stars.

But, like the Fab Five, national player of the year Trey Burke and a squad with three freshman starters came up short in the last game of the season.

"A lot of people didn't expect us to get this far," said Burke, who led the Wolverines with 24 points. "A lot of people didn't expect us to get past the second round. We fought. We fought up to this point, but Louisville was the better team today, and they're deserving of the win."

"I've had a lot of really good teams over the years, and some emotional locker rooms, and that was the most emotional we've ever had," Michigan coach John Beilein said. "We feel bad about it. There are some things we could have done better and get a win, but at the same time, Louisville is a terrific basketball team."

GOLF

Franke finished four shots ahead of Coquille's Terrence Edward's. Kyle Gordon of Brookings-Harbor was next at 84.

As a team, Sutherlin shot 393, while the combined Coquille-Myrtle Point team had a 401. Brookings-Harbor finished at 411.

North Bend, led by Jared Davison's score of 100, had a score of 422. But, as Bulldog coach Casey McCord noted, North Bend was the only team to improve its score from last week's opening tournament at Watson Ranch. The Bulldogs got a boost from Garret Ereth, who shot a 112 in his first varsity tournament.

Sutherlin also slipped ahead of Brookings-Harbor by one shot in the season standings. The team with the best cumulative score after the five regular-season events will earn one of the league's two berths at state. The other spot will be determined at the district tournament next month.

Bandon Crossings girls: Gold Beach's Jessica Young took medalist honors with an 88 in the four-school tournament Monday.

Only two other players broke 100. Lindsay Neussel of Eagle Point shot a 97 and North Bend's Lexi Laird had a 98.

Eagle Point won the team title.

Cascade Challenge: The Marshfield boys were fifth and the Pirate girls were fourth in the tournament at Roseburg Country Club on Friday.

Frame tied for sixth for Reedsport with a 78, leading the Braves to seventh place. Jacob Klein led Marshfield's boys with an 85 and Kasey Banksshot an 86. Brittany Banks led Marshfield's girls with a 103.

My grandma has a delicious recipe for split pea soup. Some people may not like it, but I sure do!

She starts with a cup of finely shredded _____ and cup of _____ peas. She adds a pinch of _____ and a teaspoon of _____. The most surprising ingredient is a gallon of _____.

She stirs all the ingredients in a large _____ over medium heat. If they are in season, Grandma adds some fresh _____ and lets the soup simmer for a few hours.

This allows the _____ to blend nicely with the other ingredients.

The soup is good during the _____ winter months, but is also good on a _____ day, too.

I told my grandma that she should sell the recipe to a big _____ company or to a local restaurant. I am sure customers would _____ over it. People would _____ from miles around to try this _____ soup. But until that happens, I will fill a large _____ and enjoy it all by myself!

1/2 cup plain yogurt or low-fat mayonnaise
1 tbsp vinegar
1 tsp sugar
1 10-ounce box of frozen peas
1 cup salted peanuts
1/4 cup grated red onion

Mix yogurt, vinegar, sugar and grated onion.

Gently stir in the peas and nuts.

Chill for about an hour. Then, munch with friends!

The Dixon and Steele families of Coquille spent a week in March in the San Antonio, Texas area celebrating Rex Dixon's graduation from basic training at Lackland Air Force Base. Several airmen had suggested Rex and the family should go to the Magic Time Machine Restaurant in San Antonio. The very special dining experience brings your favorite character as the waiter/waitress to your dining area. In our case, The Queen of Hearts served us a dinner of Superman Pasta, Southwest Chicken along with the regular Chicken Parmesan and Chicken Alfredo. A special dessert of a flying whip cream treat was experienced by Rex. ## Sweet start to spring

Bright citrusy flavors. Splashes of colorful sugary confetti. Rich creamy frosting flecked with berries.

These cupcakes have it all and are a perfect way to welcome spring. We start with a moist white chocolate cake recipe, but infuse it with lemon and lime zest so the flavor pops that much more. Then we spike the cake with confetti – finely chopped jelly beans. Finally, we top it all with a cream cheese frosting blended with raspberry jam.

Want to push these over the top? Get mini jelly beans and use them as “sprinkles” on top of the cupcakes.

Fruit punch spring cupcakes are a great way to welcome the season. But resist the urge to use the food processor when “chopping” the jelly beans.

Resist the urge to use a food processor to chop the jelly beans added to the batter; we tried and it doesn't work. Just use a good knife and finely chop them the old fashioned way. Sprinkling them with a bit of flour while

Pectin jelly beans may be a little harder to find than the regular variety; you'll need to read the ingredient list to find them. But the pectin

The rise of American rosé

By DAVID WHITE

For the past three decades, wine enthusiasts have shuddered when presented with American rosé.

The reason? Domestic rosé has long been associated with the cheap, sweet “blush” wines that became popular in the 1980s, like Sutter Home's White Zinfandel. While these wines will always have fans, they're quite different from the dry, refreshing Old World rosés that oenophiles crave when the weather warms.

In recent years, however, American vintners have started to produce rosés that can easily rival the Old World's best offerings. With summer just around the corner, these wines are worth exploring – and stocking up on.

Rosé is made in one of two ways.

In the first method, the winemaker crushes red wine grapes and leaves the juice in contact with the skin for a brief period, typically one or two days. She then discards the skins, allowing the juice to finish fermentation on its own. Thanks to the short period of skin contact, the wine retains some color.

In the second method, rosé is a byproduct of red wine fermentation. Red wine obtains color, tannin, structure and flavors from grape skins. If a winemaker wants to increase the skin-to-juice ratio during fermentation, she can simply remove some juice at an early stage. This pink juice can be fermented separately to create rosé. This method is known as saignée.

Since rosé is the only goal with the first method, some oenophiles call such wine “true” rosé. These wines typically have more texture and higher acid than saignées, so can easily pair with a variety of foods.

True rosé has been a part of life in Europe for centuries. In Provence, France, residents and visitors alike have long recognized the brilliance of pairing rosé with warm weather and coastal cuisine.

The Old World remains the source of countless fantastic rosés. But many domestic producers are now making wines that are just as delicious.

Click, swirl, sip

Interest in online wine surges

BY MICHELLE LOCKE
The Associated Press

The internet is blossoming into quite the virtual vineyard.

Online wine options are everywhere, from flash sale sites like Lot18 offering daily deals to Facebook prodding you to send a little something for Aunt Suzy's birthday. And now there's a new generation of startups such as Club W, which adds a little algorithm to your albarino, using surveys and ratings to figure out what you might like to drink next.

The click-and-sip approach seems to be catching on, says Jeff Carroll of ShipCompliant, a Boulder, Colo.-based company that helps wineries comply with shipping laws. "Wine is a unique product and it lends itself well to the social aspects of the Internet in terms of discovery."

Online sales have been around for a while, with individual wineries selling wine through their websites, a practice that has become more prevalent as more states relax Prohibition-era laws that had banned alcohol shipments.

Today, only seven states have an outright ban on direct-to-consumer shipping, though some of the states that do allow shipping have various restrictions, and 89 percent of the U.S. population has access to direct-to-consumer sales, according to Steve Gross of the San Francisco-based Wine Institute, a trade association.

What's changed is the rise of third-party sites run by companies that don't make wine, like Lot18.com, which offers special deals on wine. These sites got a boost in 2011 when the California Alcohol Beverage Control officials issued guidelines allowing third-party providers to act as agents in the sale of alcohol but requiring wineries to stay in control of the wine, making them responsible for following all the relevant laws. The advisory applies only to California, but was seen as creating a framework that others could follow. "That really changed the dynamic," says Carroll.

Jeff Stai, owner of Twisted Oak winery in Vallejo, Calif., has sold online for years, including lately through Amazon and Facebook. Twisted Oak is licensed to sell in 30 states and although the tasting room accounts for the bulk of sales, about 20 percent of his business is from outside California and Nevada.

Since the guidelines were issued, major Internet retailer Amazon has gotten back in the wine business, its third attempt, and Facebook has added wine to the gifts friends can send each other. Meanwhile, a number of smaller companies have jumped into the market.

Thanks to the data-gathering and interactive capabilities of the new technology, online sites serve as more than a digital catalog. Relative newcomer Club W tries to anticipate what customers want by basing selections on information gathered from surveys on customer flavor preferences along with their ratings of wines already purchased.

Club W CEO and co-founder Xander Oxman says the idea is to combine the convenience of a traditional wine club shipment with the personalized experience made possible by tools that capture a buyer's likes and dislikes.

The club, which sends out monthly shipments of three bottles for $39, aims to appeal to casual drinkers, who usually shop for wine at supermarkets or liquor stores.

In its first nine months, Club W sold more than 100,000 bottles of wine, Oxman says.

Though it's easier to ship wine across state lines now than it was 10 years ago, there still are numerous legal challenges being played out and some state legislators are looking at bills that could restrict third-party sales. Opponents generally cite concerns that alcohol will be delivered to underage drinkers; proponents say age verification tools and adult signature requirements on delivery prevent that.

Jeff Stai, owner of Twisted

Oak winery, a winery based in the foothills of the Sierra in Northern California, has sold online for years, including lately through Amazon and Facebook.

Twisted Oak is licensed to sell in 30 states and though the tasting room accounts for the bulk of sales, about 20 percent of his business is from outside California and Nevada.

Stai jokes that he's "not shoveling money into the bank," from third-party site sales, but they do provide a steady stream of orders. Twisted Oak also sells wine directly from its own website, going back about nine years and that has steadily increased, especially during the past two years, Stai says.

"It went from, 'Oh, look, we have an order today,' to 'We've got orders every day.'"

WINE Ponzi makes a consistent rosé

One of my favorites comes from Arnot-Roberts, a small producer in California. Made from Touriga Nacional, a Portuguese variety best known for its large role in Port, the Arnot-Roberts rosé is delicate, crisp and structured and packed with complexity.

Elsewhere in California, other favorites come from Copain, Peay, and Radio-Coteau's County Line, three producers that utilize Pinot Noir to make bright, brilliantly seductive wines. Another comes from Matthiasson, a Napa Valley producer that uses Syrah to produce a wine that's stony, refreshing, and bursting with ripe, citrus flavors. All four are worth seeking out.

California isn't the only source of top-notch domestic rosé.

In Oregon's Willamette Valley, Ponzi Vineyards makes one that's consistently delightful. In New York, Channing Daughters on Long Island has gained a cult following for its offerings — this year, the winery produced seven different rosés! Many wineries in New York's Finger Lakes also are gaining recognition for their bottlings. The list goes on.

Of course, America remains awash in cloyingly sweet pink wine. And it's still too easy to accidentally wind up with a bottle that tastes more like Kool-Aid than wine. But more and more producers are taking rosé seriously, so it's easier than ever before to find a crisp, refreshing summertime quaffer that's worth stocking up on.

A new veggie trick

BY J.M. HIRSCH
The Associated Press

What I wanted? A simple recipe — any recipe, any trick, any technique — that would entice my 8-year-old son to embrace broccoli.

What I got? A simple recipe that ended up so good, so crispy, so delicious I no longer cared if he ate the broccoli (he did), because I wanted it all to myself.

And it was pathetically easy. I wanted something that accentuated, rather than masked, the flavor of the broccoli. I wanted something that appealed with both texture and taste. And that meant that as far as technique went, steaming and boiling were right out. We'd be doing some roasting or frying.

For inspiration, I considered the vegetable tempura served at Japanese restaurants. I liked the idea, but not all the fat (not to mention mess, trouble and time) that goes with the frying of it. So

Sweet-and-savory rhubarb sauce for pork tenderloin

BY SARA MOULTON
The Associated Press

When I informed The Husband that I was going to make pork with a rhubarb sauce, he dismissed the idea out of hand. He does not like sweet in his savory.

I tried to explain (as I have a thousand times before) that there's a good reason why any number of classic dishes team up meat and fruit, including duck à l'orange, foie gras with apples, and pork with prunes. Fruit contains acid as well as sugar, and acid has a winning way of cutting through the fatty richness of duck, pork and brisket.

The Husband wasn't buying it. He'll eat his roast duck with a peppercorn sauce, his pork with French mustard, and his foie gras without accompaniment of any kind, thank you.

I could have added that rhubarb is a vegetable, not a fruit, and that it's so tart (not sweet) it's rarely present in a recipe without some kind of sugar added for balance. But I would have been banging my head against a wall. So I rocked on regardless because I love rhubarb.

An import from England, rhubarb was known in 19th century America as "the pie plant" because that was where it usually ended up — in pies, often paired with strawberries. But I think the rhubarb's acidity makes it a splendid ingredient in savory dishes, too.

On the shelf in your grocery store, rhubarb looks a lot like celery, except that it's usually a fetching reddish-purple in color. It comes in long, slender stalks, with strings running from top to bottom. To eliminate the toughness of the strings, some cooks peel their rhubarb before cooking. I deal with the issue (and more easily, I think) by thinly slicing the stalks across the grain of the strings.

Given its high water content, turning rhubarb into a sauce requires little more than cooking it. It breaks down quickly and becomes nice and thick.

In my recipe, it needed some counter-balancing sweetness, so — as a sop to The Husband — I kept the granulated sugar to a bare minimum in favor of fresh orange juice. By the way, given how quickly this recipe comes together, you do want to make sure all your ingredients are prepped and ready to go before you start rolling.

As for the cut of pork on which we ladle this sauce, I went with the tenderloin instead of its neighbor, the loin. Both are lean, but they call it the tenderloin, after all, for a reason. However, this isn't to say it won't turn out tough and dry if you overcook it, so be sure to keep your eye on the cooking time and let it rest after you've taken the meat out of the skillet.

In the end, this dish made a believer out of The Husband. He even suggested that the sauce might work wonderfully with duck breasts. I'm sure he's right.

PORK TENDERLOIN MEDALLIONS WITH RHUBARB-ORANGE SAUCE

Start to finish: 45 minutes
Servings: 6
2 pork tenderloins (about 1½ pounds total), trimmed of fat
Kosher salt and ground black pepper
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil, divided
2 cups thinly sliced rhubarb
2 teaspoons sugar
2 tablespoons minced shallot
½ teaspoon minced garlic
1 cup orange juice
2 teaspoons water
1 teaspoon cornstarch
2 teaspoons Dijon mustard
Chopped fresh chives, to garnish

Trim off the thin end piece of each tenderloin, cutting off about a 3-inch section. Slice the remaining portion of each tenderloin crosswise into ¾-inch gus is much smoother than broccoli, the coating doesn't adhere quite as evenly, but it's still delicious.

ALMOND-CRUSTED BAKE-FRIED ASPARAGUS

Start to finish: 35 minutes (15 minutes active)
Servings: 6
6 egg whites
1½ cups almond flour
1½ teaspoons garlic powder
1½ teaspoons smoked paprika
1½ teaspoons ground cumin
2 teaspoons kosher salt
¾ teaspoon ground black pepper
2 bunches asparagus, tough bottoms trimmed

Heat the oven to 450 degrees. Set a wire rack over a rimmed baking sheet. Coat the rack with cooking spray.

In a very large bowl, whisk the egg whites until frothy. Set aside.

In a medium bowl, mix together the almond flour, garlic powder, paprika, cumin, salt and pepper.

Place the asparagus in the egg whites and gently roll or toss until all of the spears are coated and moistened. A few spears at a time, transfer the asparagus to the almond flour mixture. Roll the spears in the mixture until evenly and well coated. If needed, pat the coating on with your hands. Arrange the coated spears on the prepared rack. When all of the spears are on the rack, spritz them lightly with cooking spray.

Roast for 20 minutes, or until crispy and lightly browned. Serve immediately.

Pork tenderloin medallions with rhubarb-orange sauce is a meal that comes together quickly.

rounds. You should end up with about 18 to 20 pieces, including the 2 thin sections cut from the ends. Season the pork on all sides with salt and pepper.

In a large skillet over medium-high, heat 1 tablespoon of the oil. Working in batches, add the pork to the skillet. Cook, turning to brown on all sides, for about 4 to 5 minutes, or until the pork is just pink at the center (about 145 degrees). Transfer the pork to a plate, cover with foil and let it rest while you prepare the sauce.

Return the skillet to the heat and add the remaining tablespoon of oil, the rhubarb and the sugar. Saute for 2 minutes. Add the shallots and garlic and cook, stirring, for another minute. Add the orange juice and simmer for 2 minutes.

In a small bowl or glass, whisk together the water and cornstarch, then add to the simmering broth in a stream, whisking. Return the sauce to a boil, then whisk in the mustard and any juices that have collected on the plate from the pork.

To serve, divide the pork medallions between 6 plates, then top with some of the sauce. Garnish with chives.

¼ cup raspberry jam

Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Line a muffin pan with cupcake papers.

In a medium bowl, use an electric mixer to beat together the butter, sugar, vanilla, and both zests until light and fluffy. Add the whole eggs and egg yolks, one at a time, beating thoroughly between each addition.

In a small bowl, stir together the flour, baking soda, baking powder and salt. Mix half of the flour mixture into the butter-sugar mixture, then half of the milk. Repeat with the remaining flour and milk.

Gently but thoroughly fold in first the melted white chocolate, then the bits of jelly beans. Spoon the mixture into the prepared muffin cups, filling them three-quarters full. Bake for 20 to

Finding a carpaccio compromise

BY J.M. HIRSCH
The Associated Press

My 8-year-old has very set notions of what constitutes a great steak. It has to be rare and it has to be sweet.

The rare part he takes to an extreme. He'd prefer if the cow meandered into our kitchen and he could just take a fork to it.

When I make dinner, I like to plan to have leftovers. I use those leftovers to pack my son's lunch the next day. But while I don't have a problem feeding my son raw steak at the dinner table, packing it in his lunch — where it will sit for hours before being consumed — really does strike me as a poor parenting decision.

So I developed a compromise — a recipe for a steak that preserves the essence of carpaccio, but adds both the texture and taste of a light sear to the exterior. For sweetness, I give the steaks a brief bath in mirin, a sweet Japanese cooking wine (available in the grocer's Asian aisle). A bit of salt and coarsely cracked pepper, and you're good.

KIND OF CARPACCIO

Start to finish: 30 minutes (10 minutes active)

Servings: 2
¼ cup mirin
Kosher salt and coarsely ground black pepper
Two 6-ounce bison steaks
1 tablespoon vegetable or canola oil
1 lemon, cut into wedges

In a medium bowl, whisk together the mirin, 1 teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon pepper. Add the steaks, turning to coat evenly, then refrigerate for at least 20 minutes and up to an hour.

When ready to cook, in a large skillet over medium-high, heat the oil until very hot but not smoking. Add the steaks and sear on each side for 1½ minutes. Transfer the steaks to a platter and let rest for 5 minutes.

Once the steaks have rested, thinly slice them across the grain. Fan the slices onto 2 serving plates, then seasoned with salt and pepper. Squeeze 1 or 2 lemon wedges over each. Serve immediately.

VEGGIE Coating equals more crunch

my goal was a crispy coated vegetable that cooked up without a lot of oil.

I started by cutting the broccoli into small florets. Small pieces not only cook faster, they also collectively provide more surface area. And more surface area meant more coating and more crunch.

Since I wasn't frying, my coating would need to be made from dry ingredients (traditional tempura coating is a pancake-like batter), and those ingredients would need some sort of glue if they were to stick to my florets. Eggs whites were an easy choice. I whisked a few (from a carton for ease) in a very large bowl. Then I added my florets and used my hands to toss until thoroughly coated.

Onward to my dry coating. Breadcrumbs were an obvious choice, but I wanted something with more body and more flavor. After several attempts, almond flour (sold in the gluten-free and natural foods sections, or made at home by grinding almonds in the food processor) proved to be the best choice.

Once I'd seasoned my almond flour, it was just a matter of tossing the egg white-coated florets a few at a time in the almond mixture. For even roasting on all sides of the florets, I set a wire rack over a rimmed baking sheet, then arranged the florets on the rack. A quick roast at high heat resulted in deliciously crisp, meaty broccoli — dare I say — savory broccoli.

But since we're coming into spring, I wanted to see just how adaptable this recipe is. Turns out it produces equally good crispy asparagus. Because aspara-

BRIDGE

Celine Dion said, "Golf is a search for perfection, for balance. It's about meditation and concentration. You have to use hand and brain."

In bridge you must use your brain to gain the most from each hand you hold. And in this week's columns, we are looking at balancing, when one player, if he passes, will end the auction.

If the dealer opens one of a suit, the next two players pass, and the fourth player jump-overcalls two no-trump, it is no longer unusual, showing at least 5-5 in the two lowest unbid suits. Now it is natural. In principle, the intervenor has a hand with which he would have opened two no-trump, but he might be a point or two short of the normal requirements when he has a respectable six-card minor.

In this deal, though, South has a classic two-no-trump opening and a balancing two-no-trump overcall. North transfers into hearts, then rebids three no-trump to offer a choice of games. South, with only two hearts, passes.

After West leads the spade queen, how should South plan the play?

Simple strategies may ease frequent belching

DEAR DOCTOR K: I belch a lot more than I used to, and I feel an uncomfortable fullness in my upper abdomen after eating. Are there any natural ways to treat this?

DEAR READER: If you're belching and feeling bloated more than you'd like, there are natural treatments you should consider. To understand them, you need to understand why we belch.

Every time we swallow, we take in a little bit of air. Some of it travels down the esophagus and into the upper part of the stomach. When the stomach starts to expand from the accumulated air inside it, little sensors in the stomach wall may trigger a reaction to expel the air. This reaction opens the small ring of muscle between the esophagus (the swallowing tube) and the stomach.

That ring normally is closed tight to prevent stomach contents from entering the esophagus. When the ring relaxes, the air that has built up in the stomach gets vented back up the esophagus and out of the mouth. Air rushing through the throat and mouth makes noise: We belch. (I've put an illustration showing why and how we belch on my website, AskDoctorK.com.)

Our bodies were built to breathe in the air around us, not to swallow it. So why do we swallow air? These are the most common reasons:

■ Air swallowing. Some people get into a pattern of swallowing air and quickly belching it out again. This isn't something they plan to do, or are even aware of doing. It just happens.

■ Carbonated drinks. Carbonated beverages bring extra air into the stomach; the gas in the drink becomes gas inside the stomach. Gulping them down or drinking through a straw worsens the problem.

■ Gum and hard candy. Many people swallow air without realizing it when chewing gum or sucking on hard candies.

Cutting back on carbonated beverages, gum and hard candies might help. If you're a fast eater, slow down; you may swallow less air with your food.

Also try eliminating foods known to cause gasiness from your diet. Many healthy vegetables cause gas in some people: cabbage, broccoli, beets, asparagus, and my own favorite, Brussels sprouts. For people with sensitivity to wheat (particularly the gluten in wheat), wheat-based products can produce gas. For people with lactose intolerance, patients who didn't know they had it — but they sure knew they had gas problems.

ASK Doctor K

If you repeatedly swallow air, you may be able to break the habit with the help of a speech therapist.

It's rare for people with your symptoms to have a serious underlying medical condition, but it happens. If your abdomen is actually distended — visibly larger than normal — see your doctor right away. Otherwise, try some of the natural approaches I've suggested; they may ease your belching. If they don't, talk to your doctor about medication.

Learning how cells age may lead to anti-aging treatments

DEAR DOCTOR K: I see advertisements about various treatments that stop your cells from aging. Is there anything to that? What happens to our cells as we age?

DEAR READER: There are no treatments that can stop our cells from aging. But in the past 10 years scientists have made giant steps in understanding what causes cells to age.

That knowledge could lead to true "anti-aging" treatments.

As for what happens to our cells as we age, I'd rephrase the question: What happens to us as our cells age?

Our bodies are made up of trillions of cells. As we get older, so too do our cells. And like us, our cells do not live forever.

Most of the cells in our bodies today were not with us when we were born.

From birth through adulthood, new cells are constantly forming; that's how our bodies grow larger. Cells "grow" not by getting bigger, but by dividing in two. This process is called mitosis. Normally, the two cells that result from mitosis are identical right down to the last bit of genetic information.

Once we reach adulthood, our cells don't need to divide to help our bodies grow bigger. They divide only to replace cells that have died or been damaged. This happens differently in different organs. Liver cells, for example, multiply only in response to injury. But skin cells continue to divide regularly, even if the skin hasn't been injured, though at a pace that slows over time.

Cells can split only a limited number of times. For example, fibroblasts, the collagen-producing skin cells, typically divide about 50 times.

Once a cell reaches this end point, it enters a stage in which it no longer divides and finally dies.

When the cell receives certain chemical signals that its time is up, the cell switches on a program called apoptosis that leads to the cell's death. In other words, a cell that learns its time has come commits suicide.

Each time a cell divides, a little bit of the telomere — DNA at the tip of each chromosome — is lost. Thus, telomeres of young cells are longer than the telomeres of old cells.

When the telomeres become very short, the cell can no longer divide, and it dies. (I've put an illustration of cell division and its effect on telomere length on my website, AskDoctorK.com.)

Along with telomeres that get shorter, older cells also suffer increasing damage to their DNA.

In addition, the mitochondria — the little "batteries" inside each cell that supply its energy — start to become less efficient.

The bottom line is this: We get older because our cells get older.

What makes a cell age, and what could help keep a cell young, were nearly total mysteries just 25 years ago. Since then, medical research has provided many answers.

Because of that research, I believe that someday we will be able to slow aging
