Killer gets 25 years for Itty Bitty Inn slaying

By JAMES CASEY For The World

COQUILLE - Ronald Wayne Ambill will be at least 72 years old before he'll be eligible for parole.

Ambill must serve all 25 years of the sentence he received Tuesday from Coos County Circuit Judge Martin Stone in what became known as the Itty Bitty Inn murder.

The tiny motel in North Bend was where David Marion Barker was found dead of multiple stab wounds - at least four of then potentially fatal after prosecutors say he had befriended Ambill, a transient from California.

Stone declined District Attorney Paul Frasier's request for a sentence longer than the prescribed maximum. Frasier had argued that Ambill should be imprisoned longer because of aggravating factors that included the victim's vulnerability.

THE WORLD

POWERS - A 25-year-old Coos Bay woman drowned in the Coquille River Tuesday while working on a riverbank restoration project.

Kristle Volin, program manager for the Coquille Watershed Association, was pronounced dead on arrival at Bay Area Hospital after being airlifted by a U.S. Coast Guard helicopter.

Coos County dispatch had received a report of a possible drowning north of the Coquille River at 1:06 p.m.

First responders from Myrtle Point Fire and Ambulance and the Coos County Sheriff's Office found Volin trapped underwater.

Volin's boat had hit a tree, capsized and snagged her life vest. Rescuers had to deflate the boat to bring Volin to the surface.

At the time of the incident, Volin was working with Oregon Fish & Wildlife employee Jeff Jackson to identify river the Gaylord Bridge on the South Fork of bank areas for potential restoration projects. Jackson was in a separate pontoon boat and was unhurt.

A Coos Bay native and Marshfield High School graduate, Volin joined the Coquille Watershed Association staff in 2010 after earning a bachelor's degree from Oregon State University.

Her recent projects included securing the donation of 3,000 Douglas fir, hemlock and redwood seedlings to the Powers and Bandon high schools' native species programs.

COOS BAY – A single-vehicle crash on state Highway 42 sent one man to Bay Area Hospital on Tuesday afternoon.

The incident occurred around 12:45 p.m. when a white Ford truck crashed into the guard rail between the northbound and southbound lanes of traffic.

Personnel from the Millington Fire Department, Coos County Sheriff's Ooffice and the Oregon

State Police responded to the crash. The occupant, Matt Cannon, was seriously injured and pinned inside the truck.

Emergency personnel had to use a saw and a hydraulic rescue tool to remove Cannon from the vehicle.

Cannon was listed in fair condition at Bay Area Hospital as of 8:30 a.m. today.

Authorities briefly curtailed highway traffic while cleaning up the crash scene.

Police have suspect in mind in ricin case

WASHINGTON (AP) - Police have a suspect in mind as they investigate a letter mailed to Sen. Roger Wicker that tested positive for poisonous ricin, a Senate colleague said.

"The person that is a suspect writes a lot of letters to members," Sen. Claire McCaskill, D-Mo., said Tuesday as she emerged from a classified briefing.

Authorities declined to comment on a suspect or any other aspect of the investigation being led by Capitol Police and the FBI after tests indicated that a letter mailed to the Mississippi Republican's Washington office contained the potentially deadly toxin. The letter was intercepted at a Senate mail facility in Prince George's County, Md., just outside Washington, said Illinois Sen. Dick Durbin, a member of the Senate's Democratic leadership.

The letter's discovery shook the U.S. Capitol, where several events were canceled Tuesday in response to Monday's Boston bombing that killed three people, injured more than 170 and ignited fresh fears of terrorism. There was no evidence of a connection between the two events.

FBI spokesman Paul Bresson said initial field tests on the substance produced mixed results and it was undergoing further analysis at a laboratory. Only after that testing could a determination be made about whether the substance was

Suspicious letter mailed to Obama

WASHINGTON (AP) - The FBI says the letters sent to President Barack Obama and Sen. Roger Wicker are related and are both postmarked out of Memphis, Tenn., dated April 8.

In an intelligence bulletin obtained by The Associated Press, the FBI says the letters both say: "To see a wrong and not expose it, is to become a silent partner to its continuance." Both letters are signed, "I am KC and I approve this message."

The FBI says the substance in both letters have preliminarily tested positive for ricin.

Capitol Police spokesman Shennell S. Antrobus said police were notified that the mail facility had received "an envelope containing a white granular substance."

"The envelope was immediately quarantined by the facility's personnel and USCP HAZMAT responded to the scene,"

Deputies nab footloose suspect

COOS BAY - Sheriff's deputies arrested a 29-yearold Coos Bay man Tuesday on multiple felony charges after he fled from officers.

Christopher Angle was lodged in the Coos County jail on charges of fourthdegree domestic assault, first-degree burglary, thirddegree escape, attempting to elude by foot and interfering with a police officer.

Angle was arrested after deputies responded to a report of a disturbance in the 93000 block of McKenna Lane in Millington. Deputies determined that a 22-yearold woman had been in an argument with Angle, her boyfriend, during which she had been assaulted.

When deputies tried to make contact with Angle, he fled on foot to another residence in the 93000 block of Mill Lane. Angle reportedly went inside and fled out the back.

Deputies found Angle hiding under the building and arrested him without further incident.

The woman was taken to Bay Area Hospital for possible back and leg injuries sustained during the assault.

This time, he'll stay out of mischief awhile

COQUILLE - A North Bend man who was arrested five times in March is going to have a much slower April.

Kyler Anthony Beltran withdrew his request of release during his Tuesday morning release hearing and will stay in jail the rest of the month.

Beltran, 21, was arraigned April 9 on nine counts of second-degree theft, 10 counts of unlawful entry into a motor vehicle and one count of second-degree criminal mischief.

He had been released to await court appearances after each of his March arrests. This time, he will remain in the Coos County Jail until his change of plea hearing at 8:30 a.m. April 30. He is being held on $25,000 bond.

THE 4-DAY SUPER SALE APRIL 19-22

It has been successful in Alaska, according to commercial salmon fisherman Paul Merz, who told commissioners it could spawn a $4 million economic boon for Coos County.

The process owes its effectiveness to injecting Coho eggs into manmade redds, or nests, rather than releasing salmon smolts. The fish will be identified not by clipped fins but by marked otoliths, tiny bones in the Cohos' ears, caused by heating or cooling the water in which the eggs are incubated.

Following Merz's presentation, Commissioner Bob Martin moved to approve funding what's termed "gravel-injected egg supplementation."

Commission Chairman John Sweet, however, urged his colleagues to wait until all the pending economic development proposals can be evaluated.

Commissioner Melissa Cribbins agreed, citing a $30,000 request by the Coos County Fair Board to provide natural gas at the county fairgrounds in Myrtle Point.

Commissioners did approve $104,470 for a boat wash station at Tenmile County Park. The station will help prevent the spread of invasive aquatic species.

Revenue solution or fiscal fantasy?

Our view

Editorial Board Jeff Precourt, Publisher

Clark Walworth, Editor

Despite the logical appeal of a sales tax, it seems unlikely to prevail in Oregon.

What do you think? The World welcomes letters. Email us at letters@theworldlink.com.

A sales tax is the unicorn of Oregon politics. We've all heard of its wondrous qualities, but no Oregonian expects to meet one in real life.

Ryan Haas, City Editor

Ron Jackimowicz, News Editor

After nine unsuccessful attempts in 80 years, Oregon politicians once again are talking about taming the mythical creature and trotting happily among budgetary rainbows. It's a lovely fantasy. But honestly - does anyone believe voters will saddle up?

A sales tax makes sense for multiple reasons. Most states rely on a financial tripod of sales, income and property taxes. This balanced approach lets a state tap into three elements of prosperity: earnings, consumption and property ownership.

Oregon survived for decades on income and property taxes, but ballot measures limiting property taxes have shifted the balance. Income taxes now provide most of the state's income, leaving crucial services vulnerable to steep revenue cuts during a recession.

Two big obstacles await any proposal for change. One obstacle is Oregon's multigenerational revulsion at paying several extra cents on a $1 purchase. Every Oregonian learns in childhood to revere this cultural taboo.

The other obstacle is a deep-seated distrust of politicians. Though the latest proposal promises to offset the sales tax by reducing property and income taxes, Oregon taxpayers will grumble in unison, "Yeah, right."

Many Oregonians cynically assume any new tax will raise their total tax bill, no matter what promises politicians may make. Given the inevitable rise in public spending, cynicism is not entirely unwarranted. In theory, a ballot measure could be crafted to guarantee a revenue-neutral outcome. But if it truly yields no new revenue, why would legislators bother?

By any objective analysis, a sales tax would diversify and stabilize Oregon's revenue base. Maybe its time finally has come. Maybe this time, after living through five years of recessionary mayhem, voters will say yes.

And hey! Isn't that a unicorn over there?

Two days that changed everything

DALLAS - Tuesday was a day that will be marked by no one, and yet it was freighted with history.

April 16 ties our era with the two landmark assassinations of the modern age, the killing of Archduke Franz Ferdinand in Sarajevo in 1914 and the murder of John F. Kennedy here in Dallas in 1963. Tuesday provides perspective for the great changes that have occurred in the past century.

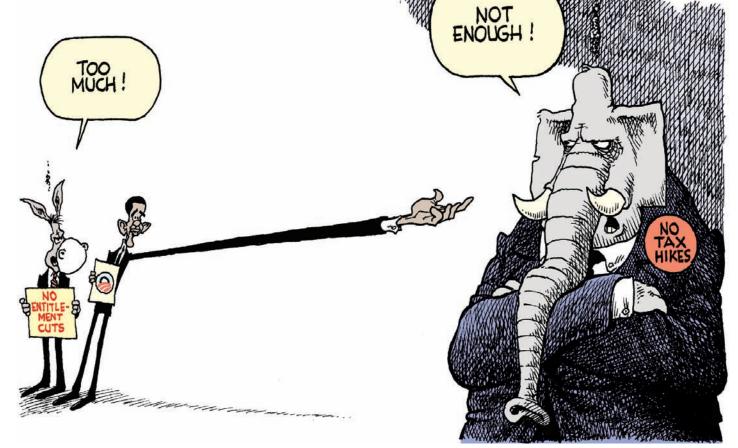

The assassination of Franz Ferdinand and Kennedy were separated by 49 years, four months and 25 days. Tuesday was 49 years, four months and 25 days since Dallas. We think of the killing of the archduke, which set in motion the forces that produced World War I, and the killing of the 35th president, which began an era of tumult, rebellion violence, and as belonging to two very different times.

Yet we think of the assassination of Kennedy as having occurred in our own era, even though the birth rate today is half what it was in 1963. and the rate of births to unmarried teenagers is almost five times higher; even though the average American home is 71 percent more expensive in constant dollars than it was in 1963; even though the number of daily newspapers is down 21 percent from 1963; even though more than 95 million Americans today have connections to the Internet, which didn't exist in 1963, the year the mouse was invented. (The first version was wooden.) These three years - 1914, 1963 and 2013 – are buoys on our passage from a nation equally split between urban and rural residents in 1914, was 70 percent urban by 1963 and today is majority suburban. They are markers on our passage from a country where Radcliffe women were not allowed to ride in cars to a nation where half of the last six secretaries of state have been women. Now, the same distance from the Kennedy assassination as the events in Dallas were from those in Sarajevo, we can see that Nov. 23, 1963, is one of the inflection points in history. From this distance, 49 years, four months and 25 days, we can see that we live in an entirely different world from the one that thrust Lyndon B. Johnson into the presidency. Those who reached adulthood in the 1960s were twice as likely to attend weekly church services than those who reached adulthood in the 2000s. In 1963, almost two-thirds of Americans believed the Bible was the actual word of God. Less than a third believe that now. Right now, about half of American adults are married. In 1963, about threefourths were married. Then there is the transformed role of women. In 1963 only 20 percent of married women with children worked outside the home. Today the rate is about three times as large. As for the nation's political profile, in 1963, 48 percent of Americans identified themselves as Democrats. Today only 34 percent do. The percentage of Americans who consider themselves conservative remains the same (about 51 percent), but trust in government, one of the major indicators of modern conservatism, is down from 76 percent to 30 percent. The rate of divorce has doubled since 1963. That year there were 18 drug abuse arrests per 100,000 people. Now that figure is about 500. In the year in which Kennedy died, 34.9 percent of Americans watched the television show "The Beverly Hillbillies." In 2013, no weekly show will likely hit the 10 percent figure. Almost everything is different in kind and degree from anything we knew and experienced in 1963.

Make post office a real business

Even parts of government that look like a business never get run with the efficiency of a business. Just look at the post fied, inefficient behavior. "We are expected to

to operate like a business,"

But a real business can't get away with losing billions every year. (I guess in the era of bailouts, I should say shouldn't get away with it.) The post office lost $16 billion last year, despite having all sorts of advantages that most private businesses don't have.

They have a near monopoly on first-class mail delivery. The U.S. Postal Service doesn't pay sales tax or property tax. They don't even pay parking tickets.

With advantages like that, how do they lose money?

You don't tend to see change in "quasi-governmental entities." You see stagnation.

like closing rural post offices."

But the post office should do both. The government maintains hundreds of tiny local post offices, each of which brings in less than $700 a month. Running those offices costs much more than that. Some are just one mile away from other post offices.

People like "universal service," which has been taken to mean that every American must get mail service, no matter how deep in the boondocks they live. The post office even hauls mail by mule to the bottom of the Grand Canyon.

Cato Institute budget analyst Tad DeHaven argues, "People living in rural America aren't living there by force. ... Go back to history. Private carriers picked up the mail from the post office and took it the mail. UPS delivers 300 packages a minute and makes a profit . Federal Express, UPS and others thrive by finding new ways to cut costs. They don't do it because they were born nicer people. They do it because of the pressure of competition. They make money - while the post office loses $16 billion.

Why not just privatize it? No more special government protections, no limit on competitors offering similar services.

Then mail service would be even better than before. The market delivers.

Historically, weekly Sunday afternoon services were held in the House Chamber of the U.S. Capitol, by permission of President George Washington, and continued until the late 1850s. Weekly morning services were held in the Treasury Building. Thomas Jefferson was noted to be a regular in attendance.

Now, wouldn't you think that the first and third presidents would know better? Well, they did. They knew that the First Amendment kept the government out of religion but not religion out of the government.

Offer for NB mural site is exciting

A great opportunity has surfaced for the city of North Bend, with the owner's offer of the north wall of the historic Odd Fellows building for a city mural. The north wall is a huge canvas, highly visible to traffic on southbound U.S. Highway 101, blocks of city sidewalks, and the city's new parking lot. Whether historical or modern, a mural this large would add good vibes to the downtown landscape.

This project is too good to pass up, is within the urban renewal boundary, and hopefully will be formally added to the urban renewal projects list. A big thank you to the owner. Hip, hip, hooray!

Wife's affair with cellphone leaves man feeling cheated

DEAR ABANDONED: You say your wife has responded and things are hopeful. That means she is at least receptive to working on your marital relationship.

The problems that cellphones cause in relationships is something I am hearing about with increasing frequency. People have become so dependent upon their digital companions that in some cases it's impossible to turn them off because people have become literally addicted.

In cases like this, a licensed therapist should be consulted. Of course, like any addiction the sufferer must be willing to admit there is a problem and want to do something about it. I wish there was a 12-step program to which I could refer you, but I

Ranchers want more authority to kill wolves

By Jonathan J. Cooper The Associated Press

SALEM – Eastern Oregon ranchers are asking the state Legislature for more authority to kill wolves that threaten their livestock, re-energizing a longstanding debate as the wolf population increases.

Ranchers told a House committee Tuesday that their existing authority to kill wolves caught in the act of attacking livestock isn't enough protection from the substantial losses they incur when wolves prey on cattle and sheep. Environmentalists warned that wolf populations might dwindle if ranchers have fewer hurdles to scale before they can legally kill a allowing ranchers to kill any gray wolf they reasonably believe has attacked or harassed their livestock -asignificantly lower bar than the one in place today. Both sides are planning meetings to work on a compromise.

"We simply want to keep our livestock alive and out of harm's way," said Rod Childers, a Wallowa County rancher who leads a wolf committee for the Oregon Cattlemen's Association.

The House Environment and Natural Resources Committee took no action on the bill Tuesday.

Oregon's wolf conservation plan, administered by the state Department of Fish and Wildlife, allows ranchers with a permit to kill a wolf if they catch it in the act of attacking, but ranchers say legislators have proposed it's almost impossible to do killed last year by two sepa-

so. No caught-in-the-act rate packs, while 13 cows were permit-holder has ever killed a wolf, said Michelle Dennehy, a spokeswoman for the fish and wildlife agency

It's unclear what a compromise might look like, but conservationists advocate nonlethal methods of deterring wolves. Loud noises and red plastic flags have been successful in some areas.

"We have to make sure that the bill strongly emphasizes protection of our wolves," McKenna Grace Fisher, who described herself as an animal-rights activist, told the committee.

At the end of 2012, wolf numbers in the state had risen to 46 from 29 in 2011, according to state fish and wildlife officials. Meantime, four cows and eight sheep were killed by one pack in 2011.

So far this year, one cow has been killed by a wolf.

Seen as a scourge on the landscape, wolves were nearly wiped out across the Lower 48 by the 1930s. In 1995, the federal government sponsored the reintroduction of wolves into Yellowstone National Park and central Idaho. They eventually spread to Wyoming, Montana, Oregon, Washington and California.

With wolf numbers approaching 1,800, the federal government dropped Endangered Species Act protection in 2011 in the Northern Rockies, eastern Oregon and eastern Washington, and turned over recovery management to the states.

Sheriff hopes 2 hurt in blast can explain it

ONTARIO (AP) Authorities hope two Eastern Oregon men who were severely injured by a homemade bomb can eventually explain what they were up to and why they were so close to the blast.

The explosion occurred Sunday at a rural site in thinly populated Malheur County, about three miles from an irrigation reservoir on Bully Creek and about 20 miles west of Ontario, where the men live.

Authorities found evidence of several devices made from plastic pipes, garden hose and cardboard tubes. The type of explosive used was not disclosed.

The two were identified as 59-year-old Mark Brinton and 60-year-old Drex Brooks, the Ontario Argus Leader reported.

Brinton was reported in critical condition at a Boise, Idaho, hospital, while Brooks was in serious condition at a Portland hospital.

Authorities initially described their injuries as life-threatening.

The men's house was searched after the blast.

Sheriff Brian Wolfe told the Argus Observer some important questions might not be answered unless investigators can speak to the

"The big question that really needs to be answered is why do they have these devices and what were they planning to do with them," Wolfe said.

Investigators also want to know why the men were so close to the blast.

"Did they assume it was a dud and assumed it wouldn't go off?" Wolfe asked. "I mean, we just don't know. Those are hard questions that, if they're ever going to be answered, they're going to have to come from the people involved."

Boston Marathon Bombings

Authorities recover pressure cooker lid

BOSTON (AP) – Authorities investigating the deadly bombings at the Boston Marathon have recovered a piece of circuit board that they believe was part of one of the explosive devices, and also found the lid of a pressure cooker that apparently was catapulted onto the roof of a nearby building, an official said today.

A law enforcement official briefed on the investigation confirmed to The Associated recovered what they believe are some of the pieces of the explosive devices. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because this person was not authorized to publicly discuss evidence in the ongoing investigation.

A person close to the investigation previously told AP the bombs consisted of explosives put in 1.6-gallon pressure cookers, one with shards of metal and ball

Woman self-publishes, has best-seller

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Texas (AP) - After a feverish month of inspiration, Colleen Hoover had finally fulfilled her dream of writing a book.

With family and friends asking to read the emotional tale of first love, the married mother of three young boys living in rural East Texas and working 11-hour days as a social worker decided to digitally self-publish on Amazon, where they could download it for free for a week.

"I had no intentions of ever getting the book published. I was just writing it for fun," said Hoover, who uploaded "Slammed" a year ago in January.

Soon after self-publishing, people she didn't know were downloading the book - even after it was only available for a fee. Readers began posting reviews and buzz built on blogs. Missing her characters, she self-published the sequel, "Point of Retreat," a month later. By June, both books hit Amazon's Kindle top 100 bestseller list. By July, both were on The New York Times best-seller list for e-books. Soon after, they were picked up by Atria Books, a Simon & Schuster imprint. By fall, she had sold the movie rights. "I wasn't expecting any of this at all. And I'm not saying I don't like it, but it's taken a lot of getting used to," said the 33-year-old Hoover, who quit her job last summer to focus on her career as an author.

Hoover is both a story of self-published success in the digital age and of the popularity of so-called "New Adult" books, stories featuring characters in their late teens and early 20s. Others in the genre include Jamie McGuire's "Beautiful Disaster" and J. Lynn's "Wait for You." The novels, which often have explicit material, are seen by publishers as a bridge between young adult novels and romance novels.

Superman's 75th highlights tough roots

CLEVELAND (AP) - The tough, blue-collar roots of Superman's creators are getting a fresh look on the superhero's 75th anniversary.

In the city's Glenville neighborhood, still in the throttling grip of the Great Depression, Siegel and Shuster labored on their creation for years before finally selling Superman to a publisher.

The Man of Steel became a Depression-era bootstrap strategy for the Siegel/Shuster team, according to Brad Ricca, a professor at nearby Case Western Reserve University who uses Superman in his classes.

The coffin containing the body of former British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher arrives for the ceremonial funeral at St Paul's Cathedral in London, today. World leaders and dignitaries from 170 countries are due to attend the funeral of former British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher today, an elaborate affair with full military honors that will culminate in a service at St. Paul's Cathedral in London.

Britain's Iron Lady laid to rest with full pomp

By JILL LAWLESS AND CASSANDRA VINOGRAD The Associated Press

LONDON - Margaret Thatcher was laid to rest today with prayers and ceremony, plus cheers and occasional jeers, as Britain paused to remember a leader who transformed the country – for the better according to many, but in some eyes for the worse.

Soaring hymns, Biblical verse and fond remembrances echoed under the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral, as 2,300 relatives, friends, colleagues and dignitaries attended a ceremonial funeral for Britain's only female prime minister.

Queen Elizabeth II, current and former prime ministers and representatives from 170 countries were among the mourners packing the cathedral, where Bishop of London Richard Chartres spoke of the strong feelings Thatcher still evokes 23 years after leaving office.

"The storm of conflicting opinions centers on the Mrs. Thatcher who became a symbolic figure – even an - very difficult for those members of her family and those closely associated with her to recognize the wife, the mother and the grandmother in the mythological figure."

"There is an important place for debating policies and legacy ... but here and today is neither the time nor the place," he added.

Security for the funeral – the largest in London for more than a decade – was tightened after bombings at the Boston Marathon on Monday killed three people and wounded more than 170.

More than 700 soldiers, sailors and air force personnel lined the route taken by Thatcher's coffin to the cathedral, and around 4,000 police officers were on duty.

But while thousands of supporters and a smaller number of opponents traded shouts and arguments, there was no serious trouble. Police said there were no arrests, and the only items thrown at the cortege were flowers.

Before the service, Thatcher's coffin was driven from the Houses of Parlia-ism," he said. "It must be ment to the church of St. Clement Danes, about half a mile from the cathedral, for pravers.

From there the coffin – draped in a Union flag and topped with white roses and a note from her children reading "Beloved mother, always in our hearts" - was borne to the cathedral on a gun carriage drawn by six black horses.

Spectators lining the route broke into applause as the carriage passed by, escorted by young soldiers, sailors and airmen. A few demonstrators staged silent protests by turning their backs on Thatcher's coffin, and one man held a banner declaring "rest in shame."

An honor guard of soldiers in scarlet tunics and bearskin hats saluted the coffin as it approached St. Paul's, while red-coated veterans known as Chelsea Pensioners stood to attention on the steps.

Guests inside the cathedral included Thatcher's political colleagues, rivals and her successors as prime minister – John Major, Tony Blair, Gordon Brown and David Cameron.

IMF cuts its forecast for global economy in 2013

WASHINGTON (AP) -The International Monetary Fund has lowered its outlook for the world economy this year, predicting that government spending cuts will slow U.S. growth and keep the euro currency alliance in recession.

The global lending organization cut its forecast for global growth to 3.3 percent this year, down from its forecast in January of 3.5 percent. It didn't alter its prediction of 4 percent global growth in 2014.

The IMF expects the U.S. economy to expand 1.9 percent this year. That's below its January estimate of 2.1 percent and last year's U.S. growth of 2.2 percent. Still, the IMF says the U.S. economy is improving and should expand 3 percent in 2014. U.S.

job growth has accelerated, the housing market is recovering and banks are more willing to lend.

17-country eurozone will shrink 0.3 percent in 2013 and grow only 1.1 percent in 2014.

The fund issued its latest World Economic Outlook on Tuesday in advance of the spring meetings of the IMF and World Bank in Washington later this week. Finance ministers from the G-20, a group of developed and large developing countries, will also meet.

Christine Lagarde, the IMF's managing director, said in a speech last week that the agenda for the meetings will include how to accelerate growth, create jobs and reform banking regulations.

Iraq executes 21 men convicted of terrorism

BAGHDAD (AP) - Iraq has executed 21 prisoners convicted on terrorism charges and links to al-Qaida, the Justice Ministry said today, setting off fresh criticism from an international human rights expert over Baghdad's insistence on carrying out capital punishment.

The executions were carried out by hanging in the Iraqi capital on Tuesday, according to a statement posted on the ministry's website. All the convicts were Iraqi al-Qaida operatives who were involved in bombings, car bomb attacks and assassinations, the statement said.

The hangings brought the number of prisoners executed in Iraq so far this year to 50, according to Deputy Justice Minister Busho Ibrahim. The latest group was the biggest this year, Ibrahim added. Executions in Iraq are usually carried out by hanging.

According to the Londonbased Amnesty International, Iraq was ranked fourth among the top five executioners in the world in 2011, after China, Iran, Saudi Arabia and the U.S. Last year, Iraq executed 129 people, triggering concerns among rights groups on whether defendants had received a fair trial.

After the U.S.-led invasion in 2003, coalition authority officials suspended Iraq's death penalty, but it was reinstated in 2004 by Iraq's transitional government. Since 2005, Iraq's government has executed 422 people, including women and foreigners convicted of terrorism.

Erin Evers, a Middle East researcher at Human Rights Watch, said the number of those executed and the timing of the latest announcement was cause for concern.

Israel army court sentences teen

JERUSALEM (AP) - A lawyer for a Palestinian-The IMF predicts that the American teenager says an Israeli military court has sentenced the boy to two weeks in prison for throwing rocks at Israeli vehicles.

Mahmoud Hassan of the Palestinian prisoner rights group Addameer said Wednesday the court also ordered 14-year-old Mohammad Khalek to pay an $830 fine. Hassan says that taking into account the time Khalek already spent in prison, he will likely be released on Sunday.

The case of New Orleansborn Khalek has drawn attention to Israel's system of military detention for Palestinian minors, which has been frequently criticized. In March, the U.N. said the system gravely violates minors' rights.

Khalek was arrested on April 5 in a night-time military raid on his home by soldiers wielding assault rifles.

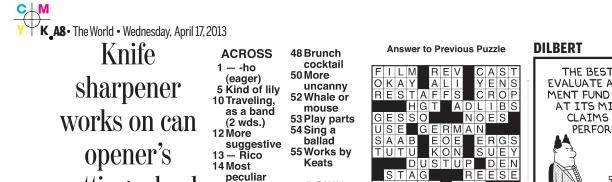

The Israeli military had no immediate comment.

Security raised at Norway party meet

OSLO, Norway (AP) -Norway's governing Labor Party has tightened security at its first convention since a farright extremist who railed against the party's immigration policies killed 77 people in a bombing and shooting massacre.

Labor officials cited an "overall assessment" of the situation in Norway, but wouldn't say whether the raised security level was linked to Anders Behring Breivik's attacks on July 22, 2011, or the explosions at the Boston Marathon this week.

The four-day convention starts Thursday with Prime Minister Jens Stoltenberg leading a memorial service for the victims of Breivik's violence.

SUNDAY, SANS ADS. I don't start reading the Sunday paper until I've gone through it and thrown out all the ads. I don't even look at the ads - I just toss them. This keeps me from seeing a need I didn't have before I got the paper. I'm no longer tempted to shop, and it has really helped curb my spending. - Beck, EC Blog

STOP THE PASTA BOIL-OVER. To stop my pot of pasta from boiling over, I spray the insides of the pot with nonstick spray before I fill it with water. This breaks the water's surface tension and prevents it from boiling up and over. -ThriftySoul, EC Blog

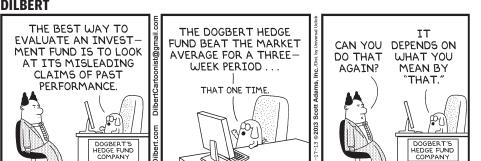

DETERGENT'S LITTLE SOMETHING EXTRA. I mix my generic laundry detergent with a little bit of expensive name-brand detergent. This makes my laundry detergent last longer, it cleans my clothes really well, and they smell so nice, too. - Kay, EC Blog PEPPERMINT REMEDY.

I began having tension headaches and went in for a massage. The masseuse suggested that when I sense a headache coming on, to massage my neck and shoulders with a dro two of peppermint oil. This has really helped. It feels great, brings a little warmth to my shoulders and neck, and most of the time gets rid of the headache. -Georgia, Minnesota BIRTHDAY COUPON BOOK. My mom and sisterin-law create a "Birthday Coupon Book" each year for the kids in the family. They design a colorful book of about 10 coupons that are tailored to each child's interests and can be cashed in whenever the child wants. Some of the favorite coupons are "$5 Shopping Spree at the Dollar Store with Grandma," "Skip Piano Practice Day" and "Dinner Out With Mom" or "Dinner Out With Dad." This gift not only spreads out the birthday celebration and the cost, but creates special times and memories for each child, parent and grandparent. -N.N., email SEALED WITH A CLIP. I have used clothespins for years to close food bags and containers. I've also added a couple of other items that now have a dominant role in my kitchen. Rubber bands and 2-inch binder clips, purchased at the local office supply store, are durable, and between the two can handle any size package. I have wire shelving in my pantry, so I attach the binder clips to the front lip of a shelf until needed. A generous bag of rubber bands takes little space in a drawer. - Janet, email Would you like to send a tip to Mary? tened to Stone.

"He does feel sorry for the family's loss," said defense co-counsel Stacey Lowe.

But Barker's son. Anthony Hajek of Coos Bay, was at a literal loss for words when Stone asked for his remarks before the judge pronounced sentence.

Hajek said he'd thought long and hard but couldn't verbalize his feelings.

"Just when I thought I had something solid, I would come up against something else," he said. "It's made me question my own faith in Christ."

Hajek and Barker, who was an alcoholic, had been estranged but were working toward a closer relationship. Hajek buried his father's ashes beneath a Japanese flowering plum tree at the North Bend Boardwalk, a spot Barker had loved to visit.

A nine-man, three-woman jury took only a few hours before finding Ambill guilty March 29. Jurors had listened to four days of testimony and examined dozens of exhibits.

Much of Frasier's case dwelt on the ferocity of the attack on Barker, who a state pathologist said was beaten probably into semi-consciousness before he was stabbed repeatedly in the chest. His neck was slashed nearly to his spinal cord.

Barker's abdomen also bore a pattern of cuts that looked like a poorly drawn pentagram, asterisk or Asian ideograph. Tufts of his hair were found around the room.

Witnesses said Barker, a resident of a substance-abuse treatment program, regularly checked into local motels to binge drink. He and Ambill were seen buying Hurricane Malt Liquor at Ashworth's Market across from the Itty Bitty Inn the day before Barker's body was found.

Investigators offered no motive for the killing and produced no murder weapon, thought to be a single-edged knife. But experts found a spatter of Barker's blood on the backpack Ambill was carrying when he was arrested.

Ambill had hitchhiked north along U.S. Highway 101. He turned himself in to Lincoln County sheriff's deputies in Newport after he had been named as a person of interest in Barker's slaying.

The slightly built Ambill, previously convicted of violent assaults in Arizona, California and Nevada, wept when he heard his verdict last month. He told his attorneys he had surrendered only to testify concerning what he knew about Barker's death.

Deal expected in suit against McDonald's

DETROIT (AP) - A judge is expected to finalize today a $700,000 settlement between McDonald's Corp. and members of Michigan's Muslim community over claims a suburban Detroit restaurant falsely advertised its food as prepared according to Islamic law.

The two sides are scheduled to meet for final approval before Wayne County Circuit Judge Kathleen Macdonald, who has overseen the case and refereed objections by outside groups since a preliminary deal was announced in January. The settlement was originally set to be finalized March 1, but Macdonald extended the public comment period after pressure from Dearborn lawyer Majed Moughni, who criticized the classaction settlement on Facebook and was temporarily barred from communicating publicly about the case.

Ahmed Ahmed, the Dearborn Heights man who represents plaintiffs in the classaction suit, claims he bought a chicken sandwich in September 2011 at the restaurant but found it wasn't halal.

Bulldogs improve to 4-0 in league

THE WORLD

North Bend's baseball team stayed perfect in Far West League play with a 4-0 win at Brookings-Harbor on Tuesday.

Chris Gruchacz pitched a three-hitter for the Bulldogs and Michael Hampton hit a two-run home run.

Hampton's homer came in the second inning and scored Zach Barker, who had reached on a walk and been sacrificed to second base by Anthony Cook.

North Bend also scored in the first and third innings. Gruchacz walked, stole second and came home on a single by Tylan Corder in the first. Clayton Durvee singled, stole second and scored on a single by Zach Inskeep in the third.

"It's always tough to go down and play at Brookings," North Bend coach Brad Horning said. "We played well down here.

"It's hard to score runs down here. We got enough today and got a great pitching performance by Gruchacz."

All three of Brookings-Harbor's hits were by Alec McBride. Gruchacz had five strikeouts.

Sunset Conference

Bandon 6, Gold Beach 0: Mychal Yarbor pitched a two-hitter with 15 strikeouts for the Tigers in their home win.

Robert Martino went 4-for-4 with two doubles, a run and an RBI. Quentin Coomer had two hits and two runs.

"Gold Beach is a much-improved baseball team," Bandon coach Tyler Pendergast said. "We knew that coming in. We tried to prepare accordingly.

"Obviously, throwing Yarbor on the mound the first time against them, we know we have a pretty good shot of competing."

Bandon improved to 8-2 on the season. The Tigers are scheduled to host Myrtle Point for a doubleheader Friday.

North Bend gets first league win since 2009

By John Gunther The World

NORTH BEND - Patience Cook had just one strikeout for North Bend in the Bulldogs' game with visiting Brookings-Harbor - but it came at a great time.

Cook caught the Bruins' pitcher Hannah Goergen looking at the third strike with two outs and the potential tying run on second base, preserving a 3-2 win for North Bend on Tuesday. It was the Bulldogs' first Far West League win in the past four seasons, snapping a 51-game losing streak in league play.

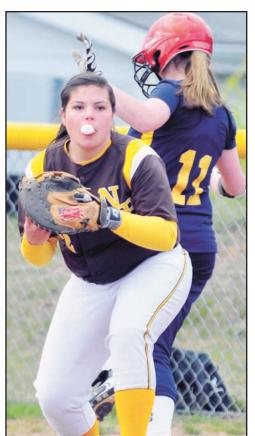

"I'm very excited," said North Bend shortstop Madison Spence, a senior who was part of her first league win.

North Bend got a pair of clutch singles and some heads-up base running by Kadie Forderer and nearly spotless defense behind Cook. The Bulldogs improve to 1-3 in league play.

"I think if we just continue with this much energy and focus, the outcome will be a lot better," Spence said.

The game was a battle of strong pitching and defense until North Bend broke through in the third inning.

Ruby Ayala started the inning with a walk and moved to third on a pair of wild pitches. After Goergen struck out two straight Bulldogs, Forderer ripped the ball to right field for the Seavello scored when Megan Strain hit the ball to short, and Strain ran right in front of Spence just before the ball got to her, which distracted her enough that she couldn't handle the ball cleanly.

North Bend went in front for good in the bottom of the fifth. Chelsey Cook reached on a one-out error and then Forderer lined an RBI single to left with two outs.

"It was very exciting," said Forderer. "I haven't hit well for a couple games, so that felt good?

Katie Carroll followed with a single to right and then North Bend got a break. Spence hit the ball to third base and it glanced off the glove of Strain and rolled into the hole at shortstop. Forderer never stopped running and easily reached home to give the Bulldogs a 3-1 lead.

Brookings-Harbor got one run back in the sixth. Seavello reached on an error to lead off the inning and came home on a sacrifice fly nearly to the fence in center field.

But Patience Cook got out of that inning and then retired the first two batters of the seventh before Hannah Baron hit an infield single and stole second.

Goergen was facing a full count when Cook fired a strike at the knees for the final out of the game.

Cook had another solid game, without any walks. Brookings-Harbor had seven hits, but the Bulldogs backed Cook up with solid defense, including catcher Katie Carroll throwing one runner out at third to end an inning.

Glide 10, Myrtle Point 0: Brandon Halter pitched a fiveinning no-hitter and also had two doubles as the Wildcats shut out the Bobcats.

Cory Finlay had a three-run home run and double for Glide.

Class 2A-1A District 2

Days Creek 2, Reedsport 1, 9 innings: Sam Dooley executed a suicide squeeze with two outs and one strike in the ninth inning to lift the host Wolves to the win.

"We had it played perfectly and they still executed it," said Reedsport coach Todd Harrington.

The Braves managed just one hit against Davs Creek pitcher Tracy Doudna, who had a complete game with 17 strikeouts. The only hit was an infield single in the first inning by Jordan Ragan between Doudna's legs.

game's first run.

The Bruins responded in the top of the fourth, with a little bit of good fortune. Mymy Seavello led off with a single, before Cook retired the next two batters. But Alaura Marrington smashed the ball right back up the middle with two outs, and it bounced hard off Cook's leg and toward third base. Seavello alertly charged around second and raced to third, which was left unprotected as the

Cunningham raises bar in high jump

THE WORLD

Bend's Wyatt North Cunningham cleared a Class 4A best 6 feet, 6 inches to win the high jump in a Far West League track and field meet at North Bend High School on Tuesday.

Cunningham, the defending state champion in the event, had easily his best jump of the season, and one that has been surpassed only by three jumpers from other classifications.

His leap was the best among the six schools participating in the meet, which was won by North Bend's boys and girls teams.

Cunningham also won the 400 meters in 52.21 seconds, edging out Siuslaw middle distance standout Hayden Schaffner, who finished in 52.47.

Cunningham was the only boy to win two events Tuesday, though several others had solid marks.

Billy Jones of Siuslaw won the pole vault by clearing 13 feet.

North Bend's other winners were Noah Langlie (3,000), Lucero (high hurdles), Michael Hobson (300 hurdles), Mateski (discus) and Jordan Siebenthaler (triple jump).

There were three double-winners in the girls meet.

Manziel is living the college dream

Johnny Manziel, please don't leave Twitter.

The Texas A&M quarterback may be the reigning Heisman winner, the most exciting player in college football and an allaround transcendent talent, but it's his game off the field that makes him the envy of every red-blooded male out there.

Manziel threatened to leave Twitter recently, and though he made a brief comeback earlier this week, his wonderful life evidently will not be chronicled on the world's largest micro-blogging site.

Manziel is a former University of Oregon signee who pulled out. Fans know him affectionately as Johnny Football, and he has had one of the most compelling offseasons a college athlete could have. He's met LeBron James and Drake, he's stood on stage at Wale concerts and even has a picture of himself and Chris Paul as his Twitter avatar.

The most perplexing thing about Manziel is the pleasure of living vicariously through him on Twitter.

He has a perfect life. Everything about his personal profile epitomizes the stereotypical popular-and-rich quarterback. He's a

That's no surprise. The big surprise is that I like it. Sure, Manziel's wealthy background affords him luxuries unavailable to struggling college kids. I understand that and I'm sympathetic to those less fortunate. (Pretty much everybody.) But being able to see Manziel show up everywhere and not have to suffer NCAA violations is a treat.

Manziel recently had to drop all his on-campus classes. His celebrity has grown so big, he can't go on campus without being massively distracted. His entire course load this semester is online. He's a star, the most famous person in College Station, and he's enjoying himself. What a novel concept.

I contend that if a college athlete can't get paid, he at least should enjoy whatever fruits of his labor are allowed. And finally, we can see a famous college player really enjoy himself.

Hopefully Manziel isn't the last.

Oregon admits major recruiting violations

PORTLAND (AP) - The University of Oregon has acknowledged major NCAA violations in connection with football recruiting and proposed a self-imposed two-year probation with the loss of one scholarship in each of the next three years, according to documents released by the school.

The revelations were made in a summary disposition report included in the documents released Monday night. The contents were first reported by KATU television in Portland.

Oregon and the NCAA have failed to come to an agreement on the matter and the case is expected to go before the infractions committee at some point this year.

The NCAA began looking into possible violations following reports about payments Oregon made to recruiting services, including a $25,000 payment to Willie Lyles and Houston-based Complete Scouting Services in 2010. Lyles had a connection with an Oregon recruit.

The NCAA will not comment on the ongoing investigations.

Oregon's athletic department issued a statement that said: "The review is ongoing until the NCAA Committee on Infractions issues its final report. The integrity of the process and our continued full cooperation with the NCAA prohibits us from publicly discussing the specifics of this matter."

The university released 515 pages of documents on Monday night in response to public records requests. The documents were heavily redacted and included several drafts of the summary disposition report.

The report included details of Oregon's relationship with Lyles. Following allegations of possible violations in 2011, Oregon released information that Lyles had produced but it was largely outdated.

Bills will wait to try to make deal with Byrd

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. The Buffalo Bills are playing the waiting game with Jairus Byrd while hoping to sign their star safety and former University of Oregon standout to a long-term contract extension.

Byrd is the only member of the Bills not in attendance for the start of Buffalo's first voluntary minicamp under new coach Doug Marrone on Tuesday. His absence is not a surprise, however, after the safety was given the franchise tag on March 1.

General manager Buddy Nix says at the team's predraft luncheon that the Bills are making an effort to sign Byrd to a multiyear deal.

The 26-year-old Byrd has been Buffalo's most consistent defender in recent seasons. He was fourth on the team in tackles in 2012 with 76, and led the team in interceptions with five. He has 18 career interceptions.

Usain Bolt to race in London

LONDON (AP) – Usain Bolt will headline the Diamond League meeting at London's Olympic Stadium in July, returning to the scene of his clean sweep of sprint gold medals

The Jamaican sprinter will compete in the 100 meters and the 4x100 relay at the twoday meeting on July 26-27, which marks the anniversary of the opening ceremony of the London Olympics.

"I'm looking forward to coming back to the U.K., especially with it being a year since winning three gold medals in the Olympic Stadium," Bolt said.

It will be his final major meeting before the world championship in Moscow starting on Aug. 10.

Besides the Olympics, Bolt hasn't run in London since 2009. That's partly because of Britain's tax laws, which force foreign competitors to give up a share of their prize money and endorsements. Athletes will be given tax exemptions for the meet.

Bolt is one of 12 gold medalists from the London Games to confirm their attendance, with others including 100 hurdles champion Sally Pearson of Australia and 110 hurdles winner Aries Merritt of the United States.

American Sanya Richards-Ross (women's 400), Mo Farah (men's 5,000 and 10,000) and Kirani James (men's 400) are other Olympic champs set to return.

The London meet is the 11th of 14 events in the Diamond League schedule.

NFL broadcasting legend Summerall dies

DALLAS (AP) - The voice of tournament, as well. football. The NFL's narrator for generations. A master of restraint.

Pat Summerall soothed American television audiences over four decades – his deep, resonant beside Madden were succinct, of voice and simple, understated style served as the perfect complement to the boisterous enthusiasm of John Madden, his partner in a celebrated pairing that lasted half of the NFL player-turned-announcer's career.

Summerall died Tuesday at age 82 of cardiac arrest, University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center spokesman Jeff Carlton flawless summation without dissaid, speaking on behalf of Summerall's wife, Cheri.

Summerall called 16 Super of the NFL that it was easy to forget he was the leading voice of the

"He was royalty in the broadcast booth," Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Iones said.

His final play-by-play words course, as he called the game-ending field goal of the Super Bowl for Fox on Feb. 3, 2002, when New England beat St. Louis 20-17.

"It's right down the pipe. Adam Vinatieri. No time on the clock. And the Patriots have won Super Bowl XXXVI. Unbelievable," Summerall said.

Sparse, exciting, perfect. A tracting from the reaction viewers could see on the screen.

At the end of their final broad-Summerall as "a treasure" and the "spirit of the National Football that the former Oakland Raiders coach badly wanted to keep - and did – when he had to switch networks 20 years ago.

"Pat was my broadcasting partner for a long time, but more than that he was my friend for all of these years," Madden said in a statement Tuesday. "Pat "Pat Summerall is the voice of football and always will be."

Summerall played 10 NFL seasons from 1952 to 1961 with the Chicago Cardinals and New York Giants, but it was in his second career that he became a voice familiar to generations of sports fans, not only those of the NFL.

"Pat was a friend of nearly 40 years," CBS Sports broadcaster master of restraint in his commentary, an example for all of us. He was who ever spoke into a microphone."

Summerall started doing NFL games for CBS in 1964, and became a play-by-play guy 10 years later. He was also part of coverage of the PGA Tour, including the Masters from 1968-94, and U.S. Open tennis.

When CBS lost its NFL deal after the 1993 season, Summerall switched to Fox to keep calling NFL games with Madden. Summerall had hoped to keep working with CBS for other events like the Masters, but network executives saw it otherwise. At the time, CBS Sports anchor Jim Nantz said he was "very saddened" that Summerall didn't get to leave CBS under his own terms.

I was his understudy for intervention, the first five days did-Masters and the U.S. Open tennis League" in a tribute to the partner also one of the great storytellers 10 years. He could not have been n't do me any good."

A recovering alcoholic, Summerall had a liver transplant in April 2004. The lifesaving surgery was necessary even after 12 years of sobriety.

After an intervention involving, among others, former NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, former CBS Sports President Peter Lund and former PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beaman, Summerall checked into the Betty Ford Clinic in April 1992.

Braves stretch streak to 10 wins

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA - Jason Heyward, Justin Upton and Dan Uggla homered in the eighth inning, and Juan Francisco hit a pair of solo shots earlier in the game to help the Atlanta Braves win their 10th straight with a 6-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals in an interleague matchup Tuesday night.

Atlanta's 10-game winning streak is its longest since the club won 15 in a row from April 15 to May 2, 2000. The Braves are 12-1 and off to their best start since they began the 1994 season 13-1.

Eric O'Flaherty (3-0) struck out two in a scoreless eighth.

Heyward's second homer, Upton's eighth and Uggla's third were solo shots off Kelvin Herrera (1-1). The Braves have outhomered opponents 25-7 and outscored them 68-25 for the best run differential in the majors.

Heyward hit the go-ahead shot before Upton and Uggla followed to make it 5-2.

Craig Kimbrel finished off the Royals in a non-save situation after an injury to Luis Avilan.

Rangers 4, Cubs 2: Derek Holland pitched seven shutout innings, Adrian Beltre hit a two-run homer and Craig Gentry made a diving catch for the final out to preserve Texas' interleague victory over Chicago on a 39-degree night at Wrigley Field.

Holland (1-1) at one point retired nine straight against the Cubs, who have lost three games in a row. The left-hander struck out six and allowed two hits.

Yankees and Diamondbacks were off Monday

Mariano Rivera, the last big leaguer still wearing No. 42 on a daily basis, closed for his third save.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Marlins 8, Nationals 2: Adeiny Hechavarria ended Miami's nine-game home run drought with a three-run shot against Washington.

A throwing error by Nationals third baseman Ryan Zimmerman – his fourth in five games - preceded the homer and led to four unearned runs.

The Marlins (3-11) began the game with the worst record in the majors but broke out of an offensive slump in the fourth inning with four runs, more than they had scored in all but one game.

Hechavarria sent the Marlins Park home run sculpture swinging into Betancourt hit a grand slam, and Carlos action for the first time this season and ended a homer drought that had tied the 20-year-old franchise record.

Rockies 8, Mets 4; Rockies 9, Mets 8, 10 innings: Jordan Pacheco singled home the winning run with two outs in the 10th inning and Colorado rallied from a six-run deficit to sweep a frigid doubleheader from New York.

DUCKS NCAA penalized Oregon in 2004 From Page B1

"There were underlying major violations coupled with failure to monitor violations involving the head coach (2009 through 2011) and the athletics department (2008-2011)," the report said. "While the violations were not intentional in nature, coaches and administrators of a sports program at an NCAA member institution have an obligation to ensure that the activities being engaged in comply with NCAA legislation."

However, the summary disposition also noted no "lack of institutional control," typically one of the most severe charges the NCAA can bring after an investigation of rules violations.

"There is no finding of lack of institutional control and no findings of unethical conduct," the report said. "None of the underlying violations were intentional in nature."

Oregon was penalized by the NCAA in 2004 for a major violation involving the improper recruitment of a junior college player by an assistant coach. The university was put on probation for two years and the unidentified assistant coach was suspended without pay for a week and restricted from some recruiting activities.

Oregon remained eligible for postseason play and did not lose any scholarships because of that violation, which occurred in 2003. The case was resolved without a formal hearing after the NCAA's governing body agreed with the university's proposed penalties.
