Victims were loving grandparents

BRIDGE — Michael Cottam drove four hours Thursday to live out every child's worst nightmare: burying his parents. Just five days after his parents, Lola and Renae Cottam, were believed to have died from homicide, Michael drove to the South Coast to handle their burial arrangements.

There was no reason to buy his father's coffin. Renae, a master craftsman most of his life, had already built the majority of his own casket. Despite his shop and house being set ablaze during the night of their alleged deaths, the coffin remained intact. "Everyone is proud of their parents,

Courageous teen saves child's life

COOS BAY — Fourteen-year-old Austin Reed was fishing with his father, Steve Reed, at Empire Lakes on Monday when his life changed forever. "I can't really explain it," he said. The teen jumped in the water when he noticed Kristian Croy, 8, and Jessie Kirk, age unknown, struggling to stay afloat. The boys were in the middle of the lake with Kristian's brother, Jordan, and lost hold of their boogie board. Austin and the other boys had met for the first time earlier in the day and had been playing. Austin said Kristian's mother, Leann Croy, began shouting at the children to swim back. "I saw them struggling and went out to help them," Austin said. "When I got there, I grabbed one and swam back."

Remembering Kristian Croy

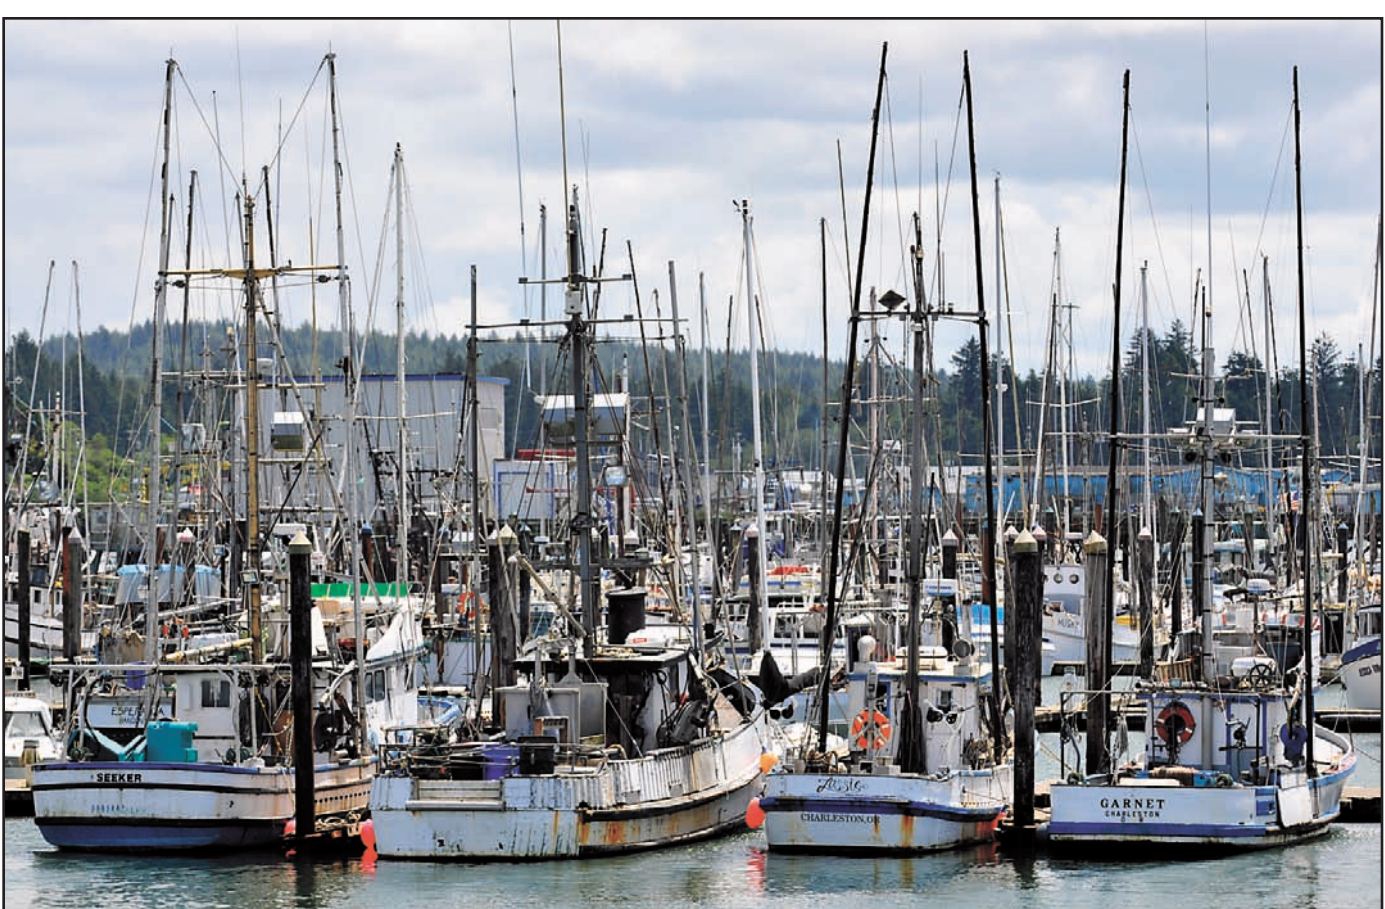

A celebration of life ceremony for Kristian Croy will take place Wednesday at the Bay Area Church of the Nazarene, 1850 Clark Street, North Bend. Viewing will be from 12 p.m. to 2 p.m., with a reception afterward. Kristian tragically drown Monday while swimming in Empire Lakes with his brother Jordan.

Port faces heat for fee increases, LNG

NORTH BEND — About 60 people packed the North Bend Public Library's meeting room to cheer and jeer as the commissioners of the Oregon International Port of Coos Bay adopted two controversial resolutions Thursday night. Both supporters and opponents of the proposed Jordan Cove LNG facility were vocal as port commissioners David Kronsteiner, Jerry Hampel and Eric Farm approved a resolution in support of the facility's export permit application to the U.S. Department of Energy. The facility is one of about 20 whose applications the federal government will evaluate this year to determine whether LNG exports from those sites are in the nation's best interest. The only two proposed facilities applying on the West Coast are Jordan Cove and a site in Warrenton, on the Columbia River. Board president Kronsteiner said the port's resolution would have an effect on the Department of Energy. During the public comment period, supporters and opponents of Jordan

Cove weighed in. "I think this is great for the state of Oregon, for the county, for the Bay Area, for the cities and all of the businesses," said Rick Skinner, a manager at Knife River Materials and a Bay Area Chamber of Commerce board member. "It's just a way to retain our children here so that they can enjoy the things we've enjoyed all this time." Patty Cook said, "I've talked to a lot of community members myself, and there are a lot of them who support this project." Addressing safety concerns, she said, "My husband's a fireman, and he is completely fine with having Jordan Cove here. He's spoken with Jordan Cove, and they've shown (the firefighters) a lot of things that maybe the general public doesn't know about." In contrast, J.C. Williams said it wasn't "morally responsible" to allow people to work in an LNG plant on the North Spit, which she said was subject to earthquake activity and tsunami inundation. Jonathan Hanson went further, calling the commissioners' involvement with Jordan Cove "a criminal enterprise." He

Or, it's "Total Insanity: building an LNG import-export terminal on dredging spoils located on a sand spit . . . directly across the bay from an airport runway, in the flight path of the runway, in an extreme tsunami inundation zone, in an earthquake subduction zone, in an area known for high winds and ship disasters, less than a mile from a highly populated city," says Citizens Against LNG. The two groups are talking about the same project: a liquefied natural gas export facility on the North Spit of Coos Bay, proposed by Jordan Cove Energy Partners, a Canadian-owned energy company. According to Jordan Cove spokesman Mike Hinrichs, the Jordan Cove facility and the Pacific Connector Gas pipeline are No. 6 on a list of about 20 LNG export facilities whose export permits await U.S. Department of

Firefighters: Burned barn a potential hot bed for thieves

■ Truck inside rubble may have been stolen for parts

By THOMAS MORIARTY

COOS BAY — A barn consumed by flames south of Coos Bay on Thursday morning may have been used for scrapping stolen cars.

Volunteer firefighters responding to a reported fire off Kuehn Road shortly after 9 a.m. found a corrugated metal barn fully engulfed in flames. The fire produced a plume of black smoke that was visible from downtown Coos Bay.

Millington Fire Chief Drew Solomon said personnel leaving on a medical call first saw the smoke from the station.

Vehicles from Millington, Greenacres and Sumner fire departments responded to the scene, as well as a forester from the Coos Forest Protective Association.

The blaze quickly collapsed the roof and west wall of the barn, leaving the standing support beams covered in glowing embers.

Assistant Chief Terry

Kuehn said the barn was a foreclosure property that was repossessed by a bank.

Kuehn said the barn was empty at the time of the fire except for a truck, which appeared as being scrapped.

“It’s probably hot,” he said, referring to the likelihood the truck had been stolen.

Sgt. Pat Downing of the Coos County Sheriff’s Office said he couldn’t attribute an increase in auto thefts for the specific purpose of scrapping them, but added it isn’t unheard of in the area.

“We don’t see the chop shops like the big cities, but what we do see is the professionals out in the woods with the trucks with the engines gone,” he said.

Downing said auto scrap-pers are typically after parts like catalytic converters and airbags for sale on the secondhand market.

Firefighters had the fire largely contained by 10 a.m.

Coos Bay maps out plan for prosperity

By TIM NOVOTNY
The World

COOS BAY — To paraphrase a famous quote from the film “Field of Dreams”: If you show them where you are, they will come.

The Coos Bay Downtown Association believes that statement to be true and is taking steps to prove it through a new project.

In May, the organization brought its plan to the Urban Renewal Agency. It calls for the installation of a way-finding sign at the Visitor Information Center on U.S. Highway 101 and two information kiosks near downtown. The City Council took up the plan at their meeting this week.

“We’re a go,” said Randy Dixon, operations superintendent for the Public Works Department.

The cost of the project is not expected to exceed $24,000, with the downtown association paying the first $10,000. The Urban Renewal Agency agreed to pay the rest, up to $14,000.

Nathan Jurey says the association is trying to ensure visitors passing along U.S. Highway 101 take some time to explore other parts of the downtown area.

“The Visitor Center is there, but it’s not open 24/7,” Jurey said Friday. “These signs will be there 24/7.”

And the signs will be detailed.

“The way-finding sign for the downtown Visitor Center will be an entire overview of the city of Coos Bay,” Dixon said. “There will be, in that map, color-coded sections that specifically will correspond to another map on the back that you could reference to a specific area.”

He said the other two sign kiosks, which would focus solely on the downtown Marshfield district, would be at two locations. One located at Second Street and Central Avenue, and the other at the Coos Bay Boardwalk.

“They’re fairly good size. They stand approximately about 6 1/2 feet,” Dixon said.

“People who stop by the boardwalk and look at the sign may see some shops that they want to visit,” Jurey said. “We’re trying to do our part to make our part of town better.”

Both men believe this could be just the beginning of a way-finding map movement. Jurey admits they are hoping to be trail blazers, showing the way for other Coos Bay communities to follow suit.

First, however, they have this project to complete. Dixon says the city’s been in discussions about the overall look of the signs, and will now work out map design. There also may be higher technology features, such as the ability to scan the information directly off the sign with a mobile electronic device.

“We are going to go back and look at what the cost would possibly be to include that,” he said, while predicting the project should be ready before summer ends.

Senate: Protect Douglas wilderness

■ Sen. Wyden sets aside Devil's Staircase forest

THE WORLD

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Senate on Thursday passed the Devil's Staircase Wilderness Act, a bill supported by Oregon's congressional delegation that would permanently conserve thousands of acres of pristine forest near the Southern Oregon coast between state Highway 38 and the Smith River east of Reedsport. The bill now goes to the House.

"The proposed Devil's Staircase Wilderness area is undoubtedly one of Oregon's treasures and the kind of special place truly deserving of permanent protection," Sen. Ron Wyden said in a statement. "My forestry philosophy has always been to get the cut up where it makes sense, but to lock in protections for the most sensitive areas. This bill can foster recreation jobs not far from the Oregon Coast as part of a common-sense effort to improve federal management of Oregon's forests."

The bill, also supported by Sen. Jeff Merkley, passed unanimously as part of a group of 14 public lands bills from the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, which Wyden chairs. The group included three wilderness bills — more than passed the Senate in the entirety of the previous Congress, Wyden's statement said.

The Devil's Staircase legislation designates about 30,500 acres of land in the Siuslaw National Forest and the Bureau of Land Management's Coos District as wilderness and protects about 14 miles of the Wasson and Franklin Creeks. Wyden called the proposed Devil's Staircase Wilderness "the finest old-growth forest remaining in Oregon's Coast Range, boasting huge Douglas-fir, cedar and hemlock trees."

The land already is protected as a late-successional reserve by the Northwest Forest Plan — a critical habitat for the northern spotted owl and marbled murrelet — and as an area of critical environmental concern by the Bureau of Land Management. While the current designations provide conservation for the land, the wilderness designation is needed to make those protections permanent.

University of Oregon police to have guns

PORTLAND (AP) — Armed police officers will be on the University of Oregon campus when students return to Eugene in the fall.

The state Board of Higher Education voted unanimously Friday to allow officers with the newly formed University of Oregon Police Department to carry guns.

University president Mike Gottfredson said armed officers are needed to ensure the safety of students and employees.

University officers now carry batons, pepper spray and restraints, and call city of Eugene police if more powerful weapons are needed.

School officials say officers must have guns to confront an active shooter and to safely perform routine police tasks, such as conducting traffic stops and transporting suspects to jail.

The department has already purchased 20 Glock handguns.

Human cause cited in S. Ore. warehouse fire

CAVE JUNCTION (AP) — Firefighters in the Illinois Valley of Southern Oregon say they've concluded a fire that destroyed a warehouse had a human cause, although they've stopped short of calling it a case of arson.

The Grants Pass Daily Courier reports the 6,000-square-foot warehouse was near the Illinois Valley Airport, about four miles south of Cave Junction. The fire on Wednesday destroyed the building.

Illinois Valley Fire District Chief Dennis Hoke says a mining company had occupied the building but told investigators it hadn't used it since January.

A state fire marshal, Charlie Chase, says the blaze started inside the building. He says causes such as electrical or fuel malfunctions have been ruled out — power to the building wasn't on, and propane tanks were empty.

Cheers & Jeers

True hero

Cheers to 14-year-old Austin Reed, who selflessly swam into Empire Lakes on Monday to help save the youngsters after they fell in and couldn't swim. Kristian Croy's death was a tragedy, but Austin's effort to save Jessie Kirk kept the incident from being even worse.

Beat it, bullies

Both Coos Bay and Powers school districts topped state performance levels for anti-bullying initiatives. In the classroom and the world of social media, school yard teasing too often can become a viral disease that spreads with ease. Cheers to school districts that stand up for students' identities.

No go, speed racer

Jeers to anyone who treats highways as their own personal race track. Oregon State Police pulled over nine speeders recently on state Highway 42 after they were seen weaving in and out of traffic. Those drivers may not care, but highway hijinks endanger many lives.

Homegrown brain

Many of this year's South Coast graduates will go on to greatness. Still, some stand out more than others. Cheers to Oregon Connections Academy student Strider Kachelein, whose great grades and hard work landed a full ride to Vassar.

For the kids

Cheers to the Oregon House this week for passing a bill that would keep harmful chemicals out of products kids use. Opponents say the regulations could hurt businesses, but do we really want things like mercury, cadmium and formaldehyde around our children?

Notable nightlife

Cheers to Bandon for its "Alive after Five" initiative, which launched Friday. Keeping businesses open during tourist season will draw visitors to the South Coast.

Let's fix the problem, not just place blame

In the June 15, 2013 Public Forum, Mr. Zimmerman once again displayed his zeal for, and application of, the Secular Liberal Progressive Elite (SLPE) attitude and behavior. That is, to always blame someone else. Never take responsibility for anything, much less ones' own behavior and decisions. Always put maximum personal effort into fixing the blame while putting zero personal effort into fixing the problem.

For after all, the SLPE believe that it is governments' job to take care of all problems and provide for all people. And if government can't do that, then government isn't big enough and must collect more taxes.

Our nation was founded on freedom, liberty, personal responsibility, limited government and equal opportunity. Equal outcome is no where to be found in our founding documents.

Has Mr. Z run for a national elected office? An Oregon state elected office? Run for a Coos County office, a city counsel seat? Or even a school board position? Has he given his talents and money to charitable community endeavors? I think not. Remember the mantra of the SLPE; fix the blame not the problem, we are not responsible and we are not our brothers' keeper. That's all the job of big government.

Proper training would make all the difference

In response to the editorial "They're Teachers, Not Gunfighters" — I beg to differ. The two are independent of each other. During my time in the Marine Corps Reserves, which included a trip to the desert in the Middle East and Bagdad in 2003 (the Iraq war), our unit consisted of college students, engineers, attorneys, realtors, teachers, retail clerks and fast food restaurant employees. It does not take a career title to be proficient with a firearm. Yes, it takes training but you don't have to be a police officer or active duty military to be considered "suitable to carry". With proper training, a willing and able butcher, baker, candlestick maker or teacher could learn to properly utilize a firearm and protect children. When the shooting starts in a school, every precious minute counts, and body counts are accumulating. I would rather a good guy with a gun be just a few doors

Maybe Mulkey should have been promoted

Please supplement the June 18 front page article that appeared under the headline "MHS will have new principal — Mulkey takes demotion to be dean, AD".

The article suggests that this downgrade was not requested by Greg Mulkey. Why was Mulkey "demoted"? Demoted for cause? Demoted because he represents a threat to the current superintendent? Those of us who are parents, grandparents, friends and family of MHS students, and who follow MHS activities, know that Mulkey is a good principal and a kind, caring and considerate person. His recent accomplishments appear to outweigh those of the current superintendent.

We were informed by your article that after an apparent glowing assessment and support for Mulkey, this decision to demote is solely the decision of the school district superintendent and that the school board was uninvolved. Wow, after so many years of service and accomplishment for the school district, no attempt by any board member was made to keep Mulkey? That must give all school district employees a warm and fuzzy feeling. Are they next?

I don't expect the board to micromanage; I do expect their involvement when a school principal is being removed. The article suggests that school board chairman James Martin has done an imitation of Pontius Pilate.

Another way we overpay for health care

Little victories in curbing health care costs can add up. In truth, they seem little only next to the titanic $2.6 trillion Americans spend a year on health care. So let us salute them.

Case in point, the Medicare Payment Advisory Commission (Medpac) proposes ending a ridiculously expensive practice: Medicare paying hospital outpatient departments vastly more than it does doctors providing the same routine service in their offices.

Here are two examples, courtesy of The Seattle Times: Woman goes to a dermatologist at Seattle's Roosevelt Clinic for the same treatment she received in an earlier visit to a doctor's office. But this time she gets two bills — $109 for the doctor and $228 for the privilege of seeing the doctor in real estate owned by the hospital. This is the "facility fee."

A retired Seattle doctor offers a similar story. His wife consulted a doctor — no procedures done — in a hospital clinic and received a facility charge of $177 in addition to the doctor's bill of $139. The sum total came to $316 — this for a 15-minute chat in a 10-by-10-foot office space, no water view.

Small wonder hospitals have been buying up physician practices. That way they can drag more patients onto their premises and tack facility fees onto their bills. In Washington state, for example, 2 percent of the cardiologists were employed by hospitals in 2007. Now 42 percent are.

You know the echocardiogram, that test where the doctor sticks those things on your chest to check out your heart. For Medicare beneficiaries, the government and patient pay a total of $188 for an echocardiogram in a doctor's office. They are charged $452 for the same thing done in a hospital outpatient department.

There is no conceivable reason for doing a routine echocardiogram in a hospital setting other than improving the hospital's revenue stream. In answer to the question, "What risks are there from the (echocardiogram) test?" the Harvard Medical School responds, "There are no risks."

So Medpac has come up with an eminently reasonable proposal: "Medicare should base payment rates on the resources needed to safely treat patients in the most efficient setting, adjusting for differences in patient severity." Translation: Go to the least expensive setting, while taking the patient's condition into account.

Some private insurers are already on the case. Seattle-based Group Health Cooperative has told the hospital systems it contracts with that it will no longer pay their fees for ordinary visits to the doctor. And, as a nice touch, it won't let them saddle patients with them, either.

Naturally, hospitals don't like this kind of talk. They moan of the costs of their emergency rooms, their expensive regulations and the allegedly paltry sums Medicare pays them for outpatient care (all the while advertising for Medicare patients).

Left unspoken is the soaring compensation of hospital executives. Some get multimillion-dollar pay packages tied to how many bodies they get through the hospital door. Theirs is a good business.

We were speaking of how minor victories in curbing medical costs can add up to healthy savings. Medpac identified 66 groups of services performed in hospital outpatient departments that could be done in a doctor's office.

By paying the doctor's office rate for them, Medicare and its beneficiaries would save $900 million a year. Another $600 million a year could be saved for 12 groups of services commonly performed in ambulatory surgical centers but often done in more expensive hospital settings.

Put these numbers together, and you have $1.5 billion a year in savings. That's not a shabby number, even when floating in the ocean of American health care spending.

Daryl L. Bell-Greenstreet

Oct. 13, 1949 - June 16, 2013

Daryl Lyn Bell-Greenstreet was born Oct. 1, 1949, in Illinois. He died at home, surrounded by family, June 16, 2013, in North Bend.

Daryl was a Vietnam veteran who, having been stationed on the northern border near Da Nang from 1967-69, was exposed to the deadly pesticide, Agent Orange, as were thousands of other young Marines in the area. Daryl was diagnosed with non-Hodgkins lymphoma in July 2006. He sailed through 17 chemotherapies, plus full-bodied radiation, before undergoing a successful stem cell transplant at the Seattle VA Hospital in September 2007. However, a deep infection from his Hickman catheter resulted in the onset of severe fibromyalgia, nine months after the transplant. In August 2012, Daryl was diagnosed with glioblastoma, an aggressive form of brain cancer. He underwent a full treatment of radiation at the Bay Area Hospital Radiation Center last fall.

Daryl pursued pre-law courses by correspondence during the war and finished his bachelor's degree when he returned to Illinois. En route from California to Seattle for his transplant, he and his wife, Becky, passed through the Bay Area, deciding to retire here. Less than one year later, they moved to Coos Bay, then resided outside of Coquille for three years. He entered the Avameer (Hearthside) facility this last spring, but he chose to live with Becky, his German shepherd, Jake, and two cats until the end of his life. Daryl devoured books on history, physics, mathematics and treasured his collection of world literature, as well. A tool cutter/grinder early in his married life, he later became enamored with theater and film. While the Bell-

Greenstreets lived in California, he wrote several plays and screenplays. Motivated by the deaths of several older friends and family who had to move into nursing homes, due to the lack of a medication reminder, he invented and built the original prototype for and patented Mediclock. His second patented medical device is a disposable, non-resuable syringe. Despite years of networking with potential investors, both products still need to be on the market. He invented numerous products which would have solved many patients' problems.

Daryl's overwhelming generosity extended to family, friends and strangers, always stopping to fix a flat tire, despite rain and mud. While residing in Tucson, Ariz., Daryl devoted much of his time serving on the state Foster Care Review Board. He cared deeply about diminishing the numbers of homeless children and orphans. Daryl wrote prolifically over the years from numerous white papers on physics and math, to a memoir of his life in the Marines at Camp Pendleton, to letters to the editor, the most recent of which urged husbands to appreciate their wives.

Daryl is survived by his wife, Becky, "the best thing that ever happened to me"; his children from a previous marriage, Laura Daley, Jason Greenstreet and their children both of Missouri; sister, Donna, her husband, Tim McCarthy and children of California; brother, David, his wife, Carol and son of Florida; many nieces and nephews; five grandchildren; and a host of friends from one end of the United States to the other.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Betty Brock and Charles Greenstreet; and brother, Don Greenstreet, also a Vietnam veteran.

A celebration of his life will be held Aug. 18 at Gloria Dei Lutheran Church in Coos Bay.

Arrangements are under the direction of North Bend Chapel, 541-756-0440.

Immigration bill boosted by border deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Support-ers of bipartisan immigration legisla-tion smoothed the way Friday for likely Senate passage of their handi-work, overcoming last-minute dis-agreements at the bill’s controversial core and tacking on other items cer-tain to build support.

A test vote was set for Monday on the bill, which calls for a military-style surge to increase security at the U.S.-Mexican border. At the same time it sets out a 13-year pathway to citizenship for millions of immi-grants living in the United States unlawfully.

Sen. Lisa Murkowski of Alaska became the 11th Republican to announce her support for the legisla-tion in the Democratic-controlled Senate. More were expected to fol-low, possibly enough to produce 70 votes or more and easily overwhelm its critics.

Some Democrats said a heavy show of support at the end of next week could alter the bill’s trajectory in the House, where majority Republicans strongly oppose citi-zenship for immigrants who came to the country illegally or overstayed their visa.

“Hopefully as congressmen look how their senators voted, they will be influenced by it,” said Sen. Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., who has played a major role for Democrats.

The bill’s critics made no claim they could block it in the Senate, but said their position would be vindi-cated in the long run.

Republican Sen. Jeff Sessions of Alabama said the measure’s claims of border security were no different than previous assurances. “Time and again, politicians have prom-ised, promised, promised. But they never delivered, delivered, delivered. And that’s a fact,” he said.

With immigration at the top of President Barack Obama’s second-term domestic agenda, White House spokesman Jay Carney labeled the Senate agreement a breakthrough. He refrained from issuing an out-right endorsement of the legislation, even though Cabinet secretaries were consulted on some portions of it and administration officials draft-ed others.

The day’s developments marked a victory for the Senate’s so-called Gang of Eight, four Democrats and four Republicans who spent months working out the basic framework of immigration legislation. They then warded off unwanted changes in the Senate Judiciary Committee last month, and in recent days, negotiat-ed significant alterations with a group of Republicans who were uncommitted but willing to swing behind the bill if it were changed.

The principal demand was for tougher border security, particularly after the Congressional Budget Office estimated this week the bill would fail to prevent a future buildup in the population of immigrants in the country illegally.

Republican Sens. John Hoeven of North Dakota and Bob Corker of Tennessee, who had spent about a week negotiating with members of the Gang of Eight for changes, announced the agreement Thursday. A day later, Corker said in the Senate the bill is a chance to deal with “the issues of security many of our citi-zens across the country care about, but at the same time allow 11 million people to come out of the shadows and work in the light and be a part of this great, great nation.”

The result of the negotiations was a series of expensive and highly detailed steps to guard against future illegal immigration across the 2,000-mile border with Mexico.

For the so-called Yuma and Tuc-son sectors in Arizona, for example, the bill requires installation of 50 fixed towers; 73 fixed camera sys-tems; 28 mobile surveillance sys-tems; 685 unattended ground sen-sors, including seismic, imaging and infrared; and 22 handheld equip-ment devices, including thermal imaging systems and night vision goggles.

Town holds out hope

HAILEY, Idaho (AP) —

The yellow ribbons, some tattered, some faded, can be seen long before state Highway 75 spills into Hailey, Idaho — home to America’s only prisoner of war in its conflict with Afghanistan. They hang from roadside utility poles and in front of homes near the one where Bowe Bergdahl grew up. They adorn virtual-ly every tree and light post on Main Street, where signs in shop windows issue pleas to “Bring Bowe Home.”

The ribbons may be the most visible sign that the people of Hailey haven’t for-gotten the Army sergeant who, four years ago June 30, disappeared from his base in southeastern Afghanistan and was taken captive by the Taliban.

But there are other reminders, too: The Norway maple trees— one for each year Bergdahl has been held — planted in the local park. Even Bergdahl’s father, once the town’s clean-shaven UPS deliveryman, has grown a long beard, a personal monument to his son’s plight, not likely to be shorn until he is freed.

The Afghan war, and the taking of this POW, may have long faded from the minds of most Americans. But for this community in the shadow of Idaho’s Sawtooth Mountains, Bowe Bergdahl and his family’s fight to free him are “omnipresent,” said local Wesley Deklotz. “It’s a whole community of people that are keeping him in their thoughts.”

And now, for the first time in a long time, this place has reason to hope that the 27-year-old soldier could soon be home.

On Thursday, the Taliban proposed a deal in which they would free Bergdahl in exchange for five of their most senior operatives at Guantanamo Bay. The proposition came just days ahead of possible talks between a U.S. delegation and Taliban members in Qatar. And while the idea of a swap has been raised previ-ously, the news electrified Bergdahl’s parents, Bob and Jani, who see it as a far more serious sign that the Taliban is willing to let their son go.

“They are very hopeful and very positive that this is a huge step in the right direc-tion,” said friend Donna Thibedeau-Eddy, who was with the Bergdahls at their home outside of Hailey when they got the news. Only weeks ago the couple received the first, handwritten letter from their son since his capture, channeled through the International Committee of the Red Cross. That, along with this latest revelation, has boosted their optimism, Thibedeau-Eddy said.

Many here had never even met the young soldier who was homeschooled and joined the Army at 22. But that matters little, residents said. Perhaps in a big city, Bergdahl and his family’s ordeal would have remained out of sight, out of mind. Not so in a close-knit place such as Hailey.

“His parents have kept hope, and that’s just rippled out into the community,” said preschool teacher Betsy Castle, who didn’t know Bergdahl. “There’s also something about him being captured that has kept our minds focused on what’s going on in Afghanistan.”

On Saturday, Hailey’s Hop Porter Park will serve as the venue for a rally and fun-run in Bergdahl’s honor that organizers predict will attract as many as 1,000 motorcy-cle-riding POW-MIA activists.

The event, called “Bring Bowe Back,” had been planned before Thursday’s news, a community affair meant to honor an absent, but not forgotten, member.

A MINUTE MESSAGE

From

TIME TO CHANGE

In my youth and as an adult, there was appropriate and inappropriate behavior. Especially was this true if one claimed to be a follower of Jesus. However, in a secular world such as ours, the line that separated the appropriate and the inappropriate has virtually disappeared. Even those who make the claims of being a Christian have found that there no longer seems to be improper behavior.

Let me illustrate this by saying that I have heard language that is totally improper for Christians to use. Yet, when it is pointed out to them that such expressions are not what should be spoken by Christians they respond by saying, “That’s just the way I talk.” To that the apostle Paul would have this to say, “Do not let any unwholesome talk come out of your mouths...Nor should there be obscenity, foolish talk, or course joking, which are out of place.

Christians represent God to the world and language or behavior that would be embarrassing Him needs to cease. If we say, “That is just how I am,” then you need to change.

Come worship with us Sunday.

Four shot at N.C. law firm, Wal-Mart

GREENVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A man armed with a shot-gun shot one person outside a North Carolina law firm Friday, darted across a busy street and wounded three others outside a Wal-Mart before officers subdued him, police said.

Officers confronted the man outside the store and caught up with him behind a nearby Toys “R” Us. He fired at them and they shot multiple rounds back, hitting the gunman, said Greenville Police Chief Hassan Aden. The suspect was expected to survive as well as the four others he’s accused of shoot-ing, Aden said.

The gunman’s first target was seated in his car outside the Kellum Law Firm on the city’s south side, Aden said at a news conference. The firm’s main office in New Bern declined comment. Kellum has nine personal injury offices in the eastern part of the state.

Police are still trying to determine the shooter’s identity and motive. He is in police custody at a local hos-pital, Aden said.

Rejection of farm bill leaves few options

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House’s broad rejection of a massive farm bill could signal a shift in the way Congress views agriculture policy.

Farm issues once had enormous clout on Capitol Hill, but the healthy agricul-ture economy and an increased interest in cutting spending have worked against farm-state lawmak-ers who are now trying to push a farm bill through for a third year in a row.

The five-year, half-tril-lion dollar measure would have expanded some sub-sidies while saving about $4 billion annually overall, including a 3 percent cut in the almost $80 billion-a-year food stamp program. The vote Thursday was 234-195 against the bill, with 62 Republicans voting “no,” arguing it was too expensive.

House Agriculture Committee Chairman Frank Lucas, R-Okla., said after the vote that the committee is assessing its options.

But just before the vote, he signaled that he was not optimistic he would be able to get another bill to the floor.

“I can’t guarantee you’ll see in this Congress another attempt,” he said.

Lucas and other rural lawmakers argue that a farm bill is needed to avert crises stemming from bad weather or price collapses. They could push for an extension of the 2008 farm bill, which expires in September, or negotiate a new bill with the Senate and try again. Some conservatives have suggest-ed separating the farm pro-grams from the food stamps into separate bills.

Lawmakers on the agri-culture committees have for decades added food stamps to farm bills to garner urban votes. But that marriage has made passage harder this year.

The Senate overwhelm-ingly passed its version of the farm bill last week, with about $2.4 billion a year in overall cuts and a $400 mil-lion annual decrease in food stamps — one-fifth of the House bill’s food stamp cuts. The White House was sup-portive of the Senate version but had issued a veto threat of the House bill.

In addition to conserva-tive opposition, the bill also suffered from lack of Democratic support neces-sary for traditional biparti-san passage. Only 24 Democrats voted in favor of the legislation after many said the food stamp cuts could remove as many as 2 million needy recipients from the rolls.

The addition of the optional state work require-ments by Republican amendment just before final passage turned away many remaining Democratic votes.

Probe aims at oil spill lawyer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — For months, BP has complained that a Louisiana attorney who is administering its settlement with tens of thousands of Gulf Coast businesses and residents has made decisions that expose the company to what could be billions of dollars in fictitious claims arising from the 2010 oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico.

Now the court-appointed administrator himself is investigating allegations that could provide the London-based oil giant with fodder for its argument that it hasn't gotten a fair shake from the claims-processing team.

Lafayette-based lawyer Patrick Juneau confirmed Friday that he has opened an internal probe of alleged misconduct by one of his staff attorneys, Lionel H. Sutton III.

Sutton resigned Friday morning, Juneau spokesman Nick Gagliano told The Associated Press.

A report outlining the allegations, a copy of which was obtained by the AP, accuses Sutton of "writing polices" that benefited himself and other plaintiffs' lawyers. It does not elaborate.

Prepared by Juneau's office, the report also says a "confidential source" who contacted Juneau's security chief accused Sutton of trying to influence a claim filed by New Orleans-based Andry Law Firm. The same firm allegedly paid Sutton a portion of settlement proceeds for claims he had referred to it before he went to work for Juneau.

Juneau provided the report to U.S. District Judge Carl Barbier during a meeting in his chambers Thursday. The administrator has pledged to thoroughly investigate the claims involving Sutton, who started working for his office in November 2012, according to the report.

Both BP and claimants "rightfully expect fairness and objectivity from this claims process," Juneau wrote.

"Our goal is to operate in an efficient, transparent and fair manner. All allegations are taken seriously and investigated thoroughly."

Resident Cody Chatfield drives his lifted 4x4 through his neighborhood looking at the flooded homes in the community of Bowness as up to 100,000 people have been evacuated from their homes in Calgary, Alberta, on Friday.

Floods kill two; Calgary downtown is evacuated

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Floodwaters that devastated much of southern Alberta left at least two people dead and forced officials in the western Canadian city of Calgary on Friday to order the evacuation of its entire downtown, as the waters reached the 10th row of the city's hockey arena.

Overflowing rivers washed out roads and bridges, soaked homes and turned streets into dirt-brown waterways around southern Alberta. Police also said a woman who was reported missing after she was swept with her camper into the Highwood River in the Longview area has not been found. The two bodies recovered are the two men who had been seen floating lifeless in the Highwood River near High River on Thursday.

A spokesman for Canada's defense minister said 1,300 soldiers from a base in Edmonton were being deployed to the flood zone.

About 350,000 people work in downtown Calgary on a typical day. However, officials said very few people need to be moved out, since many heeded warnings and did not go to work Friday.

Twenty-five neighborhoods in the city, with an estimated population of 75,000, have already been evacuated due to floodwaters in Calgary, a city of more than a million people that hosted the 1988 Winter Olympics and serves as the center of Canada's oil industry.

Outside the city, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police are asking residents who were forced to leave the High River area to register at evacuation shelter. The Town of High River remains under a mandatory evacuation order.

In downtown Calgary, water was inundating homes and businesses in the shadow of skyscrapers. Water has swamped cars and train tracks.

The city said the home rink of the National Hockey League's Calgary Flames flooded and the water inside was 10 rows deep. That would mean the dressing rooms are likely submerged as well.

"I think that really paints a very clear picture of what kinds of volumes of water we are dealing with," said Trevor Daroux, the city's deputy police chief.

At the grounds for the world-famous Calgary Stampede fair, water reached up to the roofs of the chuck wagon barns. The popular rodeo and festival is the city's signature event. Mayor Naheed Nenshi said it will occur no matter what.

About 1,500 have gone to emergency shelters while the rest have found shelter with family or friends, Nenshi said.

Nenshi said he's never seen the rivers reach so high or flow so fast, but said the flooding situation was as under control as it could be. Nenshi said the Elbow River, one of two rivers that flow through the southern Alberta city, has peaked.

The mayor suggested that levels on the Bow River — which, in Nenshi's words, looked like an ocean — would remain steady for the rest of the day as long as conditions didn't change.

Police urged people to stay away from downtown and not go to work.

The flood was forcing emergency plans at the Calgary Zoo, which is situated on an island near where the Elbow and Bow rivers meet. Lions and tigers were being prepared for transfer, if necessary, to prisoner holding cells at the courthouse.

Schools and court trials were canceled Friday and residents urged to avoid downtown. Transit service in the core was shut down.

Residents were left to wander and wade through streets waist-deep in water.

"In all the years I've been down here, I've never seen the water this high," resident John Doherty said.

It had been a rainy week throughout much of Alberta, but on Thursday the Bow River Basin was battered with up to four inches of rain. Environment Canada's forecast called for more rain in the area, but in much smaller amounts.

Cuba, U.S. talks face obstacles

HAVANA (AP) — They've hardly become allies, but Cuba and the U.S. have taken some baby steps toward rapprochement in recent weeks that have people on this island and in Washington wondering if a breakthrough in relations could be just over the horizon.

Skeptics caution that the Cold War enemies have been here many times before, only to fall back into old recriminations. But there are signs that views might be shifting on both sides of the Florida Straits.

In the past week, the two countries have held talks on resuming direct mail service, and announced a July 17 sit-down on migration issues. In May, a U.S. federal judge allowed a convicted Cuban intelligence agent to return to the island. This month, Cuba informed the family of jailed U.S. government sub-contractor Alan Gross that it would let an American doctor examine him, though the visit has apparently not yet happened. Castro has also ushered in a series of economic and social changes, including making it easier for Cubans to travel off the island.

Under the radar, diplomats on both sides describe a sea change in the tone of their dealings.

Only last year, Cuban state television was broadcasting grainy footage of American diplomats meeting with dissidents on Havana streets and publically accusing them of being CIA front-men. Today, U.S. diplomats in Havana and Cuban Foreign Ministry officials have easy contact, even sharing home phone numbers.

Josefina Vidal, Cuba's top diplomat for North American affairs, recently traveled to Washington and met twice with State Department officials — a visit that came right before the announcements of resumptions in the two sets of bilateral talks that had been suspended for more than two years. Washington has also granted visas to prominent Cuban officials, including the daughter of Cuba's president.

"These recent steps indicate a desire on both sides to try to move forward, but also a recognition on both sides of just how difficult it is to make real progress," said Robert Pastor, a professor of international relations at American University and former national security adviser on Latin America during the Carter administration. "These are tiny, incremental gains, and the prospects of going backward are equally high."

Among the things that have changed, John Kerry has taken over as U.S. secretary of state after being an outspoken critic of Washington's policy on Cuba while in the Senate.

Cuban President Raul Castro, meanwhile, is striving to overhaul the island's Marxist economy with a dose of limited free-market capitalism and may feel a need for more open relations with the U.S. While direct American investment is still barred on the island, a rise in visits and money transfers by Cuban-Americans since Obama relaxed restrictions has been a boon for Cuba's cash-starved economy.

To be sure, there is still far more that separates the long-time antagonists than unites them.

The State Department has kept Cuba on a list of state sponsors of terrorism and another that calls into question Havana's commitment to fighting human trafficking. The Obama administration continues to demand democratic change on an island ruled for more than a half century by Castro and his brother Fidel.

For its part, Cuba continues to denounce Washington's 51-year-old economic embargo.

Terror arrests in Spain

MADRID (AP) — Spanish police say they have arrested eight people suspected of recruiting jihadist militants for al-Qaida-linked groups in Syria.

The Interior Ministry said the arrests were made early Friday in the Spanish enclave of Ceuta, which is located on the northwest African coast, surrounded by Morocco on one side and the Mediterranean Sea on the other.

A ministry statement said the group was suspected of sending dozens of potential fighters from Spain to Syria, some of whom had carried out suicide attacks.

NKorea wants U.N. changes

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — North Korea's U.N. envoy demanded the dissolution of the United Nations Command in South Korea on Friday, accusing the United States of using the force to prepare for war against the North and build an Asian version of NATO to realize President Barack Obama's pivot to Asia.

Ambassador Sin Son Ho told reporters at a rare news conference that the most pressing issue in northeast Asia today is the hostile relations between North Korea and the United States "which can lead to a new war at any moment."

He reiterated North Korea's surprise offer last Saturday of wide-ranging senior-level talks with the United States "to defuse tension on the Korean peninsula and ensure peace and security in the region."

The proposed talks followed months of rising tensions and anti-American rhetoric by North Korea and the collapse earlier this month of proposed high-level talks between North and South Korea, amid bickering over who would lead the two delegations.

Sin stressed that the deteriorating situation on the Korean peninsula "is not caused by the DPRK," the initials of the country's official name, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

Sin said U.S.-North Korea talks should include replacing the armistice agreement that ended the 1950-53 Korean War — and he stressed that one of the "prerequisite requirements" for establishing "a peace mechanism" to replace the armistice is the dissolution of the U.S.-led U.N. Command.

Tropical storm weakens in Mexico

VERACRUZ, Mexico (AP) — Tropical Storm Barry weakened to a depression after hitting Mexico's Gulf Coast on Thursday and forcing the evacuation of four towns near a rain-swollen river.

The second tropical storm of the Atlantic hurricane season had maximum sustained winds near 35 mph in the evening and tropical storm force gusts were possible along the coast of eastern Veracruz state.

The government of Mexico discontinued the storm warnings for Veracruz but state authorities moved about 1,000 people from towns along the Rio Bobos in the northern part of the state, which was being hit by more than seven inches of rain, sending the river's level rising by more than two feet.

Classes were canceled around the state but flights were operating normally out of the main airport in the city of Veracruz and schools were expected to reopen Friday.

Veracruz state Civil Protection Secretary Noemi Guzman said 2,000 shelters had been readied in the state with mattresses, blankets, water and canned food. She said the shelters at schools and recreation centers could house up to 306,000 people.

The port of Veracruz was closed to small vessels because of the strong winds, Guzman added.

everyone thinks their dad's the best," Michael said. "They sacrificed everything for us."

Renae had built customized coffins in the past for his parents. In 2008, he built a coffin for Michael's wife without being asked after finding out she had terminal ovarian cancer. Recently, he could feel the arthritis coming on and knew the opportunity to build his own resting place was dwindling, so he got to work.

"I always thought bad things don't happen to good people, but evidently they do," Renae's sister Pat Peterson said.

Renae and Lola met in college at San Jose State in the early '60s. Just four weeks after their first meeting, Renae popped the question and the two were married in 1962. They chose to raise their children in Canada and Renae started a career in teaching while Lola became a nurse. Renae, always the master carpenter, built their house — including the wiring, plumbing and foundation.

Once their children were in college, the Cottams decided to move back to the U.S.

As a teacher, Renae won chemistry teacher of the year in Oregon and stayed in touch with former students on Facebook. He was even invited to about a dozen weddings of former students.

Eventually, the Cottams wanted to move to a place where they could be around nature and where Renae could build his own wood-working shop while Lola tended a garden. They found 20 acres in Bridge and fell for the secluded hideaway.

"They just loved being in the middle of nature," Michael said.

When the Cottams wanted to add a couple of acres to their land a couple years ago, Renae exchanged his expertise in woodworking on a neighbor's remodeling job for the extra land.

That neighbor was Edward L. Nelson.

Nelson is the prime suspect in the triple homicide that seemingly cost the Cottams their lives. Michael said he could not disclose the Nelson's purported motive for the killings.

"My father liked him," Michael said. "You will be affected and horrified when you hear Ed's reasoning."

The brutal killing of Nelson's wife, Kathleen Nelson, and two other people June 15 has rocked the quiet rural community around Bridge in southern Coos County. Though investigators believe the Cottams died in their home during the attack, the home was burned too badly to identify two bodies found there. Investigators await DNA testing to confirm their identities.

Still, Michael is in mourning over his parents and better times past.

Michael's 6-year-old son, Ben, clinged to his grandma after his mother passed away in 2008. Renae had built a Lamborghini-shaped bed, a treehouse and other toys for Ben, but, as Michael said, "We were all chopped liver when grandma was around."

Ben's first word was "book," and they often took their grandson to check out books from the Myrtle Point Library. Renae and Lola had always said that if they ever won the lottery, they'd make sure Myrtle Point got a new library.

With his parents not able to contribute to the cause anymore, Michael is asking that in lieu of donations and flowers, he'd like all proceeds to go to the Myrtle Point Library Foundation. If Michael can make that happen, he said he'll ensure it's done with the same humility his parents carried their entire lives.

"They were very thoughtful and selfless," Michael said. "I don't want to rename the library ... my parents wouldn't want that."

REED

Austin was able to help Jessie make it safely to the shore.

Steve Reed made several unsuccessful attempts to reach Kristian, who had disappeared beneath the surface. He stayed in the water until the police arrived. Other onlookers, John Hamilton and Mark Guzzard, also offered assistance. They were in the water for an hour and a half, said Mark

Anderson of the Coos Bay Fire Department.

Unfortunately, divers discovered Kristian's body at 6:55 p.m.

"My Dad got told to go back to shore," Austin said.

The teen said he didn't think twice about trying to save Jessie, but had trouble talking about it.

His mother, Maryanne Baker, said he suffered later. It was hard for him to talk about it.

"The first night was kind of rough," she said. "He didn't get much sleep." Although he was able to help one boy, Austin felt guilty for not being able to save Kristian, Baker said.

She said Kristian's mother still was grateful for his actions.

"Leann wanted to give him a hug," Baker said.

Rich Baker, Austin's grandfather, said he planned on nominating his grandson for the Gold Lifesaving Medal.

The award is available for Americans who help rescue drowning victims from U.S. waters, said Lt. Ryan Fish, of the U.S. Coast Guard, North Bend Air Station. "It's going to take a long time to get," Fish said. Very few people receive the prestigious award, he said.

Award or not, Rich Baker is proud of his grandson's bravery.

"He disregarded his own safety," he said. Baker spent 22 years in the U.S. Navy and is a Vietnam veteran.

The boy's actions reminded him of old military friends.

"Those were the kinds of men who stood out," Rich Baker said. "Because they did things spur of the moment."

MARINA

said Jordan Cove Energy Project had violated the National Energy Policy Act and antiracketeering laws by proceeding with regulatory applications before the project's Environmental Impact Statement was finalized.

Anti-LNG activist Jody McCaffree urged the commissioners to reject the resolution, offering evidence that it was based on false claims.

"For instance, they state that they are going to export gas to Hawaii and Alaska. Hawaii is going to import gas, but not from tankers," she said. "They are going to use ISO (intermodal) containers from Long Beach (Calif.) and Los Angeles. Alaska is working to export North Slope gas; they're not going to be importing gas."

Marina fees

Though the comments on LNG were passionate on both sides, when the commissioners took up a resolution to adopt higher fees for customers of its Charleston marina, RV park and shipyard, they didn't seem to have a single ally in the audience.

Speaking of the raised fees, Knute Nemeth, who described himself as a "former fisherman" and the president of the Charleston Community Enhancement Project, said "I've talked to a lot of people who are going to pull the plug" on using marina services.

Nemeth also suggested that the commissioners reconsider a plan to fence off land for boat storage near the kayak launch south of the Charleston Bridge. He said it would be better to make it a grassy plot with picnic tables so the public could enjoy more access to the South Slough. Boat storage would be better provided by private businesses rather than by the port, he said.

Several commenters lambasted the commissioners for raising fees to make up for deferred maintenance. Lee Wright said the port had neglected the marina, the source of most of its income, in favor of projects such as the Coos Bay Rail Link.

"You're going to have to start paying attention, because you haven't been paying attention," Wright said.

In response to the complaints, commissioner Jerry Hampel said, "I'd like staff to take a look at individual concerns in these areas."

"I don't want the door slammed in their face," Hampel said.

Port CEO David Koch said staff planned to hear more from the public after the comments of about 100 people at two recent budget meetings.

Although the budget submitted to the board Thursday night still contained fee increases, Koch said staff plan to implement discounts for customers using multiple port services — for example, someone who uses boat Energy consideration. The plant and pipeline also must get approval from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, Oregon environmental agencies and Coos County's planning department.

Two permits have already been granted to facilities in Texas and Louisiana. For Jordan Cove, being early on the list is good, since DOE has said it will assess the cumulative impacts of its approval decisions. In other words, once a few facilities are approved, the later ones might not offer as much public benefit.

A plant proposed by Oregon LNG on the Columbia River in Warrenton is right behind Jordan Cove on the list, but it's not as far along in the regulatory approval process.

While DOE ponders the national effects of LNG exports, supporters and opponents of Jordan Cove and PGCP are waging a battle over the local effects.

Controversy since 2004

In 2004, project manager Bob Braddock first approached the Oregon International Port of Coos Bay about the possibility of siting what was then envisioned as an LNG import facility on the bay.

The port backed the project, facilitating Jordan Cove's acquisition of an old Weyerhaeuser mill site, working on plans for a shipping terminal and seeking dredging funds for the Coos Bay channel to a depth sufficient for LNG tankers, which are some of the world's largest vessels.

Some hailed the project as an economic boon. Others objected to the hazards of handling this potent fuel so close to a city.

Since then, domestic gas production has boomed, and the project has turned from an import facility into an export facility designed to give the current oversupply of Canadian and U.S. natural gas a route to Asia.

If anything, the change has stiffened opposition to the project and gives opponents new opportunities to argue against it.

Pro and con

Locally, supporters and opponents of the Jordan Cove project have coalesced behind two groups.

Boost Southwest Oregon mines a rich vein of frustration among those who have endured decades of disappointment in the Bay Area's economy. Its website, boostsouthwestoregon.org, lists what it calls the long-term and short-term benefits of the Jordan Cove project, mostly having to do with jobs and businesses created directly and indirectly, plus other benefits such as a fire station, a fire training facility and an increased natural gas supply for local industries. Letters of support from 34 businesses, unions and political parties appear on the site.

In contrast, Citizens Against LNG, led by Jody McCaffree, has unearthed countless documents from numerous sources, intended to debunk BSO's claims about the proposed facility's economic promise and physical safety. The group's website is at citizensagainstlng.com.

Unlike LNG projects on the Gulf Coast, Jordan Cove and the Warrenton project don't have the support of their own state's congressional delegation. Sens. Ron Wyden and Jeff Merkley have questioned the wisdom of LNG exports, and Rep. Peter DeFazio introduced an unsuccessful bill to prevent pipeline projects serving export terminals from using eminent domain to gain easements.

Nationally, the glut of natural gas accessed with controversial "fracking" technology has stimulated debate about exports. Producers of aluminum, iron and steel, who use a lot of gas, have opposed LNG exports, saying the U.S. should keep gas cheap to benefit manufacturers. The American Public Gas Association also opposes exports, saying the glut of gas created by controversial "fracking" mining methods could stimulate new uses for gas, such as vehicles.

But other business organizations have encouraged DOE to approve exports, saying they would improve the balance of trade and enrich property owners through royalties.

The business case

Any approvals Jordan Cove gets will be meaningless without customers — gas companies that want to deliver gas to Asia, and Asian customers that want to buy it. So far, it has neither.

"We don't have a solid contract with a producer," said Hinrichs. "And I don't believe they do either," he added, referring to the Warrenton project.

Hinrichs says Jordan Cove is confident customers will emerge.

"Downstream, can we identify a solid partner in Asia? The partners in Asia have a high demand, are financially stable and would be willing to sign a 20-25 year contract, which is typical of LNG contracts."

Of Jordan Cove and Oregon LNG, Hinrichs said the companies aren't racing to a finish line, but rather are trying to complete projects in an orderly fashion.

"When it comes down to it, the question is, 'Who is going to be getting their FERC permits and land use permits not only for the terminal but also for the pipeline and the power generation that goes with it?'"

The yellow line shows the route Blue Ridge LNG proposes for the Pacific Connector Gas Pipeline, which would cross Bureau of Land Management property instead of private property. But so far, Pacific Connector Gas Pipeline backers have stuck to the green route, which crosses private property and several coho streams.

Contributed image

Why not take the high road?

Many property owners along the Pacific Connector Gas Pipeline's proposed 223-mile route have been vocal in their opposition to the project. They say the pipeline will lower property values, contaminate water supplies and threaten wildlife. They also fear the fire hazard it poses and the threat of a cleared swath that would give trespassers and thieves access to their property.

A subgroup of landowners along part of the pipeline's proposed route, from milepost 11 at the Coos River crossing to milepost 23 near Fairview, has a solution that would seem to solve a lot of problems for the pipeline. In that section, they'd like to see the pipeline run a few miles east, along Blue Ridge.

Though the Blue Ridge route is higher, it's shorter by a mile and a half. More important, says the group, it shifts the impact from private land to public land.

This spring, the group launched a website to raise its profile. The group and individual landowners have filed as intervenors in the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission approval process for the pipeline, which will enable them to appeal a regulatory decision. They've also issued a news release and written to legislators.

Bulldogs eliminate Beavers

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Oregon State's season ended with the Beavers waiting for the big hit that never came.

The Beavers were eliminated from the College World Series in a 4-1 loss to Mississippi State on Friday. The Bulldogs advanced to the CWS finals with the victory.

Oregon State advanced runners to second base in six innings but could get only one home. The Beavers were 1 for 8 with runners in scoring position and hit into three double plays.

"This certainly isn't the way we planned it, and it wasn't for a lack of effort," coach Pat Casey said. "We couldn't get a hit when we needed one. I think that's happened before to all teams. Obviously we were facing very good pitching. Mississippi State got here with their pitching, and the starter was good."

The Beavers were down 1-0 in the fifth when Hunter Renfroe delivered the key blow for the Bulldogs, a three-run homer off the back wall of the left-field bullpen.

The Bulldogs (51-18) beat the Beavers for the second time in the CWS. Oregon State (52-13) went 2-2 in its first CWS appearance since winning back-to-back national titles in 2006-07.

"Omaha's a crazy place," left fielder Michael Conforto said. "We had a lot of fun while we're here. It's just frustrating the way we ended it. There's a lot of positives we can take from this. We're going to grow as a team next year. We've got a lot of guys coming back."

Renfroe's homer off freshman left-hander Andrew Moore (14-2) was only the third in 11 CWS games.

Mississippi State's Kendall Graveman (7-5) worked the first 5 2-3 innings, allowing one run on four hits. Ross Mitchell and Jonathan Holder finished, with Holder getting the last two outs for his 21st save of the season and school-record 30th of his career.

After getting through local and sectional competitions in the Pitch, Run and Hit contest, Adrianna Frank will be in Seattle this weekend to compete in the Northwest finals.

Skills carry North Bend girl to Seattle

BY JOHN GUNTHER
 The World

NORTH BEND — Adrianna Frank's favorite baseball team is the Seattle Mariners.

She gets to see the Mariners up close Sunday when they play Oakland, then show off her own baseball skills in the Northwest finals for the Major League Baseball Pitch, Hit & Run competition.

"I'm excited," said Adrianna, a 9-year-old North Bend student who just finished third grade.

She's been a summer baseball standout the past few years, but this is the first time she entered the Pitch, Hit & Run competition.

Adrianna won the local event at Clyde Allen Field and then the regional competition in Eugene. Because her overall score was among the best three for the Northwest Region, which includes four states and two Canadian provinces, she advanced to the event in Seattle.

The winners Sunday will compete in the national finals during the All-Star Game festivities next month in New York if their scores are among the three best in the nation.

"I would be really excited," she said.

Adrianna is competing in the 9-10 age group against girls from Pendleton and Yelm, Wash. She said her biggest strength for the competition is pitching.

During the Little League season, she played second base. She is a member of the Minors All-Star team for the North Bend Independent Baseball Program and has been playing second base and left field on the All-Star team, but she prefers the infield spot.

"I get more plays," she said of second base.

She's missing an All-Star tournament in Florence this weekend to compete in Seattle. But she and her brother, Jayden, who is on the Majors All-Star team, competed in a tournament in Medford last weekend and have upcoming tournaments in Newport and Lincoln City.

All those events were scheduled before Adrianna won the competition in Eugene on June 9, and because of that her parents aren't with her this weekend. Instead, she's staying with her aunt and uncle in Kelso, Wash.

"She'll have fun," said Andrea Frank, Adrianna's mother. "She's with her cousins."

"And she's a Mariner fan, so she'll have fun at the game."

This is the second time Adrianna has been to Safeco Field to watch the Mariners, though she has to worry about her own competition after the game this time.

"I will be able to enjoy the game, but I'll still be nervous," she said.

This week's trip continues a good year for the student. She also won the local competition in the Elks Hoop Shoot and finished second in the state tournament earlier this year.

A group of modifieds compete in a heat race during the Wild Wild West Modifieds Shootout at Coos Bay Speedway on Thursday.

Modifieds put on show at speedway

BY JOHN GUNTHER

COOS BAY — A rough track didn't spoil the fun for Jesse Williamson and 18 other drivers in the Wild Wild West Modified Speedweek visit to Coos Bay Speedway on Thursday night.

Williamson won his third main event in four stops during the tour this week, thrilling a good crowd at the dirt oval by moving up from seventh place in the 35-lap main event.

"I was bouncing around a lot," said Williamson, who drew the No. 7 spot after winning both his heat races. "It was difficult to move up. I kind of had to bide my time and picked a few cars off."

Williamson, who lives in Coburg near Eugene, also won at Grays Harbor, Wash., and Sunset Speedway in Banks. He finished fifth at Willamette Speedway in Lebanon and the Wednesday visit to Cottage Grove Speedway was rained out.

Because the driver in second place entering Thursday, Jeremy Shank, opted to skip out on the Coos Bay races, Williamson built a commanding lead in the Speedweek standings with just Friday night's stop at Siskiyou Motor Speedway in Yreka, Calif., and today's finale at the Southern Oregon Speedway at White City.

Williamson was the champion in 2011, the first year of the shootout. He competed at Coos Bay Speedway during Speedweek that year and one other time — the group did not make a visit to the South Coast last summer.

"It's fun," he said of the track. "It was a little rough tonight, but they have a new surface."

Speedway officials added new clay to the track this week, but with the rain, weren't able to get it mixed in with the old dirt and packed down before the races Thursday night, leading to big grooves and loose clay — a bumpy ride for the modifieds and the local drivers in the Les Schwab Championship Series who also raced Thursday.

North Coos sweeps two doubleheaders

BY GEOGRE ARTSITAS
 The World

NORTH BEND — After blowing a healthy early-inning lead, the North Coos Legion baseball team eeked out a 12-11 win over Brookings-Harbor to sweep the four games it played Thursday and Friday.

North Coos swept South Eugene on Thursday in two nail-biters, 4-3 and 5-4. The Waterfront also dominated Brookings-Harbor in Game 1 Friday, winning 13-3 in six innings.

In their final game on Friday afternoon, North Coos tallied up six runs in the third behind base hits from Marshall Rice, Zach Hackney, Zach Inskeep and Anthony Cook to build a 7-3 lead.

But Brookings-Harbor was resilient the rest of the game, fighting back to cut the lead to 12-8 going into the seventh.

After a quick three runs to start off the last frame, Brookings-Harbor had the go-ahead run standing at second with only one out.

Hackney, the right-fielder who will be a senior at North Bend High School next year, put out a brilliant individual effort going 4-for-5 with three runs and an RBI on the day. Even still, with the game on the line, butterflies began to fly inside his stomach. "(It was) never wrenching," Hackney said. "If we don't execute we have to go extra innings and see what happens. I was a little bit nervous about the go-ahead run sitting at second base."

Hackney's nerves got the chance to subside shortly after they started when relief pitcher Inskeep shut the door on any potential comeback. After a brilliant pick-off play from back-up catcher Hunter Jackson to third base got the second out of the inning, a lazy fly ball to left fielder Drew James closed out the game.

North Coos was forced to switch around pitching all day despite a solid start from Garrett McCoy. McCoy gave up six runs with four strikeouts on the day but looked very poised most of the day and fooled most of the Brookings-Harbor lineup with his funky semi-side-armed release.

North Coos was forced to use seven pitchers in the past two days. For head coach Brad Horning, the carousel of players he can stick on the mound can be hectic and exciting at the same time.

"We had a plethora of guys the last two days that were able to throw some strikes and keep us in ballgames," Horning said. "Everybody wants to pitch. That's the part that makes it a little bit more fun to watch."

Inskeep finished 2-for-3 and scored twice. Robert Martino also had two runs. Tyler Campbell hit a double.

Records fall in half marathon

THE WORLD

Perfect running conditions led to 19 age group records in the 19th edition of Jennifer's Catching Slough Classic last weekend.

An overcast sky with very little wind made for a fast day for the 96 total participants in four different races.

The championships in the fifth-annual South Coast Half Marathon were claimed by Connor Devereux of Coos Bay, who finished in 1 hour, 24 minutes and 59 seconds, and Sera Mathewes of Gold Hill, who smashed the female course record by 12 minutes, winning in 1:25:26. Mathewes was second overall among the 41 finishers and led until the 10th mile, when the recently graduated Devereux caught her.

Anthony Collins of North Bend (1:31:16), the men's masters champion, and Matt Burch of Coos Bay (1:33:51) were second and third among the men.

For the women, Laurie Higgins (1:41:24) and Chelsey Seedborg (1:44:15), both of Coos Bay, were second and third. Laurie Sevier of North Bend (1:45:59) was the masters champion.

Dick Bemrose was the fastest walker for the fifth straight year.

Recent Marshfield graduate Connor Devereux crosses the finish line in first place in the half marathon.

In the 12-kilometer run/walk, Levi Graber (45:42) and Kat Henning (53:41), both of North Bend, were the overall winners.

Graber was followed by Brent Hutton of Bandon (46:17) and Sawyer Heckard of Coos Bay (47:23). Larissa Schreiber of North Bend (63:48) and Aleigh Harris of Bandon (70:39) finished second and third among the women.

Sailor Hutton of Bandon was first overall in the 5-kilometer race, finishing in 20:23 to set an age group record for 0-14 girls. Ovid McCuiston of North Bend was the top male (23:45).

Hutton was followed by Rachel Gurecki of North Bend (26:00) and Linda Devereux of Coos Bay (26:30). Carter Brown of Langlois (25:32) and Alex Turman of Coos Bay (26:54) took second and third among the men.

Sisters Lizzy and Emma Deveskracht of North Bend battled it out in the 1-mile kids run, with Lizzy prevailing by three seconds in 10:10.

The event serves as a fundraiser for the Jennifer Turman Memorial Scholarship Fund, which is used by the South Coast Running Club to award one or more scholarships to graduates from Coos County high schools who are both outstanding students and members of their cross country or long distance track programs.

Former University of Oregon sprinter English Gardner, left, defeats Octavious Freeman to the finish line in the women's 100-meter dash final at the U.S. Championships athletics meet on Friday in Des Moines, Iowa.

Gay, Gardner win 100 titles

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — So sore for so long, Tyson Gay is sometimes leery of digging deep and testing out that surgically repaired hip.

In a race between a fellow thirty-something, he really had no choice.

Down early against Justin Gatlin after a slow start, Gay had ground to make up. So, he cranked it up a level.

The hip responded just fine. And with it any doubts about Gay's health instantly vanished as he roared back to beat Gatlin to capture the 100 meters on Friday night at the U.S. championships.

Gay finished in a time of 9.75 seconds, the fastest in the world this season. Gatlin, wearing a support bandage on his tweaked right hamstring, wound up in second. Charles Silmon took third as he held off Michael Rodgers by two-thousandths of a second for the last spot on the team headed to Moscow for the world championships in August.

In the women's 100, Oregon star and NCAA champion English Gardner, who just recently turned pro, captured the title, breezing past the field even on a balky ankle. Octavious Freeman was second and Alexandria Anderson took third to earn spots to worlds.

Other winners on Friday were A.G. Kruger (hammer throw), Brad Walker (pole vault), Lance Brooks (discus) and Sharon Day (heptathlon). It was a quite a two-day stretch for Day as she as she finished with a personal-best score of 6,550 points.

For Ashton Eaton, the first day of the decathlon was only about playing it safe and not chasing after his own world record. Eaton is in second place behind Gunnar Nixon after five events.

On Thursday, things certainly fell into place for Galen Rupp, who closed out the first night of competition by winning his fifth straight 10,000-meter national title.

"Just keep it rolling as long as I can. It's fun winning national championships," said

Accident takes Bassett out of steeplechase

Jared Bassett's first trip to the U.S. Track & Field Championships ended with a fluke accident.

Bassett was in the third lap of his preliminary heat in the 3,000-meter steeplechase when the runner in front of him tripped.

"I had no chance to react," Bassett said by a text message. "I landed on my hip really hard and knocked the wind out of me. It was just one of those freak things."

It was a rough break for the Marshfield graduate who recently finished his college career at the University of Portland. The two preliminary heats were relatively slow and the time needed to reach Sunday's final was well over Bassett's best.

"It was my first time falling and it had to happen at the U.S. championships," he said. "This stuff happens. I've just gotta keep trucking."

Bassett's long-range goal is to qualify for the U.S. Olympic Trials in 2016.

He doesn't expect to suffer a setback from Friday. At first glance, his hip didn't appear to be injured.

"It's just bruised bad," he said.

Rupp, who won silver at the London Games.

Shalane Flanagan had no trouble in the women's 10,000, winning by more than 30 seconds. Oregon senior Jordan Hasay finished second.

Vaughn falls in semifinals

THE WORLD

Reedsport graduate Monica Vaughn came up one match short of reaching the finals at the Oregon Women's Amateur Championship at Eugene Country Club.

Vaughn lost in the semifinals to University of Arizona golfer Kendall Prince.

Vaughn was down three holes at the turn, but twice rallied to pull within one hole before Prince finished the match off 2 and 1 by winning the 17th hole.

Prince will face Beaverton teenager Gigi Stoll for the championship. Stoll beat medalist Caroline Inglis in the quarterfinals Friday morning and then topped USC's Kimberly Santiago 5 and 4 in the semifinals.

Vaughn won her quarterfinal 2 and 1 over Karinn Dickinson of Mukileto, Wash.

Vaughn shot even par for the 17 holes of the morning match, but was 5-over with just one birdie in the afternoon semifinal. Prince was 1-over, including her birdie on the 17th hole to close the match.

MODIFIEDS

Mark Wauge of Jacksonville almost passed Williamson a few times in the final laps after restarts for cautions, but ended up finishing second — the same result he had at Coos Bay two years ago.

"Jesse's a competitor," Wauge said. "I think when he saw my nose, he got faster. I didn't get slower."

Wauge likes coming to Coos Bay, and said he didn't mind the rough surface, since all the drivers had to face the same conditions.

"It was fun," he said after finishing 1.179 seconds behind the winner.

Kyle Cassen crossed the line third, just under 2 seconds behind Williamson.

In all, 10 of the 19 cars finished on the lead lap. One of those was 17-year-old Collen Winebarger of Corbett, who was making just his third start in the modified car he was driving for owner Dave Walters, but finished ninth.

Following the heat races, Winebarger and his dad, Scott, made a number of adjustments to the car so it would better handle the surface.

"It's pretty much a fight around the track," Winebarger said.

Winebarger is relatively new to modifieds, and does most of his racing in late model cars, which have similar horsepower, but wider tires. Unlike the modifieds, the wheels are not in the open on late model cars.

Winebarger is the current points leader in the Northwest Extreme Late Models series, with four wins in a row.

"He's really, really incredibly hard-working for his age," Scott Winebarger said. "He has one goal — to win."

Winebarger started racing when he was 11 and has an ambitious 44-race schedule this year. He said the Wild West Modified Shootout is great experience.

"The competition in Oregon for late models is very high," he said. "But this group of drivers in modifieds could go anywhere in the country."

"We're running with the best of the best all the time," he said.

Winebarger also has raced late model cars at Coos Bay Speedway and said he's familiar with the South Coast.

"If we weren't at the track, we'd be out playing on the sand," he said, referring to the sand dunes.

When they weren't prepping their cars for their own races, the local drivers were enjoying watching the modifieds Thursday.

"They're fast," said Tom Williams of Bandon, who won the Hornet division Thursday night.

Williams is in his second year competing at the speedway.

"I just like coming out here and having a good time and meeting people," he said.

Williams also enjoys the adrenaline rush he gets from racing.

"It makes it real fun when you get side-by-side racing," he said.

Timmy Young, a 2012 Bandon graduate, raced for the first time in a Chevy Luv pickup he and his father turned into a racecar for the Hornet division.

It was their third time at the track, but they couldn't get it running for the races the first two trips.

"I was pretty nervous," Young said, after his night ended early with a crash during the main event.

The other winners in the Les Schwab Championship Series on Thursday were Ryan Baker in the Sportsman class, Scott McDonald in the Street Stock division and Carl Johnson for Mini Outlaws.

CWS

The Bulldogs built on a 1-0 lead after Moore retired their first two batters in the fifth. Adam Frazier and Alex Detz singled before Renfro drove Moore's 3-1 breaking ball for his 16th home run of the season.

Moore gave up four runs on nine hits in 4 2-3 innings, his shortest outing of the season. Jace Fry pitched shutout relief, but the Beavers' offense couldn't crack Mitchell and Holder.

Conforto turned in perhaps the best defensive play of the CWS when he robbed Wes Rea of extra bases in the second inning. Conforto retreated to the warning track on Rea's fly, jumped to make the catch and held on as he slammed against the wall.

UCLA 4, North Carolina 1: Pat Valaika's two-run double gave UCLA some cushion, record-setting closer David Berg survived a rocky ninth inning and UCLA moved to the championship round.

Blue Jays stretch win streak to 9

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — Rajai Davis singled home the winning run with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning and the Toronto Blue Jays rallied for their ninth straight win, 7-6 over the Baltimore Orioles on Friday night.

Munenori Kawasaki hit his first career home run, a tying two-run shot in the seventh. Adam Lind and Edwin Encarnacion also connected for the Blue Jays.

Yankees 6, Rays 2: Zoilo Almonte provided much-needed pop in his first major league start, homering and adding two singles that led the Yankees over the Rays.

Indians 5, Twins 1: Scott Kazmir (4-4) allowed one run in seven strong innings and Jason Kipnis drove in three, leading the Indians over Minnesota.

Red Sox 10, Tigers 6: Shane Victorino homered and hit three singles, driving in five runs to lead the Red Sox to a win over the Tigers.

White Sox 9, Royals 1: Hector Santiago (3-5) shut down the Royals' punchless offense for a career-best eight innings

Toronto's Rajai Davis turns to celebrate after hitting a game-winning single Friday.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Nationals 2, Rockies 1: Stephen Strasburg (4-6) struck out nine over seven innings, Ian Desmond homered in the seventh and the Washington Nationals beat the slumping Colorado Rockies 2-1 on Friday night.

Mets 4, Phillies 3: Juan Lagares hit a go-ahead double, Jeremy Hefner (2-6) pitched six effective innings and New York came back from a three-run deficit to beat Philadelphia.

Brewers 2, Braves 0: Jean Segura homered and Wily Peralta (5-8) allowed two hits in seven innings to lead Milwaukee past Atlanta for its second shutout of the season.

INTERLEAGUE

Cubs 3, Astros 1: Matt Garza (2-1) pitched into the ninth inning and Anthony Rizzo hit his first home run since May 18 to lead Chicago over Houston after a rain delay that lasted 3 hours, 18 minutes.

Former Oregon State star Darwin Barney and Scott Hairston also homered for the Cubs. Barney was a triple short of the cycle.

Rangers 6, Cardinals 4: Nelson Cruz snapped a ninth-inning tie with a two-run single through a drawn-in infield and Texas beat St. Louis in the opener of a series between the 2011 World Series opponents.

James leads Heat to second title

MIAMI (AP) — LeBron James will always remember his first championship. History will remember this one.

The way the Heat won — or the way James wouldn't let them lose — makes them one of the greats.

A Game 6 comeback when it appeared to be over, then a stirring Game 7 victory over a proud opponent cemented a place with the NBA's giants for this Miami team and its leader.

"Last year when I was sitting up here with my first championship, I said it was the toughest thing I had ever done," James said. "This year, I'll tell last year he's absolutely wrong. This was the toughest championship right here between the two."

And the San Antonio Spurs will always know it's a title they let slip away.

James scored 37 points and grabbed 12 rebounds in a 95-88 victory Thursday night in a tense game that was tight until Miami pulled away in the final minute.

Capping their best season in franchise history — and perhaps the three-superstar system they used to build it — the Heat ran off with the second straight thriller in the NBA's first championship series to go the distance since 2010.

Two nights after his Game 6 save when the Heat were almost eliminated, James continued his unparalleled run through the basketball world, with two titles and an Olympic gold medal in the last 12 months.

"I work on my game a lot throughout the offseason," said James, who was MVP for the second straight finals. "I put a lot of work into it and to be able to come out here and (have) the results happen out on the floor is the ultimate. The ultimate. I'm at a loss for words."

He made five 3-pointers, defended Tony Parker when he had to, and did everything else that could ever be expected from the best player in the game.

The Heat became the NBA's first repeat champions since the Lakers in 2009-10, and the first team to beat the Spurs in the NBA Finals.

"It took everything we had as a team," Dwyane Wade said. "Credit to the San Antonio Spurs, they're an unbelievable team, an unbelievable franchise. This is the hardest series we ever had to play. But we're a resilient team and we did whatever it took."

Players and coaches hugged afterward — their respect for each other was obvious from the opening tipoff of Game 1 through the final buzzer.

A whisker away from a fifth title two nights earlier, the Spurs couldn't find a way to win it all in what was perhaps the last shot for Tim Duncan, Parker and Manu Ginobili to grab another ring together.

Inskeep, Martino and Rice all hit doubles in the first game Friday.

North Coos gave the crux of its run support from a six-run fourth inning that saw the meat of their order — Inskeep, Andrew Sharp and Drew James — get back-to-back-to-back singles that broke the game wide open. Starting pitcher Hunter Jackson threw beautifully, giving up only two earned runs with seven strikeouts in six innings on the way to the win.

On Thursday, North Coos was able to just survive the two games against South

Eugene thanks to great pitching from the committee of Campbell, Martino, Jonathan Bennison and Inskeep.

Bennison also went 3-for-6 from the plate with two stolen bases and an RBI on the day. Inskeep, not to be outdone by his pitcher, went 4-for-7 with two stolen bases also and notched two RBIs.

North Coos gave up just three hits in the first game and five in the second. But the Waterfront needed two runs in the bottom of the seventh to win the opener and a single run in the bottom of the seventh to win the nightcap.

North Coos improved to 6-6 on the season with the four wins.

IMAGE MAKERS' LONGTIME OWNER RETIRES

So long, salon

On Wednesday, Cheryl Reed will put away her scissors for the last time at Image Makers, the North Bend salon where she started work in 1963. Reed bought the shop in 1967 and owned it till 2006, when she sold it to Jennifer Jenkins and continued working there part-time.

Although Reed's career has spanned three generations of hair styles, she hasn't found herself falling behind the times. In an era in which wash-and-wear styles are expected to last five or six weeks, Reed still has customers who come in once a week.

In fact, "it's been 25 years since I've taken new clients," Reed said last Wednesday, after cutting the hair of Mike George.

She's been cutting George's hair for 33 years. "We've grown old together," George teased her.

"She's a great person," he said. "Always got a smile on her face."

Apparently, that's one of the keys to succeeding in the same business for more than 50 years.

"It's how you treat your customers," Reed said.

"People have bad days and good days, but you have to bring your good days."

Ammie Tipton, a nail tech at Image Makers, agreed that both Reed's personality and her technical skill were exceptional. "I don't know how she does it, but she does it well," Tipton said. "All of her people look beautiful when they leave."

Reed, who will turn 67 in July, said she's ready to retire for two reasons. One is that after years of playing volleyball and softball, her knees hurt. The other is that her husband of 28 years, Dan, will retire in August from the Coos Bay School District, and the pair are ready to travel. Dan wants to see Alaska, and Cheryl wants to see Venice "before it sinks."

They're also going to play golf, though Reed wouldn't divulge her handicap. Hair stylists know when to keep a secret.

And then there were two

Scott Crockett has opened a second Bargains and Blowouts store at 1195 Newmark Ave. in Coos Bay, near the Big Y. The original store is at 2047 Winchester Ave. in Reedsport. Of both stores, Crockett says, "It's a liquidation store. We get a truckload every few weeks. Our stock is always rotating and changing." Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Sunday.

Cheryl Reed puts the finishing touches on a trim for Mike George, who's been her customer for 33 years.

Interns aren't free labor

BY JOSEPH TAM

Oregon Bureau of Labor and Industries

Q: My business is in rural Oregon. Summer is almost here. A local high school student named Mary who is 17 years old asked for a summer job. Our business is not seasonal and does not need additional workers just for the summer months. I told her that we did not have any vacancy. She said that she wanted to get some real-life work experience in a retail setting and did not mind working without pay. May I accept Mary's offer and have her work without pay?

A: No, a private for-profit business may not employ an individual without at least paying the current Oregon minimum wage of $8.95 per hour unless the position is exempt from such requirement. Under the wage and hour laws, you "employ" an individual when you "suffer or permit" the individual to perform work for you. Mary's offer to come to work without pay does not exempt you from having to pay minimum wage. In addition, before Mary turns 18, she is a minor. If you decide to employ Mary, your business will also need to apply for an Annual Employment Certificate for the employment of minors 14 through 17 years of age.

Q: As I was speaking with Mary, the high school's Career Education Program Coordinator, Jamie, came by my business and learned of Mary's interest to gain work experience and my willingness to provide her training without pay. Jamie inquired if I would be interested in setting up an unpaid internship program for high school students. If I were not allowed to let Mary work without pay, how could I lawfully set up an unpaid internship program?

A: When all of the following criteria apply, students in an internship program are not employees within the meaning of wage and hour laws:

- The training, even though it includes actual operation of the facilities of the employer, is similar to that which would be given in a vocational school;

- The training is for the benefit of the trainees or students;

- The trainees or students do not displace regular employees, but work under their close supervision;

- The employer that provides the training derives no immediate advantage from the activities of the trainees or students; and on occasion his operations may actually be impeded;

- The trainees or students are not necessarily entitled to a job at the conclusion of the training period; and

- The employer and the trainees or students understand that the trainees or students are not entitled to wages for the time spent in training.

Labeling a work site experience as an "internship," "mentorship," or "structured work-based learning" has absolutely no impact on whether there is an employment relationship. If the above criteria are met, the student is not an employee and the experience qualifies as training rather than employment. If, on the other hand, the above criteria are not met, the student would most likely be an employee and must be paid — even if the experience is promoted or labeled as an "unpaid internship."

Q: In my rural retail business, the high school intern will have to handle guns and ammo during the retail sales process. Will that be acceptable?

A: Yes. Neither state nor federal child labor laws currently prohibit the handling of firearms or ammunition.

Q: How will Oregon's new intern civil rights bill affect employers?

A: Oregon's new civil rights bill, HB 2669, ensures that unpaid interns are protected from workplace discrimination, harassment and hostile work environments.

What kind of signs do I need for my business?

Q: How important is signage for marketing my business, and what do I need to know before installing a sign?

A: Signs telling potential customers what your business does and who you are are critical for any business. According to the International Sign Association (www.sign.org), "In order for the independent merchant to fully realize the potential earnings of signage, he or she must look at signage not just as a way of marking the business but also as a way of marketing the business." So, having a sign is very important, but it's just as important to know what the local signage regulations are and have a sign that is a good reflection of your business.

Communities typically issue sign permits to businesses that want to install signage. Sign professionals will be aware of the local codes and be able to guide you in creating signage that meets city ordinances and is attractive to customers. To find potential sign companies, look at what other businesses have installed and ask for a referral to the sign company they worked with. Check with the city about sign regulations. Typically sign permits can be issued to the sign contractor, the business owner or the property owner.

Create a budget for signage. The cost will include city permits, the sign contractor, design time, materials, installation and maintenance. Most cities require the sign design to be approved prior to installation, so to save on costs, get approval of all design elements prior to having a sign created.

According to Bill Blumberg, retired Coos County sign professional with over 50 years' experience in the industry, signage needs to be well designed and appropriate for the business. Colors and content are important. Signs need to be easily read by potential customers in the normal flow of traffic, usually a time span of 5 to 7 seconds.

Once a business sign is installed, regular maintenance is necessary. Maintain lighting if it's a part of the sign. Pressure wash signs regularly to remove dust and keep the sign looking good for potential customers to notice. Many sign professionals offer ongoing maintenance as a part of their services.

A sign that tells potential customers who you are and what you do is an important part of your business marketing plan.

Saving water: 5 steps to smarter irrigating

BY DEAN FOSDICK
The Associated Press

Smart irrigation is becoming a hot landscaping specialty as groundwater aquifers are increasingly sucked dry.

Thirsty lawns, energy production, and expanding "wet" industries like hydraulic fracture mining and farm irrigation are vying for water resources, leading to tougher watering restrictions and higher prices.

"The EPA is moving from encouragement to enforcement on the municipal, commercial level," said Jeff Gibson, landscape business manager for Ball Horticultural Co. in West Chicago, Ill. "Many new municipal ordinances in the country dictate the types of 'heads' (low pressure, low volume sprinklers, typically) that may be used with new installations."

Numerous states and some municipalities also are starting to offer tax incentives for installing low-water-use irrigation systems, Gibson said.

Water shortages already impact every continent, according to the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs. "Around 1.2 billion people, or almost one-fifth of the world's population, live in areas of physical scarcity, and 500 million people are approaching this situation."

Depleted water supplies are both a natural and human-made phenomenon, the agency says. "There is enough freshwater on the planet for six billion people but it is distributed unevenly and too much of it is wasted, polluted or unsustainably managed."

Planet, the national landscape industry association, lists five strategies for smarter watering:

■ Making your soil healthier. Break up and amend the soil 12 to 18 inches deep so plant roots can penetrate deeper. "The most important thing in landscaping is soil preparation and choosing plants suited to the micro-climate where they're going," said Kurt Bland, a Planet spokesman and president of Bland Landscaping Co. in Apex, N.C.

■ Grouping plants with similar water needs together. "Doing so will create less stress on the plants, which will help keep them disease-free under low water conditions," the trade association says.

■ Choosing the right grasses for lawns. "Turf grass is incredibly resilient and genetically geared to go dormant in drought conditions," a Planet handout says. "Ask a professional for what drought tolerant species will do well in your lawn based on sun exposure and soil type."

■ Creating an irrigation plan that includes reclaimed water and low-consumption drip systems. "Drip irrigation, while saving water, can increase vegetable yields and plant growth," said Robert Kourik, author of "Drip Irrigation for Every Landscape and All Climates" (Metamorphic Press, 2009.) "The improper use of irrigation creates a too-wet and too-dry cycle. This adds more stress to the roots and less-than-ideal growth. Drip irrigation promotes the best growth possible."

■ Mulching, which retains moisture, smothers weeds and adds nutrients to the soil.

"Water rates as they increase are getting people's attention," Bland said. "Ordinances requiring monitors limiting how much water can be used also seem to be working."

How to prepare your home's outdoor space for summer Fun

(StatePoint) In the warmer months your home's outdoor space is just as important as the rooms inside, especially if your family spends a lot of time outside.

Be it your yard, garden, deck or patio, there are steps you can take to prep these spaces for a fun and safe season.

Pest prevention

Mosquitos aren't just a pesky deterrent from outdoor living; they can carry and transmit dangerous viruses, such as West Nile. Make eating, entertaining and enjoying your yard safer and more pleasant by preemptively striking back.

Rather than applying sprays and lotions each time you go outside, consider a natural alternative. For example, Terminix ALLCLEAR, safe for kids and pets, provides a line of backyard misters and mosquito repellers that are proven effective.

In fact, the Terminix ALLCLEAR Sidekick has been shown to reduce mosquito bites by over 92 percent when used as directed.

These systems are also sleekly designed to match your outdoor décor.

You can also limit your skin exposure with long sleeves and pants. Pick breathable fabrics in light colors to prevent overheating.

Lawn care

Mowing, watering and hedging can be time consuming, preventing you from enjoying your time outside. And knowing what your plants and lawn need to stay looking beautiful can be a complex science.

If outsourcing your lawn care sounds expensive, consider this: the retail price you pay for quality equipment and products won't come cheap.

An expert can help you save both time and money by customizing a lawn care plan based on your climate, soil condition, grass type and lawn usage to meet the needs of your home. An expert can also survey your trees and shrubs to inspect for pests.

Fire safety

Nothing beats an outdoor barbecue or roasting marshmallows around a fire with friends and family.

But both involve safety risks. Reduce these risks by using lighter fluid sparingly and positioning your grill or fire pit several feet away from any structure. Keep a fire extinguisher nearby during barbecuing and marshmallow roasting nights.

In the event you do experience a fire, there are some dos and don'ts to protect your home. If the siding of your home is damaged by smoke, don't attempt to clean it yourself.

Incorrect cleaning could compound the soot residue. Don't touch anything with your bare hands. Oil from your hands can permeate walls and woodwork, causing additional damage.

Corrosive by-products can cause irreversible etching in as few as 72 hours so it's important to call for professional help as soon as possible. Look for a specialist, such as ServiceMaster Clean, a market leader in fire damage restoration and cleaning.

Five things to know about the health care overhaul

By TOM MURPHY
The Associated Press

Still a little hazy about the health care overhaul? You have plenty of company.

About half the people surveyed earlier this spring by the nonpartisan Kaiser Family Foundation felt they didn't have enough information to understand how the law will affect their family. Among those with an annual household income of less than $30,000, some 30 percent thought the law had been repealed by Congress or the Supreme Court.

That's the low-income demographic the law is designed to help the most as it extends insurance coverage to millions of uninsured people.

With those results in mind, here are five key points everyone should know about the overhaul, heading into this fall and 2014, when major changes start to unfold.

The law is in effect

Congress passed President Barack Obama's

health care law in March 2010, and the overhaul has since survived 37 attempts by Republicans in the House of Representatives to eliminate, defund or partly scale it back.

The law, known as the Affordable Care Act or ACA, also survived a more substantial test last year when the Supreme Court upheld its constitutionality. However, the court's ruling gave states the right to decide whether to expand Medicaid, the state-and-federally funded program that covers the needy and disabled people. Medicaid plays a key role in the ACA's plan to provide insurance coverage to more Americans.

Required coverage

The overhaul mandates that, starting next year, most U.S. citizens and legal residents obtain coverage or pay a penalty. Some exemptions have been carved out for groups that include Indian tribe members, prisoners and individuals who belong to health care sharing ministries.

The annual penalty starts at $95 per adult, or 1 percent of family income — whichever is greater — and then rises over the next few years.

Major milestones

Next year, the ACA will take two major steps toward its goal of providing more individuals with insurance coverage.

Medicaid will be expanded in states that allow it, and many people will be able to buy coverage using income-based tax credits.

These tax credits, or subsidies, are reserved for people who can't get health insurance through an employer and who don't qualify for Medicaid, Medicare or military-based coverage.

State-based benefits exchanges will debut in October and they will enable consumers to go online to compare 2014 coverage terms and prices and then use tax credits, if they qualify, to buy a policy.

Financial help

The tax credits or subsidies will be available to help individuals and families making up to four times the federal poverty level. For 2013, that equates to an income of $94,200 for a family of four in all states except Alaska and Hawaii.

The tax credits will be doled out on a sliding scale. That means individuals with incomes closer to the poverty guideline will receive bigger credits.

These credits won't lower premiums, but they can ease the insurance bill depending on a person's income. For instance, a 30-year-old with an income of $30,000, who doesn't smoke or have kids, could receive a tax credit worth more than $900. That person might then have to pay $1,925 for insurance that would provide the minimum level of coverage required under the overhaul. That's according to a subsidy calculator designed by Kaiser and posted on the foundation's website at <http://kff.org/interactive/subsidy-calculator/>.

Starting next year, the ACA also will help individuals get coverage regardless of their health. Currently, if you already have a medical condition, insurers can either reject your application or charge a much higher price. Many people with heart trouble or diabetes are unable to find an insurer willing to cover them because of the risk they represent for future claims.

Insurance prices

Health insurers are warning that premiums, or the cost of coverage, could soar for some people due to a number of factors.

Those include taxes and fees, as well as coverage requirements the law imposes.

The extent of any price hikes will depend on many variables, such as where people live, their current coverage and health and their age.

Choosing a lawn mower to fit your needs

(NAPSI)—While you don't want to let the grass grow under your feet when it's time to get a new lawn mower, there are a few steps to consider first:

■ Your Yard Size: For yards that are about three-quarters of an acre or less, a walk-behind mower can be a good choice. The smaller your yard, the smaller the mower deck can be. For example, a 21 or 22 inch walk-behind mower is commonly used on smaller yards.

If your yard is larger than three-quarters of an acre, consider a rear-engine riding mower or a smaller lawn tractor. Riding mowers with rear-mounted engines provide good visibility and excellent mobility. Look for mowing decks between 28 and 42 inches wide and engines from 12 to 20 hp.

A zero-turn rider or front-engine lawn tractor may be appropriate for one- to three-acre yards. Look for 16 to 24 hp and a mowing deck 38 to 44 inches wide.

For yards larger than three acres, a larger zero-turn rider or garden tractor is probably best. Look for engines with at least 24 hp and mowing decks in the 48- to 61-inch range.

■ The Terrain: A typical walk-behind mower is fine for a small, flat yard. If your land is sloped or hilly, consider a self-propelled walk-behind mower. One with big back wheels is easier to maneuver across rough terrain. All riding mowers can handle varied terrain, though some are better on slopes than others.

Be careful on slopes and hills. If you're using a riding mower, mow up and down the incline, never across. With a walk-behind mower, always mow across the incline and never pull the mower back toward your feet.

■ Your Physical Condition: If pushing a lawn mower is difficult, you may want a self-propelled mower even with a very small yard. Similarly, a riding mower may be the right choice if you're unable to easily walk behind a mower.

■ The Engine: Look for a quality engine suited for the size of the job you expect it to do. For example, Briggs & Stratton engines can be found in several brands of lawn mowers ranging from small walk-behinds to large zero-turn mowers and garden tractors.

■ Lawn Mower Features: New lawn and garden tractors from Simplicity have Free Floating mower decks with full-width rollers, traction options, push-button start and two- or four-wheel suspension. Many zero-turn mowers offer suspension systems and ground-following mower decks.

There's a place for everything

The woodworking shop is not really the place we do woodworking — although we'd all like to think so.

The table saw always takes center stage. Not only is it the king of the shop (called forth for just about any project that doesn't involve plumbing — and some that do), but its very use demands that it be always and easily accessible.

In my own shop, it's right in front of the door — exactly nine feet in front. That means I have room to rip an 8-foot-long 2-by-8, but, with a helper, I can handle a 10- or 12-foot plank just by opening the door.

Against one wall is my joiner, and opposite that is the chop saw — set between matching cabinets and exactly at their height so the countertops double as out-feed tables. Off in the far corner is a cabinet where I keep a jigsaw, grinder and stationary sander, all of which can be moved to its top as needed.

My stationary drill really isn't; it's mounted on a moveable cabinet where I keep most of my bits and portable drills.

And that's it.

A whole workshop for just those few big power tools.

The rest of the space? Storage.

Every wall is festooned with such stuff as saw blades, electrician's drills, files and rasps, clamps, jigs, bench dogs and patterns for things I'll probably never make again. The walls themselves are plywood so I can drive a nail and hang even more stuff absolutely anywhere.

One entire corner is taken up with a lumber rack: sheet goods in the back against the wall and narrow shelves laden with scraps, leftovers and also-rans, as well as spare mopboard, shoe molding and door casing. On the floor at its feet are hunks of walnut, oak and catalpa that I may get around to carving.

Hanging on the end wall with two folding sawhorses are a couple of shelves stuffed with books and magazine clippings of projects I also might undertake if I ever get the time. They're very saw-dusty.

Opposite the lumber rack is a small finish cabinet that holds gallon cans of leftover exterior paint (the cabinet's too small for spare interior paint, so that's on shelves in the basement), and on the shallow shelves above are wood stains, varnishes, oils, solvents and smaller cans of paint.

On top of the finish cabinet is a metal bank of drawers crammed with hardware: screws, nuts and bolts (often matching!), washers, anchors, cotter pins, wire nuts and things I've completely forgotten I've salvaged.

Beside it are some upright tubes where I store rebar and other metal rods, dowels, short lengths of molding and my sanding pole — just because it had to go somewhere.

Next come two big workbenches that really are cabinets where I keep hand-held power tools, tiling and dry-wall gear and drawers stuffed with still more salvaged hardware (it's a disease; I've given up searching for a cure).

Above them are four hinged pegboard cabinets for hand tools, and on the wall beside the front door are narrow shelves lined with peanut butter jars containing assorted kinds and sizes of nails and drywall screws. There are about 30 of them.

Finally, in the center of the shop is a carpenter's bench that sports still more drawers where I keep my chisels, gouges, carving knives and — for no particular reason except that they had to go somewhere — wrenches and planes.

Basically, my shop is a warehouse.

Why you should never be late with the rent

Dear Mary: In one of your columns that I read years ago, you recommended paying your rent (or mortgage) first, because landlords are quick to evict. I just wanted to confirm this point, but also say that I wish I would have taken that advice to heart.

I've lived in the same house for over three years. I was evicted for being 18 days late, even though this was the first time I was ever late. I sent a certified letter to the landlord ahead of time explaining why I would be late.

Since he didn't respond, I assumed my explanation for why I would be paying late was acceptable. Instead, he sent me a summons. It ended up costing me $900 in attorney fees and court costs, and it is still costing me because I have my things in storage. Because I have an eviction on my record, I cannot find anyone who will take me as a renter. I am basically homeless.

I have since learned that the landlord wanted possession of the house and used my first slip-up to gain it. I have paid a heavy price to learn about the laws that exist in Missouri, and similarly in all states:

1. You are considered late after the first day.
2. You are considered a late payer even if you pay during the grace period.
3. All that the grace period means is that you won't be charged a late charge until after the fifth day, or when the grace period runs out.
4. The landlord can report you to the credit bureaus as a late payer for up to seven years even if you have paid on time every other month over a long period of time.
5. Unless you have a lease, a landlord can serve you a 30-day notice to vacate, followed by eviction if you do not comply, just to gain possession of the property, even if you were never late.

I'm scared to death because I can't find a place to live. Morally and ethically I believe what the landlord did was wrong, but legally landlords can do this.

I hope you can use this letter to bring a real-life scenario to your readers. — J.K., MO

Dear J.K.: My heart is aching as I read your letter, trying to imagine how painful this lesson has been for you. The good thing is that I am certain you will never have to learn it again. I want to encourage you to keep looking and keep applying. You will find a place to live eventually, if you keep at it and do not give up.

Be open and upfront with potential landlords. If you tell them about the eviction before they find this out by reading your credit report, you will have an opportunity to explain what happened together with the difficult lessons you have learned.

Thanks for sharing your experience. I know there are readers right now who are learning from your mistake, and they are grateful. Good luck, and let us know when you get settled.

HOW TO PLAY: Fill in the squares using any number from 1 to 9, without repeating any numbers in a run line (row or column blocked off by black boxes). The numbers in each horizontal run line must add up to the sum shown in the black box to its left (above the diagonal). The numbers in each vertical run line must add up to the sum shown in the black box at its top (below the diagonal).

Your Birthday:

SUNDAY, June 23, 2013

Many new opportunities will present themselves if you focus on developing better relationships with your friends and allies in the coming days. If everyone is willing to make some adjustments, wonderful benefits will result.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

— Although you might think your way of doing things is far superior to your mate's, you could be wrong. Keep an open mind.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

— Rather than suppressing your frustrations over how another is handling a critical issue, find a suitable way to openly discuss your grievances. Nothing will change until you speak up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

— The poor behavior of an arrogant friend doesn't have to spoil a social event. Simply smile and disengage yourself from this person's presence, even it's just long enough to calm down.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)

— Don't allow yourself to get involved in a contest, especially if you're operating at a disadvantage. If you can't overcome the odds, walk away and do something else.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)

— Jumping to conclusions makes it difficult for you to honestly evaluate someone else's position. One of the worst things you can do is make a judgment call based on limited information.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — A need for instant gratification will severely distort your sense of values. Instead of satisfying an impulsive desire, you should shop around a bit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

— The support from another that you were counting on might not be forthcoming. Make sure you have a Plan B ready to go.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

— Before generously offering to help another with a complicated endeavor, you need find out what you're getting into. Don't bite off more than you can chew.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)

— If you suspect a friend might throw a monkey wrench in your plans, you don't have to exclude him or her. Just let this person know that the majority will rule.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

— Make sure you don't take credit for doing something in which you only played a minor part. It could be an embarrassment for you later when the full truth comes out.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

— It's OK to start looking ahead to the future, but not to the degree that you totally ignore what is going on right now. If you are to succeed, both time frames must be considered.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

— Prudence is a must in the management of your financial resources, but not to the point that you deny yourself everything that brings you pleasure. To be happy, balance your affairs.

MONDAY, JUNE 24, 2013

Certain events in the year ahead are likely to draw you closer to a casual acquaintance. A warm bond will develop, making this person one of your best pals.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

— When it comes to work-related issues, don't be overly dependent on co-workers who've helped you in the past. They might not be around this time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

— As long as you're permitted to think for yourself, you'll be productive. Undue orders or interference will slow you down to a crawl.

BRIDGE

Groucho Marx said, "A black cat crossing your path signifies that the animal is going somewhere."

Not a superstitious man, he. And bridge is not a game for the superstitious, with its 13-card hands and 13-trick deals.

To get from one hand to the other, you often have to be careful with your cards. How does that apply in this deal? South is in four spades, and West leads the club queen.

If you open two no-trump with only 20 or 21 points, you should definitely upgrade that South hand and open two clubs. If you require a good 20, 21 or 22 for two no-trump, it is a closer call, but with all four aces, two 10s and those combining honors, the hand is worth nearer 23 points than 21.

On the second round, North employs Stayman to uncover the 4-4 spade fit.

South should see four potential losers: two hearts, one diamond and one club. He has only nine guaranteed tricks: four spades, one heart, three diamonds and one club. Declarer should conclude that the diamond finesse must be winning. However, that finesse might have to be taken three times, which would require three dummy entries. Put those trumps to work!

Declarer should win with his club ace, cash the spade ace and carefully overtake the spade eight with dummy's nine. Then he tries the diamond finesse. When it wins, South plays the spade 10 to dummy's jack and repeats the diamond finesse. Finally, he leads the spade queen to dummy's king, takes a third diamond finesse, and claims 10 tricks: four spades, one heart, four diamonds and one club. Watch your entries like a cat, black or otherwise.
