ORCCA probe finds no misuse of funds

By EMILY THORNTON
The World

COOS BAY — There was no misuse of federal funds by Oregon Coast Community Action, according to Oregon Housing and Community Services.

OHCS investigated ORCCA after a former ORCCA employee accused the agency of wrongdoing. One accusation said ORCCA used federal funds from Housing and Urban Development to pay for South Coast Food Share workers' salaries. ORCCA must use certain federal funds accordingly to be compliant.

OHCS' review concluded "a small number of hours were charged between programs." John Mysterly, essential services director, was cross-training an employee, said Mike Lehman, executive director of ORCCA. Lehman said the employee had nine and a half hours of cross-training in the energy department. The review found it "did not rise to the level of misappropriation by any definition."

The report found that a $177,000 South Coast Food Share deficit was attributed to changes in funding parameters of the Food Share facility. ORCCA provided a proposal to offset the amount by re-allocating funds.

Lehman said Food Share constantly drained funds, but attributed that to the mission of the organization.

"When you're giving food to hungry people, you're going to have a deficit," Lehman said. "I'm not worried about us not surviving."

Lehman said Food Share actually had about a $110,000 to $120,000 deficit, but he planned to use grants and donations to fill the gap. He said he would use money from other programs, such as Park West Apartments, corporate funds, or its campus account as a last resort.

ORCCA has applied for 15 grants, five of which were new, in the past one and a half months, Lehman said. He attributed the increased applications to Deborah Ross, the new development coordinator.

"She's impressive," Lehman said.

Increased salaries needed adjusting to "bring them in line with counterparts in other similar organizations," according to OHCS. ORCCA allegedly increased salaries of some employees. Lehman said when the Food Share director left, the salaries were spread out among the other employees.

"The total salary cost is lower than a year ago," Lehman said. He said the average salary at ORCCA was lower than other comparable

Curry to attempt another tax vote

GRANTS PASS (AP) — Hoping to stave off bankruptcy and a state takeover, Curry County commissioners are again asking voters approve a tax increase to keep sheriff's patrols on the road and the jail open.

County Commission Chairman David Brock Smith said Monday he hopes two things that have happened since a tax hike was voted down last May will make a difference come November.

The county is asking for less this time — $3.2 million over three years.

And a new law allows the governor to declare an emergency in counties where citizens refuse to pay for minimum public services. That opens the way for county officials to impose new taxes.

If voters turn down the levy, Curry County is in line to be the first test of the new law.

Showers help fight wildfires

PORTLAND (AP) — Unusual late-summer rains are helping crews battle wildfires in southwestern Oregon and the Columbia Gorge — and even driving some from soaked tents to bed down indoors.

Some firefighters at the Government Flats complex southwest of The Dalles reported leaky tents and wet bedding on Sunday, the Oregon Department of Forestry said.

They were given dry sleeping bags and moved indoors to sleep in the gym at Wahtonka High School, where the department observed in its daily fire summary Monday that the "floor may be harder, but it is dry and warm."

The fire has destroyed four homes. It's burning on about 19 square miles, or 12,000 acres.

The state agency says the cool, wet weather has helped the crews in the gorge, and the fires are considered 45 percent contained. Fire crews are being redeployed to other parts of the fire, demobilized

Signs of work around Chandler

By TIM NOVOTNY
The World

COOS BAY — The drooping Chandler Building in downtown Coos Bay is getting some much needed attention. Workers in red were visible throughout the day on Monday, after getting some prep work done on Friday.

Jim Hossley, Coos Bay public works and development director, said he spoke with the contractor on Monday. He said a spokesperson for Ram Jack told him that the work had indeed commenced.

"He said they are on site, starting work, and plan to keep going until they are done," he added.

In July, the city said the building was "bordering on a dangerous state," as movement was starting to become more and more noticeable on the outside of the building.

The Chandler was built in 1909 and served as a hotel for years. Added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1984, the building started showing signs of stress on the northwest corner about four years ago. Some work was done underneath the building at the time to try and keep it propped up.

Hossley says they are now working to put stabilizing pilings beneath the exterior wall of the building to help correct the sinking northwest corner of the historic structure. The contractors will not, however, be at work on Wednesdays in order to allow for the farmers market to continue without interruption.

Hospital wins energy grant

■ Designs for expansion will save electricity, gas

By EMILY THORNTON
The World

COOS BAY — Energy Trust of Oregon awarded Bay Area Hospital $93,194 on Monday for making energy conscious decisions when designing its new wing.

The hospital expects to save 390,833 kilowatt hours of electricity and 47,339 therms of natural gas per year. It also expects to save $70,000 in heating costs because of its energy saving compressor. The LED lights should save BAH 30 percent in electricity, hospital officials said.

Edgar Wales, government sector account manager for Energy Trust, said his company “helped customers invest in energy efficiency.” He also said they made payments to those who made efforts to save energy.

“Bay Area Hospital created a well-designed, efficient building,” Wales said.

Angalee O’Connor, outreach manager for Energy Trust, said she walked BAH through the process of reaching energy saving goals. About a dozen people oversaw BAH’s plan. She said companies had to take special measures to be considered for grants, which come from entities’ charges to other customers.

Wales said companies needed to do more than the industry standard to receive money.

“They have to ask, ‘What else can we do to save energy?’” Wales said.

■ Authorities say man accused of assault had small arsenal in his home

BY TIM NOVOTNY
The World

COQUILLE — The man accused of stashing a small-scale arsenal inside his Empire area home in Coos Bay will have a 12-member jury decide his fate this winter.

Jay Kenneth Yarbrough was in court Monday morning for a hearing to set the calendar for his case. An omnibus hearing, to settle any pre-trial motions, is set for Oct. 14 at 3 p.m. and a two-day trial has been scheduled for Dec. 3 and 4. Yarbrough is facing a number of charges, including assault, unlawful possession of firearms, unlawful possession of destructive devices and recklessly endangering another person. The charges stem from the discovery, in June, of a number of explosive devices and guns in a bunker discovered beneath his house.

He was arrested in Powers on June 23 and later waived his right to be tried within 60 days in order to allow his attorney, Rick Inokuchi, more time to prepare their case.

Yarbrough remains in custody on $250,000 bail.

Gertson formally sentenced

One of the three men accused of killing Jesse Hayes last February was sentenced in a Coos County Courtroom Monday morning. As the World reported earlier this month, Michael Gertson agreed to plead guilty to a lesser charge of second-degree manslaughter.

Gertson, 32, had been set to stand trial for murder next February. Instead, he is heading to prison for the next ten years, with no opportunity for early release or parole.

George Ivanoff and Jesse Longhenry remain in custody on murder charges.

Sex crimes trial date re-set

A Myrtle Point man, originally set to go to trial last week on several sex-related charges will now have his case heard in November.

The two-day trail of Christopher Michael Gannon, 31, has been moved back to Nov. 19 and 20.

Gannon faces charges of second-degree sex abuse, first-degree online sexual corruption of a child and contributing to the sexual delinquency of a minor.

Deal with Mingus memorial issue

Our view

City leaders need to publicly address the Mingus Park memorial issue now.

What do you think?

The World welcomes letters. Email us at letters@theworldlink.com.

One thing is perfectly clear from the start – the explosion last week near the Mingus Park Vietnam War Memorial cross was either an act of terrorism, simple stupidity or serious maliciousness. Whatever the motive, whoever caused the blast deserves appropriate punishment.

What followed less than 24 hours after that, however, is perplexing.

The city of Coos Bay was supposed to have held a meeting this evening to discuss the fate of the memorial, which has been the target this year of Freedom From Religion Foundation. The advocacy group insisted that the memorial, in the shape of a Christian cross, must be removed from public property.

Now that meeting’s canceled. City manager Roger Craddock says the blast “is going to aggravate an already emotional situation. Time has a healing effect.”

How much time, we ask? This controversy has been a thorn in the city’s side since March when the religious freedom group made its threat. The city responded by requesting consultation from yet another advocacy group, the Liberty Institute, a Christian advocacy and legal defense organization. (Was there no third-party non-sectarian legal consultant available?)

That consultation was expected to be discussed this evening, but that’s all off now, and all because of what was a purely ignorant act. Indeed, the explosion could very easily have been a couple of juvenile-minded individuals who thought they were just pranking. Instead, whoever committed this act now has the city changing its plans.

What if this were a debate over the issue of salaries for city workers, or which streets get repair funding first? Will random, senseless acts of violence delay our city leaders on discussing those issues?

Yes, we fully understand the emotional weight this issue carries. Because it’s so important to so many Coos Bay citizens, it requires leadership and determination from our officials. Not wavering, trepidation and avoidance.

Don’t let the terrorists win.

A more perfect union

Only days ago we celebrated the 50th anniversary of the 1963 March on Washington, which was a watershed in the fight for equality, opportunity and affirmative action. Let us not forget that it was a March on Washington for jobs and freedom. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and the leaders of the civil rights movement understood that without jobs, there was no freedom. They also understood that while competition might be good for business, without cooperation there is no business.

In 50 years, we have made a lot of progress. We’re no longer surprised to find minorities in positions of responsibility or in the public eye. We don’t have to worry about the first African-American this or the first Hispanic that. A lot of glass ceilings have been broken.

The conclusion of Martin Luther King Jr.’s “I Have a Dream” speech remains as poignant and as inspiring and as relevant today as it was 50 years ago. He talked of mountains, saying, “With this faith” – the faith that America will live up to its promise – “we will be able to hew out of the mountain of despair a stone of hope.” He quoted the song “My Country ‘Tis of Thee,” which concludes, “from every mountainside, let freedom ring,” and then named mountain after mountain – let freedom ring.

Over the years, I’ve wondered: Why name so many mountains in so many states?

You see, freedom can only ring from the mountainside if someone climbs that mountain and rings the bell. Someone has to have that job.

But climbing a mountain isn’t steady progress up and always forward. There are detours, twists and backward steps, retreating and loose footing. What I see, and what all of us who dedicate every day to the proposition that we must work together toward equality in the workplace, must see, is that we are still climbing the mountain to ring the bell of freedom.

We have had too many attempts to restrict freedom – freedom that begins with creating more access to the voting booth, not less; freedom that requires more reasoned discussion, not more talking points. We have had too much indifference to jobs. But what we need is a commitment to education, to health care (you can’t work if you’re sick), and to the industries of the future. Jobs require cooperation, compromise, a strong infrastructure, public investment and private enterprise.

It is easy to teeter on the ledge of the mountain of despair when we consider the implications of decisions such as the Supreme Court’s in the affirmative action case Fisher v. Texas. As Justice Ruth Bader Ginsberg said in dissent, “only an ostrich could regard the supposedly neutral alternatives as race unconscious.”

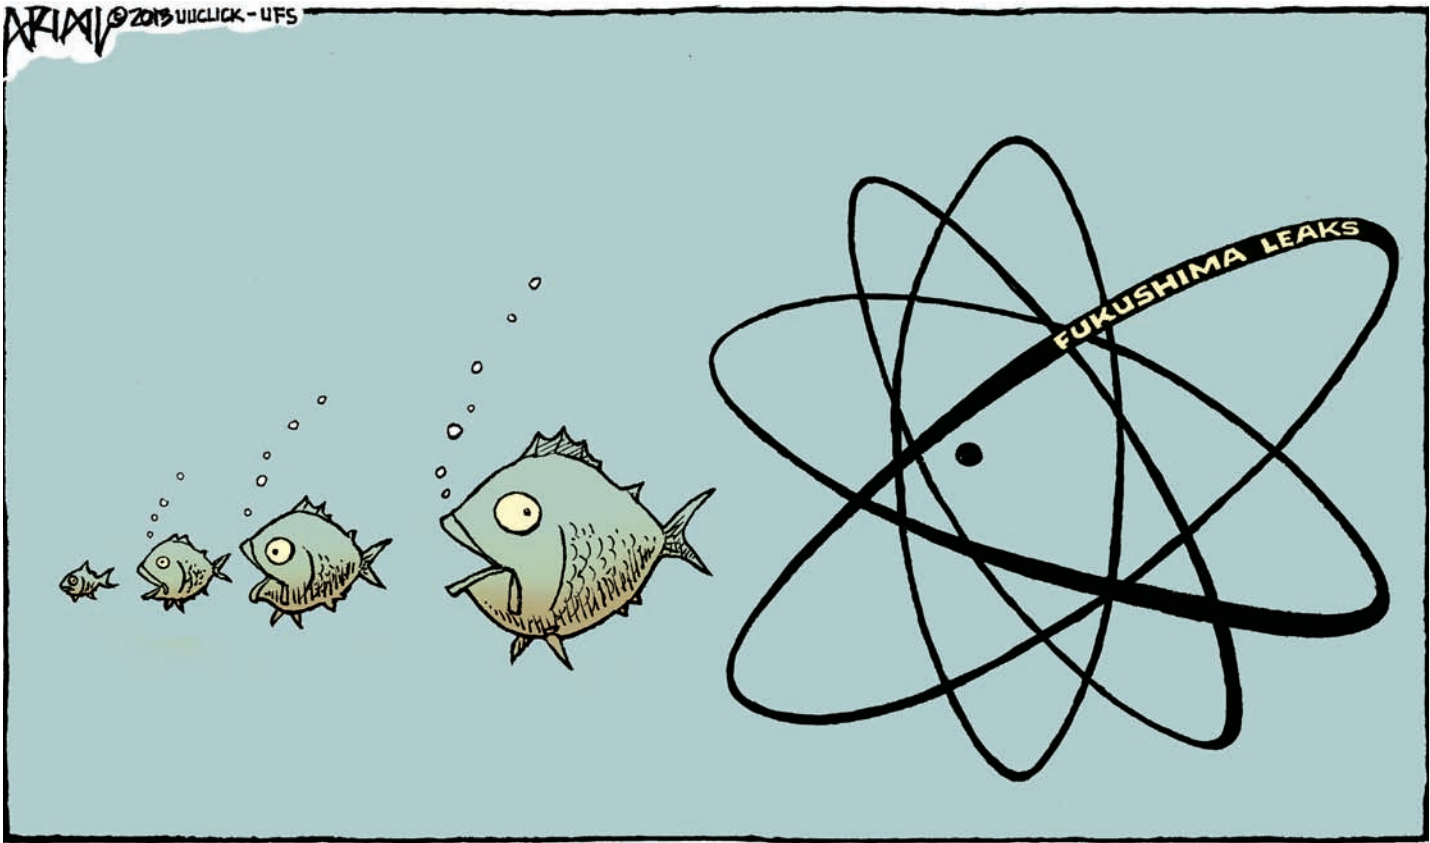

So how do we avoid being an ostrich? How do we respond to the supercilious dismissal of facts? I think we begin by not just remembering, but embracing what Dr. King told Nichelle Nichols, who played Lt. Uhura on the original “Star Trek,” when he told her the importance of her character: “We will be seen as we should be seen every day – as intelligent, quality, beautiful people who can sing, dance, but who can also go into space.” And further, while we may be black or female or Jewish or Hispanic or male, those are not our roles. Our role is to work together in mutual respect, each with his or her talents, through increased acts of goodness and kindness, toward a more perfect union.

Jumping on the LNG bandwagon

The T-shirts at the Merkley town hall meeting should have read, “I Support Jordan Cove and I Got This Shirt From a Lobbyist.” I watched someone hand them out just before the event. I trust if I am wrong about who paid for them, they will promptly respond. The building industry union members and business owners wearing them stand to gain something from the boom/bust cycle that will come. The public relations push we are seeing is the result of promises, promises, and more promises.

Local politicians, police, fire departments and now Sen. Merkley have jumped on the band wagon. Are they resolved that “if you can’t beat them, join them?” Is this learned helplessness or have they fallen for a bunch of promises too?

If not for hydro-fracked gas there would be no gas to export. Enormous amounts of water and chemicals are used for that process, and this is insane. Moving fossil fuel around the planet is greedy and stupid, even if it previously served a purpose. We have renewable and sustainable sources that will make us energy independent.

It is time to think of the future. I don’t mean the next five years where Canadian speculators come here to build a monstrosity and then sell it off to whoever decides to buy the gas. They won’t care who purchases the terminal or pipeline, or if they will maintain it. We locals will care when we have the earthquake/tsunami, but will the cheerleaders be here to secure the gas plant? Many of them won’t. They will be off building or working elsewhere. Survivors will realize that they got the money and the residents, and landowners got the risk.

Filling the fertility gap

MONTERCHI, ITALY – It was a lovely summer evening. Large families filled the terrace at La Pieve Vecchio, a restaurant occupying an old convent on the outskirts of this hilltop village in Tuscany. Some groups even included small children, perched in high chairs or wandering the dining area with an anxious parent trailing close behind.

That’s a common scene in America but not in Europe, especially in Italy. Here, children are almost as rare as the truffles that were in high season and featured on La Pieve’s menu. And that birth dearth is causing a crisis across the continent.

“As if it did not have enough problems with its never-ending fiscal and economic crisis,” notes international economist Paolo von Schirach, “Europe is also afflicted by long-term, possibly terminal, demographic decline.”

The impact of this decline has “already had noticeable effects, none of them good,” he explains. Lower birth rates lead to aging populations, fewer young people in the workforce and a shrinking tax base.

As The New York Times recently reported from Germany, “Europe’s plunge in fertility rates over the decades (presents) a problem that has frightening implications for the economy and the psyche of the Continent.”

The problem is particularly acute here in Italy, where the average birth rate is 1.39 children per female, far below the 2.1

COKIE AND STEVEN V. ROBERTS

needed to keep the population stable. “The number of great-grandparents is overtaking the number of great-grandchildren,” according to the Aspen Institute Italia, “and in addition to an increase in the number of people over 65, Italy is also seeing a rise in over 80-year-olds.”

This is not a new story; European birth rates have been dropping for many years. But the perspective from Monterchi offers an important insight into the immigration reform debate that has paused for August back in Washington but will resume in the fall.

Yes, Americans are somewhat more fertile than Europeans, but the United States has something else that is just as valuable to the economy as children. Foreigners.

Proponents of immigration reform have focused on the enormous economic benefits contributed by newcomers – starting new businesses, inventing new products, filling jobs others don’t want. But they also foot the nation’s bills. They help alleviate the “frightening implications for the economy” posed by an aging population that uses more services and pays fewer taxes.

Sure, the United States is running huge budget deficits, but our fiscal problems are far less severe than those in Europe, and immigrants are one key reason.

We did see some foreigners here in Italy, and not just tourists. Our server at La Pieve was a young woman from Poland; another waiter told us he’d come from Romania with his mother. In the marketplace at nearby Umbertide, several vendors wore the hijab, a Muslim head scarf.

But Europe has far more trouble than America does in attracting and assimilating hardworking, bill-paying young immigrants. These are still largely homogenous countries that lack the diversity and tolerance that has always marked the New World culture.

True, America has frequently exhibited a streak of xenophobia, or fear of foreigners, that focuses today on Latinos and Muslims. But there’s no Statue of Liberty welcoming newcomers to Rome or Paris or Berlin. And when they do come to Europe, immigrants are less likely to settle down and become part of the community.

The word “xenophobia” is originally Greek, not English. A Somali working in the market at Umbertide will never be truly Italian, while an Italian who opens a bakery in Cleveland can eventually become a full-bodied, flag-waving American.

Faced with this “demographic decline,” European governments are struggling for answers. Some have provided lavish subsidies to young couples to bear more children. Others are trying to convince women to join and stay in the workforce. But these goals can be contradictory, especially for traditional European cultures that have “long glorified stay-at-home mothers,” notes the Times.

“Another way to adjust to the population decline is to get older workers to postpone retirement,” the Times added. For example, “Volkswagen has redesigned its assembly line to ease the bending and overhead work that put excessive strain on workers’ bodies.”

Europe would be far better off if it had young immigrants to do all that bending and reaching – and to pay taxes on their earnings. They don’t, but the United States does. And that’s why the message from Monterchi is clear: America should encourage more immigrants and legalize the ones who are already contributing to our economic vitality.

Calls put wife on full alert

DEAR ABBY: While I was out of town, my husband, “Miles,” ran into his high school girlfriend at a party hosted by good friends of ours. She has been through a bad divorce, and Miles insists his desire to keep in touch with her is merely concern for a dear friend. Until I put a stop to it, he was calling her every night, talking with her for at least an hour at a time. He said there was nothing more to it.

I have now insisted that he call her only once a week and in my presence. He’s complying, but it distresses me to hear him enjoy the conversation so much. Miles truly cares about her and she makes him laugh. He says he loves only me and will never leave me. He’s a good man and I believe him, but ...

How should I handle this? I don’t want to forbid him to talk to her, but I am feeling very insecure. Am I foolish to let their contact continue? We have been married 30 years. — THREATENED IN KENTUCKY

JEANNE PHILLIPS

DEAR THREATENED: Tell your husband you know he loves you, has good morals and would never leave you, but that you feel intimidated by his renewed relationship with his high school sweetheart. Tell him you know he is kindhearted, but for YOUR mental health to please consider winding down these conversations. And it would be a kindness for him to recommend a counselor to his friend to help her resolve her issues.

DEAR ABBY: I’m 27 and the mother of a 6-year-old boy. I kiss him on the mouth and never thought twice about it until today, when my husband told me it’s “creepy” that I do it at my son’s age. In my family we have always kissed on the mouth, and I still kiss my mother this way. Is it “weird” or inappropriate? I didn’t think so, but now I’m concerned. — “SMOOCHY” IN TACOMA, WASH.

DEAR “SMOOCHY”: Did you also kiss your father on the mouth? Different families have different customs, and if your husband spent much time around your family he should have noticed that. I don’t see anything weird or inappropriate about the way you kiss your child. If your son reaches an age where it makes him uncomfortable, I’m sure he’ll let you know.

DEAR ABBY: I work in customer service and have noticed that more than half the people who write in abruptly end their emails with “Please advise.”

To me, it seems rude and demanding. I feel that if a question has already been asked, there is no need to follow up with this phrase. What is the proper etiquette for using this phrase? — OFFENDED IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR OFFENDED: There is no rule of etiquette pertaining to the use of the phrase “please advise.” Many individuals who write to me for advice end their letters that way. It’s not offensive; it simply means the person is asking for a reply.

Nine-year-old Emma Joy Hawkins, center, of Albany wins the Bling sheep contest at the Oregon State Fair in Salem on Sunday.

Sheep contest is all about accessorizing

SALEM (AP) — What do you get when you combine bling with nerd?

It may defy a simple description, but it earned Emma Joy Hawkins first place and $100 Sunday in the Oregon State Fair’s first bling contest for sheep.

Hawkins’ combination of a pink costume for herself and a lime-green covering for her cross-bred ewe proved attractive to the contest judge, Brittany Steele, this year’s dairy princess ambassador from Linn and Benton counties.

There were eight contestants, in all age ranges, all decked out with their sheep. The runner-up was Elsie Duyn from Yamhill-Carlton High School, who won $50.

“She was super excited,” said Laura Hawkins, the winner’s mother. “She was going for the prize, especially when she heard there was cash. Sometimes it gets boring, because it’s real competitive out there (with sheep contests). This event lightens it up.”

Most contestants brought their sheep to the fairgrounds for competitions starting two days before the fair opened to the public Friday. The sheep will leave Tuesday as goats and pigs take their place in the Forster Livestock Pavilion.

Emma Joy has been showing sheep since she was 4; she is 9, and a student at Oak Grove Elementary School in Albany. But her winning ewe has no name.

“I haven’t really thought of it yet,” she said after her victory. “I am thinking of something with ‘bling’ in it.”

Many members of her extended family, including her aunt and her grandmother, were on hand for the competition.

“Now she has to treat all of us to curly fries,” Laura Hawkins said.

While waiting Sunday for the first-ever sheep bling contest at the Oregon State Fair, a Salem grower of Navajo-churro sheep was spinning wool.

The demonstration by Peggy Miller of Maple Tree Farms was one of the fair’s many live exhibits in the Forster Livestock Pavilion, where people can see how animals provide food and fiber.

“We have the fair in our blood,” said Miller, whose grandfather, mother and other relatives have exhibited at the fair.

She’s been growing sheep for 11 years, and estimates that the farm has 75, including 35 ewes. The wool from Navajo-churro sheep is durable and used in rugs and caps. Much of the material is donated back to the Navajo reservation near Four Corners, where Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico and Utah meet.

Cover Oregon TV ads launched

SALEM (AP) — Cover Oregon is launching a second series of television ads to promote the online marketplace where consumers can shop for health insurance under the federal health care overhaul.

The three ads launched Monday are designed to educate the public about Cover Oregon. One highlights the ability to compare insurance plans. Another touts federal subsidies that lower the costs for some people. The third says nobody can be excluded for pre-existing conditions.

Nearly all Americans are required to have health insurance next year or pay a fine. People without insurance can shop for it on CoverOregon.com beginning in October.

Man arrested in Oregon City stabbing

OREGON CITY (AP) — Police in Oregon City say they’ve made an arrest in the death of a man fatally stabbed at his home.

Sgt. Patrick Lynch said 34-year-old Tony Lopez Lozano was arrested Monday evening for investigation of murder in the death of 42-year-old Brian Romo.

Lynch described Lozano as the victim’s domestic partner. He was expected to make a court appearance Tuesday.

An autopsy report said Romo was stabbed in the chest. Dr. Karen Gunson, state medical examiner, said the wound was consistent with one made by a knife.

Police say Romo was stabbed Sunday and other people were present at the time.

Delsie L. Lang

Dec. 28, 1946 - Aug. 22, 2013

A memorial service will be held for Delsie L. Lang, 93, of Langlois at 3 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 31, at the Langlois Community Church. Pastor Rick House will officiate.

Delsie died Aug. 22, 2013, in Bandon. She was born Dec. 28, 1946 in Boone, Iowa. At age 5 she moved with her family to Idaho, where she graduated from Nampa High School. She married Clifford Lang June 10, 1939, in Nampa. During the war the family moved to Portland, where Cliff worked in the shipyards. The family moved to Culver, then in 1950, to Langlois, where they purchased land, farmed and raised their family. The Langs celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in 1989 in Langlois. Cliff and Delsie retired and moved to North Bend, where they spent their retirement years.

Delsie was a homemaker and member of the Langlois Community Church, Bandon Rebecca Lodge and the Floras Willow Club. Her greatest joy was her family. She enjoyed gardening, sewing, quilting and crocheting. Those who knew Delsie will miss her sweet smile and quiet ways.

Delsie Lang

Delsie is survived by her sisters, Donna Lassley of Nampa and Clarabell Babcock of Boise, Idaho; brother, Donald Nelson of Nampa; sons and daughters-in-law, Dale and Michaelyn Lang of Hillsboro, Vernon and Priscilla Lang of Langlois, Carl and Bette Lang of Tenmile, and Earl and Merri Lang of Langlois; son, Lewis Lang of Langlois; daughters and sons-in-law, Virginia and Bob Boucher of Albany and Lois and Virgil Clark of Moses Lake, Wash.; daughter, Elaine Jacobs of Centralia, Wash.; 21 grandchildren; and 27 great-grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by her parents, Robert and Ada Nelson; two sisters, Ruth Hill and Marjorie Munster; two brothers, Darroll Nelson and Bob Nelson; and husband, Clifford.

Arrangements are under the direction of Amling/Schroeder Funeral Service, Bandon, 541-34-2907.

Dean A. Russell

Jan. 11, 1931 - Aug. 20, 2013

A celebration of the life of Bandon resident, Dean A Russell, will be held at 11 a.m., Saturday, Aug. 31, at Amling Schroeder Funeral Service Bandon Chapel. Following the service family and friends are invited to a luncheon at the Russell home.

Dean was born Jan. 11, 1931, in Marshfield, the son of Gareld and Gertrude Mintonye Russell. He died Aug. 20, 2013, in Bandon at the age of 82.

Dean was a lifelong resident of Coos County and a fourth-generation Oregonian. He graduated from Coquille High School in 1949. He logged for a short time before serving in the U.S. Army during the Korean conflict. Following the war he returned to Oregon where he graduated in 1956 from OTI in Klamath Falls and then he married Carolyn Moody.

He worked for Hillstrom’s Shipbuilding for many years as a welder and shipbuilder, during which time he oversaw the building of the tug boat North Bend. He finished his career at Southern Oregon Marine. He was a past master of Blanco No. 48 Masonic Lodge, past patron of both Doric Chapter No. 53 OES and the Order of the Amaranth, and Associate Guardian of Job’s Daughters Bethels No. 68 and No. 17.

He is survived by his wife of nearly 57 years, Carolyn; daughters and sons-in-law, Mary Louise Russell and Doug Buster, and Lynn Deane and Alan Lively; grandson and wife, David and Liliana Lively; brothers, James and wife Alma and Horace “Tony” Russell; brother-in-law; Derrill Moody; and numerous cousins, nieces and nephews.

The family suggests memorials may be made to the Shriner’s Hospital or the Bandon Historical Museum.

Arrangements are under the direction of Amling/Schroeder Funeral Service, Bandon, 541-347-2907.

Pres. Obama awards Medal of Honor to Afghan war veteran

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Barack Obama bestowed the nation's highest military honor, the Medal of Honor, on Army Staff Sgt. Ty Carter on Monday, saluting the veteran of the war in Afghanistan as “the essence of true heroism,” one still engaged in a battle against the lingering emotional fallout of war.

Carter risked his life to save an injured soldier, resupply ammunition to his comrades and render first aid during intense fighting in a remote mountain outpost four years ago.

“As these soldiers and families will tell you, they’re a family forged in battle, and loss, and love,” Obama said as Carter stood at his side and members of his unit watched in the White House East Room.

Then as an Army specialist, Carter sprinted from his barracks into a ferocious firefight, a day-long battle on Oct. 3, 2009, that killed eight of his fellow soldiers as they tried to defend their outpost — at the bottom of a valley and surrounded by high mountains — from the onslaught of a much larger force of Taliban and local fighters.

Still suffering from post-traumatic stress syndrome, Carter stood nearly emotionless during the ceremony, although a faint smile near the end of the ceremony turned into a grin as Obama hung the medal around his neck.

A fire truck drives past burning trees as firefighters continue to battle the Rim Fire near Yosemite National Park, Calif., on Monday. Crews working to contain one of California's largest-ever wildfires gained some ground Monday against the flames threatening San Francisco's water supply, several towns near Yosemite National Park and historic giant sequoias.

Crews report progress against Yosemite fire

TUOLUMNE CITY, Calif. (AP) — Crews were finally gaining ground on a massive wildfire burning near Yosemite National Park and no water or power disruptions were expected from ash raining on the main reservoir that supplies San Francisco, officials said late Monday.

While the blaze continued to grow in size, containment numbers were up, as was optimism that firefighters were making some progress, said Glen Stratton, an operations chief on the fire suppression team.

Nearly 3,700 firefighters battled the approximately 252-square-mile blaze, the biggest wildfire on record in California's Sierra Nevada. The fire was 20 percent contained.

“It's been a real tiger,” said Lee Bentley, fire spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service. “He's been going around trying to bite its own tail, and it won't let go but we'll get there.”

While flames reached the edge of the Hetch Hetchy Reservoir, the chief source of San Francisco's famously pure drinking water, crews were confident they would be able to protect hydroelectric transmission lines and other utility facilities, Stratton said.

Utility officials monitored the clarity of the water and used a massive new $4.6 billion gravity-operated pipeline system to move water quickly to reservoirs closer to the big city.

So far the ash that has been raining onto the reservoir has not sunk as far as the intake valves, which are about halfway down the 300-foot O'Shaughnessy Dam. Utility officials said that the ash is non-toxic but

Hagel: U.S. forces now ready to strike Syria if ordered

By Robert Burns
The Associated Press

BANDER SERI BEGAWAN, Brunei — U.S. forces are now ready to act on any order by President Barack Obama to strike Syria, U.S. Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel said Tuesday.

The U.S. Navy has four destroyers in the eastern Mediterranean Sea positioned within range of targets inside Syria, as well as U.S. warplanes in the region, Hagel said in an interview with BBC television during his visit to the southeast Asian nation of Brunei.

Hagel also predicted that U.S. intelligence agencies would soon conclude that last week's deadly attack on civilians in a Damascus suburb was a chemical attack by Bashar Assad's government.

“I think it's pretty clear that chemical weapons were used against people in Syria,” he said. “I think the intelligence will conclude that it wasn't the (Syria) rebels who used it, and there'll probably be pretty good intelligence to show that the Syria government was responsible — but we'll allow the time to come together to provide that information.”

Obama asked the Pentagon to give him “all options for all contingencies,” Hagel said, and “we have done that.”

“We are prepared. We have moved assets in place to be able to fulfill and comply with whatever option the president wishes to take,” Hagel said.

$2M bail set in death of WWII vet

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A 16-year-old Spokane boy was ordered held on $2 million bail Monday and will be tried as an adult in connection with last week's beating death of an 88-year-old World War II veteran. A second teen was arrested in the case early Monday morning.

Demetrius L. Glenn is charged with first-degree murder and first-degree robbery in Spokane County District Court, and made an initial court appearance Monday afternoon. The charges carry a potential life sentence.

District Judge Richard Leland, presiding over a packed courtroom, said the brutality of the attack and vulnerability of the victim make the high bail proper.

Glenn had turned himself in Thursday night, the same day Army veteran Delbert Belton died of his injuries.

The 2nd suspect sought slightly built youth gave yes and no answers to questions from the judge, but otherwise said nothing.

Defense attorney Chris Phelps noted after the hearing that the case has gone viral on the Internet, with many people expressing strong opinions.

“The evidence doesn't indicate what happened,” Phelps said, adding that eyewitnesses only reported “two kids running away.”

A second 16-year-old boy, Kenan Adams-Kinard, was arrested without incident early Monday on a warrant for first-degree murder and first-degree robbery. He has a court appearance scheduled for Tuesday and will also be tried as an adult.

Agencies at odds over probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is fighting with itself over a massive fire at a Chevron refinery in California that sent 15,000 people to hospitals with respiratory ailments.

In one corner is the U.S. Chemical Safety and Hazard Investigation Board, which conducted 119 interviews in an effort to find out what caused last year's accident and how to prevent it from happening again. In the other is the Environmental Protection Agency, which is conducting a criminal investigation and wants the interviews to help it determine who's responsible.

The 7-month-old document dispute has become so contentious that the safety board, headed by Rafael Moure-Eraso, went to court in an effort to quash grand jury subpoenas that federal prosecutors issued on behalf of the EPA, according to correspondence obtained by The Associated Press. Efforts to reach a compromise have failed so far.

The fight between the board and the EPA illustrates how two vital public priorities — promoting safety and punishing violators — can be at odds with each other. While bureaucratic turf battles are a way of life in government, it is unusual for such disagreements to result in a subpoena fight.

The chemical board does not conduct criminal investigations, but relies on cooperation from industry workers to carry out its mission of pinpointing the causes of accidents and recommending ways to avoid them. In contrast, the EPA has a division with 200 agents whose job it is to prosecute criminal conduct that threatens people's health and the environment.

The board "has been working diligently with the Department of Justice to seek alternatives to release of the Chevron accident witness statements," Moure-Eraso said in a statement. "Requiring the CSB to turn over these interviews and notes where they would be used to draft criminal charges and for prosecution purposes would likely have a devastating effect on our work."

The Aug. 6, 2012, accident at Chevron's Richmond refinery 10 miles northeast of San Francisco sent clouds of gas and black smoke billowing over residential neighborhoods. In the weeks after, some 15,000 people were sent to hospitals with breathing problems. Chevron has paid $10 million to settle 24,000 claims from residents and to compensate area hospitals and local government agencies.

According to a person familiar with the probe, the EPA is trying to determine the extent to which Chevron managers were aware of serious, widespread corrosion problems at the refinery and whether the managers chose not to replace aging pipes. The person, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, was not authorized to comment publicly about the matter.

Tax cut battle gets intense in Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Millions of dollars spent broadcasting ads. Alarming fliers and phone calls targeting homes. Politicians barnstorming from one press conference to the next.

The massive campaign is meant to persuade — or dissuade — a few wavering Missouri lawmakers who will decide in September whether to override the governor's veto of the state's first income tax cut in nearly a century.

The Missouri battle is one of the most intense yet in what has become a nationwide offensive by conservatives in state capitols to slice the income taxes that for decades have formed the financial foundation for government services ranging from public schools to prisons. They contend the tax cuts are the path to economic prosperity. Others forecast financial ruin.

Widows of Fort Hood slain describe lost moments

FORT HOOD, Texas (AP) — One of Angela Rivera's saving graces after her husband was gunned down at Fort Hood was his voicemail greeting. For years after Maj. Eduardo Caraveo was killed in 2009, Rivera had his cellphone kept active so she could call it and hear his voice telling her to leave a message.

Then, one day, it disappeared when the cellphone carrier upgraded its systems and required users to tape a new greeting.

Rivera was among a dozen widows and soldiers who provided a picture of overwhelming grief and attempts at recovery, as military prosecutors began to try to persuade a jury that Maj. Nidal Hasan deserves a death sentence. As many as seven more people will get their chance Tuesday to tell jurors how Hasan changed their lives forever.

Witnesses recalled the litany of moments, large and small, that remind them of what they lost: a voicemail greeting, a box of photos or the thought of a daughter's lonely walk down the aisle one day.

The jury of 13 military officers must be unanimous to condemn Hasan. Prosecutors will try to prove an aggravating factor — one possible factor under military law is the killing of multiple people — and present evidence to show the severity of Hasan's rampage at a medical building on this Texas Army post nearly four years ago.

Many of those who testified Monday talked about their biggest fear in the long hours after the shooting in the early afternoon of Nov. 5, 2009: the appearance of two soldiers at their doorstep, meaning their husband, parent or child was dead. Some said they waited more than 12 hours after Hasan shouted "Allahu Akbar!" and opened fire on unarmed soldiers. They tried in vain to call whatever phone numbers they could find.

Rivera described driving to the airport immediately after the shooting to pick up relatives. Her young son, John Paul, saw the airport and wondered if they were going to get his father.

"Ms. Rivera, how do you explain to a 2-year-old the concept of death?" asked Col. Mike Mulligan, the lead prosecutor.

"I couldn't do it," Rivera replied, adding that a therapist later helped her explain what happened.

Rivera identified her husband's former cellphone carrier as Sprint. A spokeswoman for Sprint did not return messages Monday afternoon about the voicemail greeting.

When Cindy Seager heard initial reports of a shooting at Fort Hood, she drove home hoping that she wouldn't see an unexpected car on her street. There wasn't one when she arrived.

But two officers came to her door at around 1 a.m., about 12 hours after the shooting. Her husband, Capt. Russell Seager, was dead.

About a dozen states already have cut income taxes this year, including sweeping changes to tax codes in Kansas and North Carolina and a ratcheting down of rates in Arkansas, Indiana, Ohio and Wisconsin. Conservative lawmakers who gathered at a conference this month in Chicago received a how-to pep talk meant to spread the tax-cutting movement even further in 2014.

"This is a national agenda — there's a lot of other people that have interest in trying to create jobs in America," said Travis Brown, a St. Louis-based lobbyist and convention speaker who has traveled to 29 states this year promoting lower income taxes.

Never Too Old to Restore Memory, Claims Creator of Medicare-Reimbursed Brain Health Breakthrough

Dr. Bresky offers new memory formula along with complimentary copy of ‘Four Pillars’ brain health protocol as part of national in-home trial

Tired of losing your car keys? Fed up with finding your TV remote control in the refrigerator... again?

For readers concerned about mind and memory problems, the cavalry is on the way in the form of a soft-spoken, medical doctor wielding a remarkable, patented memory compound.

Arnold Bresky, MD

Dr. Bresky is the man responsible for the legendary, Medicare-reimbursed brain tune-up protocol, Four Pillars of Brain Health.

For a limited time, a few lucky folks can test-drive Bresky's memory-boosting breakthrough, risk-free, as part of a national in-home trial.

‘Dramatic Memory Improvement!’

First developed in 1996 to treat a handful of desperate patients in a California hospital, his nine-point scientific protocol was later reimbursed by Medicare, and has since been used to help thousands of concerned patients, resulting in "significant, even dramatic memory improvement."

"In all my years as a pharmacist, working with physicians treating cognitive decline and memory loss, I have never seen more remarkable results than those by Dr. Bresky and his Four Pillars of Brain Health system," says well-known clinical pharmacist, Dr. Gene Steiner, PharmD, Sedona, Arizona.

"I have worked with neurologists, neurosurgeons, neuroscientist and cognitive psychologists from Harvard, Stanford, Scripps, Berkeley and UC Irvine, and none have a better grasp and understanding of the causes of cognitive decline and the solutions for turning it around and improving memory and overall brain health," adds Joshua Reynolds, author & cognitive researcher.

Bresky's acclaimed Four Pillars protocol consists of specific mental and physical activities, regular social interaction with others, and targeted brain nutrition obtained from food, and from a miraculous natural compound that may help "make old brains feel and function younger!" It's a scientific system that helps forgetful brains snap awake.

"If you can do all four, you may be on the path to a lifetime of optimal brain health and fitness," smiles Dr. Bresky.

What to Feed A Hungry Brain?

Dr. Bresky struggled with how best to adequately address the nutritional needs of an aging brain. In his experience, diet and food were not enough.

He contacted Dr. Gene Steiner whose research had led him to a clinically tested compound that had a surprisingly powerful effect on aging brains.

In studies, it helped enhance memory, concentration, and even improved mood and a feeling of well being. During randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled studies, clinicians witnessed a startling transformation.

Over a period of a few weeks, scientists observed the compound helping aging brains function more youthfully, helping match the speed, memory abilities and mental powers enjoyed by a group up to 15 years younger.

Elizabeth K. of Rochester, New York discovered it just in time. At the age of 54, her memory was declining at an "alarming rate."

Dr. Bresky developed a Medicare-reimbursed brain health protocol for seniors.

even my husband was impressed with my improved memory. And I am very happy with my renewed mental clarity and focus!"

The natural compound was put through the analytical grinder.

"It was subjected to the same rigorous FDA-approved cognitive function tests that are used in pharmaceutical drug trials — the gold standard," says Dr. Bresky.

"Then, it was peer-reviewed and published in the Journal of American Nutraceutical Association. It worked so well that participants reported an improvement in memory, mental clarity, concentration, and even mood in just 30 days!"

Drug Store Dilemma?

For many years, pharmacy customers would ask Dr. Steiner what he would recommend for mind and memory. "For years, I had nothing to offer them. Not until I found this natural compound was I willing to recommend anything," he says.

Now, Dr. Steiner can personally attest to its memory-boosting powers.

He was relocating to another state and was apprehensive about taking the state board of pharmacy jurisprudence examination, a daunting examination that tests a candidate's mastery of pharmacy law.

"There was lots of studying," says Dr. Steiner. "So, I began taking the natural compound two weeks prior to the test."

"I am happy to report that, at the age of 64, I passed the test with flying colors! The recall I experienced was near fantastic," laughs Dr. Steiner.

New Brain Cells... at Any Age!?

Dr. Bresky's theory that it is medically possible to grow new brain cells at any age was validated in a groundbreaking study by Princeton University scientist, Elizabeth Gould.

The Princeton study showed that neurogenesis, the growth of new brain cells, does, indeed, occur in several regions of the brain, a concept that had previously been thought impossible.

This comes as welcome news to Dr. Bresky who reports that the natural memory compound has been found to stimulate brain health and cognitive sharpness several ways.

"It helps increase blood flow to the brain, supplying it with more oxygen and vital nutrients," explains Dr. Bresky. Encouraging more oxygen and blood flow to the brain helps 'wake up' and recharge a tired, sluggish mind.

"It's like going outside and taking a breath of invigorating fresh air on a crisp, cool day," says Dr. Bresky.

He compares it to reading an eye chart at the optometrist's office with a new pair of glasses.

"Things seem to snap into focus. Your brain feels more crisp, sharp and clear," says Dr. Bresky.

A unique aspect of this compound is its ability to help increase neurotransmitter levels in the brain.

"Neurotransmitters are chemical messengers in the brain responsible for memory, concentration, alertness, even decision-making. They naturally get depleted with age and stress."

The compound also performs long overdue spring-cleaning in the brain.

Over the course of a lifetime, environmental toxins, and free radicals build up in the brain.

Brain-specific, broad-spectrum antioxidants found

naturally in the compound help fight neurotoxins.

If you are concerned about your failing memory, and your inability to stay focused and mentally alert, Dr. Arnold Bresky offers some free medical advice.

"Don't miss out on the best years of your life. If you don't take steps to address your mental decline, your future may be quite bleak. As a medical doctor who specializes in memory problems, I urge you to take action today to ensure a healthier, more joyful tomorrow remaining free to make decisions for yourself!"

From closet chaos to organized in five easy steps

What's behind your closet door? Orderly rows of shoes, stacks of folded T-shirts and hanging clothes arranged by color and season? Or do you have a situation that could be declared a national disaster? If the latter, you might ask the president for federal disaster relief funds, or you could just get organized.

Knowing you would feel guilty taking funds from tornado victims, here are simple steps to find calm in all that chaos. By the way, these same principles for organizing a clothes closet apply to linen or utility closets, too.

Mary Hunt

Step One: Remove Everything. This lets you see exactly the space you have to work with. Prepare to be shocked by the pile of stuff that came out of that closet.

Step Two: Now that you can see the light of day, give that closet a good cleaning from top to bottom. Follow with a fresh coat of white paint.

Step Three: Separate the items you removed. Most people hate this step because it means getting rid of everything you do not use or wear. But there's no way you could get all of this back into the closet, so buck up, and let's get this job done. Label three containers:

Keep: Put only items into this bin that you have worn or used at least twice in the past year. Be brutally harsh. If it doesn't fit today, it's not likely to fit any time soon. Get rid of it. If in doubt, do not put it into this bin.

Sell or Donate: Clothes and other items that are not right for you (as evidenced by the fact that you never wear them) but still have a useful life for someone else should go into this bin. What you consider ugly may be perfect to someone else. Take them to a consignment store or arrange soon to hold a yard sale. Consider donating your good used items to the Salvation Army or Goodwill. You may get a tax break, but more than that, you will feel good. Put all of these items in the garage or back of the car.

Throw Away: Clothes and shoes that are worn out, hopelessly stained, broken or in some other state of calamity go into this bin. Work quickly to ease the pain. Empty this bin often to keep the process moving.

Step Four: Divide the "Keep bin" by season, type and use. If possible, store out-of-season items in another place in your home. Next, separate your work or professional clothes from your casual attire. Now, divide each pile into common-wear and infrequent-wear, arranging them so the items you wear most often are the most handy.

Step Five: Use closet organizers. At the minimum you need a sturdy shoe rack, good hangers and shelves, in addition to your standard hanging rod. Investing in a few good organizational pieces will make organizing your closet — and keeping it organized — a snap!

Startups gain appeal as some Japan Inc. names fade

TOKYO (AP) — In a shabby back-alley office in Shibuya, a Tokyo district known for youth culture and tech ventures, defectors from corporate Japan are hard at work for a little-known company they fervently believe will be the country's next big manufacturing success.

Like a startup anywhere in the world, its bare bone setup crackles with an optimistic energy and urgent sense of purpose. What's different, for Japan, is that this startup's talent is drawn from the ranks of famous companies such as Mitsubishi, Michelin and Nissan.

Kohshi Kuwahara, 26, worked for more than two years at electronics giant Panasonic Corp. before hopping to Terra Motors Corp., a little-known venture that pays far less but is out to conquer the world with its stylish electric scooters. As with his colleagues at Terra, he resiled from the hidebound culture of big Japanese companies and felt a deep sense of frustration at their eclipse by rivals such as South Korea's Samsung and America's Apple.

"If you're stuck in a system that promotes just by seniority, it's living a slow death like animals on a farm," said Kuwahara. "I wanted to be in a tough competitive place."

Despite having some of the developed world's least hospitable conditions for starting a new business, Japan's "salaryman" culture of guaranteed lifetime employment at a household name corporation is no longer the unquestioned ideal.

Ventures are sprouting again after a decade marred by some high-profile failures and a striking aspect is their focus on manufacturing. Facebook and Google they are not. They are Sony and Toyota, all over again — but with young fresh faces.

Terra Motors founder and president Toru Tokushige, 43, said one sign of progress for startups is that these days they have no problems recruiting quality people.

A few years ago, all he could hire were what Japan categorized as the losers, those who had no hopes of getting hired at an established company. As Sony Corp. and other mainstream brands lose their luster, Terra is gaining a chance to shine.

Tokushige's 15 employees now hail from top-name companies, and the interns are enrolled in Hitotsubashi, one of Japan's top universities.

He acknowledges that plans for his tiny company to break into global markets still sound a little crazy by mainstream Japanese standards. But he believes his way of doing business is superior to bigger companies, where decision-making tends to be bureaucratic, slow and oriented toward avoiding risks.

Bo hints at love triangle as trial ends in China

JINAN, China (AP) — China's most sensational trial in decades ended with disgraced politician Bo Xilai hinting at a love triangle involving his wife and former right-hand man — both key witnesses against him — as he made last-ditch efforts to redeem his reputation.

The prosecution countered by saying Bo should be severely punished because he showed no remorse in the five-day corruption trial in the eastern city of Jinan that was aimed at capping a scandal set off by his wife's murder of a British businessman and resulting in Bo's purge from top posts and the Communist Party.

In testimony, Bo denounced both his wife, Gu Kailai, as crazy and his former police chief, Wang Lijun, as dishonest, as he has sought to portray himself as an official who worked too hard to scrutinize his family's affairs and who was surrounded by conniving, duplicitous people.

"He (Wang) was secretly in love with Gu Kailai, his emotions were tangled and he could not extricate himself," Bo told the court.

Prosecutors said Monday that the trial proceedings have shown adequate proof of Bo's guilt on charges of netting $4.3 million through bribes and embezzlement and abuse of power in interfering with the murder investigation. A date for the verdict has not been given. The corruption charges carry a maximum penalty of death, though many observers believe his sentence will be in the range of 20 years' imprisonment.

In this June 5 photo, laborers work to renovate the Sunder Nursery in New Delhi. The renovation is intended to serve as the catalyst for an even more ambitious project: The creation of a mammoth, iconic park that would rival New York's Central Park as a refuge from urban chaos. It would be 1,200 acres, considerably larger than Central Park.

Dreamers work to create huge new park in Delhi

NEW DELHI (AP) — In a tangle of forgotten, overgrown brush in the heart of India's capital, a quiet plan has been hatched to change the landscape of one of the world's most populous cities.

An intricate Mughal garden is being created. Crumbling sandstone tombs nearly lost to history are being rebuilt. An artificial lake is being carved out. The renovation of Sunder Nursery is intended to serve as the catalyst for an even more ambitious project: the creation of a mammoth, iconic park that would rival New York's Central Park as a refuge from urban chaos.

"It would be the place where the city descends. It would be an oasis," said Ratish Nanda, project director for the Aga Khan Trust for Culture, and the driving force behind the dream of a mega-park.

To create that park would require the merger of a string of adjoining gardens, heritage areas and a zoo administered by different government agencies, an incredibly complicated task in a land where bureaucratic turfs are fiercely protected. And though some officials are beginning to discuss the plan, no formal proposal has been formulated.

But sometimes in India, it takes tenacious dreamers like Nanda to achieve the seemingly impossible.

Nanda and the Aga Khan Trust have taken on seemingly impossible tasks before. They helped wrest a 17-acre compound in the area, along with a large monument, from India's version of the Boy Scouts. They are currently fighting with railways officials to get them to remove a storeroom blocking access to another monument.

The payoff would be considerable. Delhi, with a population of about 17 million, is a surprisingly green city, with small parks dotting many neighborhoods and Lodhi Gardens — with a clutch of crumbling monuments of its own — attracting speed walkers and picnickers in upscale south Delhi.

The mega-park would tower over them all.

It would be 1,200 acres, considerably larger than Central Park. It would have 100,000 trees of more than 300 species, Nanda said. It would encompass one of the most impressive collections of medieval Islamic monuments, anchored by the grandiose tomb of Emperor Humayun, a 16th Century prototype for the Taj Mahal. It would have an ancient fort, a Buddhist stupa, flocks of exotic birds and white tigers in the zoo.

Palestinians say round of talks halted after clash

QALANDIA REFUGEE CAMP, West Bank (AP) — Palestinian officials said they called off a planned round of peace talks Monday after Israeli soldiers killed three protesters during clashes following an arrest raid in the West Bank.

But in comments that suggested the meeting had gone ahead as planned, State Department deputy spokeswoman Marie Harf said that "no meetings have been canceled. We've been clear that the two parties are engaged in serious and sustained negotiations."

Israeli officials refused to comment.

The violence, the deadliest incident in the area in years, dealt a new blow to U.S.-led peace efforts, which resumed late last month after a nearly five-year break. Palestinian officials have accused the Israelis of stonewalling and using the process as a cover to build new Jewish settlements. The deaths of Palestinians further soured the atmosphere.

It was not known when talks will resume, but Palestinian officials said the break was expected to be brief. They spoke anonymously as they were not authorized to talk to media.

Monday's clashes broke out when Israeli forces entered the Qalandia refugee camp, just outside of Jerusalem, on an overnight arrest raid.

Pakistan Taliban attack army camp

DERA ISMAIL KHAN, Pakistan (AP) — Security officials say Pakistani Taliban fighters have attacked an army camp near the Afghan border, killing at least one soldier.

The officials said Tuesday that four militants tried to enter the camp in Pakistan's South Waziristan tribal area around midnight, triggering a shootout with soldiers. Three militants were shot and killed and the fourth, wearing an explosive-rigged vest, blew himself up.

There were conflicting reports about the death toll. One set of security officials said one soldier was killed, while another said two soldiers died and nine were wounded.

The officials spoke on condition of anonymity in line with military policy.

A Taliban spokesman, Asimullah Mehsud, claimed responsibility for the attack.

Beavers pick Mannion for QB

BY KEVIN HAMPTON
Corvallis Gazette-Times

CORVALLIS — After getting asked about the quarterback situation day after day, Oregon State coach Mike Riley decided to start the post-practice meeting with the media with a similar greeting every day.

Riley would announce there was no new news on the starting spot.

That came to an end on Monday. Riley announced that the Beavers are going to go with Sean Mannion as the starting quarterback.

Cody Vaz will be the backup.

“It’s great to have both of these guys,” Riley said.

Neither quarterback was able to comment as players are only available to the media on Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

Mannion has quite a bit of game experience and a lively arm.

He fits in well with OSU’s multiple pro-style offense.

“Sean’s attributes are obviously his strength (and) his ability to get the ball just about wherever you want it on the field,” Riley said. “Those are big, key ingredients for him along with his knowledge of what we’re doing and where he should go with the ball.”

The decision was a long time in the making.

Both players brought a lot to the table as starters last season and they each played well during the competition.

“We went through a lot of different things about it for a long period of time and had a hard time, at that point still, separating them. And that’s good,” Riley said. “We made a decision going forward and we’re excited about it.”

Mannion started 10 games in 2011 and eight last season. He has 5,774 passing yards with 31 touchdowns in his career. He also has 31 interceptions.

Vaz had five starts in 2012. He threw for 1,480 yards and 11 scores with three interceptions last year.

He was also the starter for the Alamo Bowl.

“We’ve got two starting quarterbacks,” offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach Danny Langsdorf said. “I think that’s the one thing about it that’s unique to a lot of teams. We’ve got guys that we can win with.”

Riley said he focused on the football side and didn’t worry about issues such as how much eligibility each player has left.

Mannion is a junior and Vaz a senior.

“We tried to keep all those things out of it,” Riley said. “Sure, we take previous knowledge, years, spring practice, all that, we put it all in.”

Langsdorf said the coaching staff had a plan and stuck with it throughout the process.

They evaluated Mannion and Vaz through spring practice and fall camp.

Schools will host athlete nights

THE WORLD

Three South Coast high schools are introducing their fall athletes to the public at special events this week, in advance of the first action of the fall sports season on Friday.

Reedsport will host Meet the Braves tonight, while North Bend holds its fall Meet the Bulldogs night Wednesday and Marshfield’s Meet the Pirates night is Thursday.

There is no admission fee for any of the events.

Meet the Braves

Reedsport’s event starts in the school at 6 p.m. tonight.

The coaches will introduce the cheer and volleyball teams inside the gym and then head outside to introduce the football team.

The cheerleaders will do a few cheers and then the volleyball teams will have a short scrimmage inside. The football team also will have a short scrimmage.

Watermelon will be provided after the event.

Meet the Bulldogs

North Bend’s event begins with a hamburger feed sponsored by the North Bend Booster Club that runs from 5 to 6 p.m. at Vic Adams Field. Meals for $5 include a hamburger, chips, soda and a dessert.

Introductions begin at 6 p.m. at the football field, starting with coaches, administrators and booster club officers followed, in order, by the band, cheer, girls soccer, boys soccer, cross country, volleyball and football teams.

Meet the Pirates

Marshfield’s athlete night also begins with a Booster Club barbecue at 5 p.m. in Pete Susick Stadium.

Before the athletes are introduced, several scrimmages will be held.

The freshman and junior varsity volleyball teams scrimmage at 5:15 at Harding Gym, adjacent to the football stadium.

The freshman and JV football teams will scrimmage at 5:30 inside the stadium, with the varsity volleyball team scrimmaging at 5:35 in Harding Gym.

A soccer scrimmage starts at 6 p.m. in the stadium.

The cheer and dance teams perform at 6:20 p.m., followed by the band playing the national anthem at 6:30.

Introductions start at 6:40, beginning with the band, followed, in order, by the cross country, cheer, dance, boys soccer, girls soccer, volleyball and football teams.

The final scrimmage, for the varsity football team, starts at 7:10 p.m.

Season starts

The first football games of the season are Friday night.

North Bend hosts Molalla, while Gold Beach is home for Salem Academy and Scio visits Siuslaw in a trio of games that all start at 7 p.m.

Coquille hosts Reedsport and Bandon in a jamboree that starts with the Braves and Tigers at 5 p.m. and Marshfield is at the Junction City jamboree starting at 6 p.m.

In other sports, Powers visits Riddle in volleyball Thursday and North Bend’s girls soccer team hosts Hidden Valley at 1 p.m. Saturday in a matchup of two top teams from last season.

U.S. Open

Venus Williams returns a shot to Belgium’s Kirsten Flipkens during their first-round match at the U.S. Open on Monday.

Williams sisters win opening matches

NEW YORK (AP) — A decade or so ago, Serena and Venus Williams ruled tennis together, swapping the No. 1 ranking and meeting in Grand Slam final after Grand Slam final.

Serena, the younger of the two, still holds a spot at the top of the game.

Venus has not been there for quite some time.

So there was a turn-back-the-clock feel to Day 1 at the 2013 U.S. Open, when both sisters were about as good as can be, dropping a combined four games in Arthur Ashe Stadium. Venus, now ranked 60th, beat 12th-seeded Kirsten Flipkens 6-1, 6-2 Monday afternoon, and then Serena reduced 2010 French Open champion Francesca Schiavone to seeking comfort from a ball boy’s hug during a 6-0, 6-1 runaway under the lights at night.

Asked which meant more on this day, her own victory or her sister’s, Serena replied: “They’re equal. I definitely was happy to see Venus win. I really was happy for her. I know she’s been working hard. I know she had a tough opponent. For her to come through was just awesome. Obviously, I want to do well, too.”

For years and years, a first-round victory by Venus at a major tournament would hardly merit a mention. She has won seven Grand Slam titles and was the runner-up another seven times (six against Serena).

And yet nowadays, at age 33, two years removed from being diagnosed with an autoimmune disease that saps energy, hampered much of this season by a bad lower back, Venus entered this U.S. Open having won a total of three matches over the past five major tournaments. Plus, in Flipkens, she was facing a semifinalist at Wimbledon last month who beat Venus on a hard court this month.

Looking very much like the player she used to be, Venus smacked serves at up to 120 mph, returned superbly, and covered the court well enough to hit a handful of swinging volley winners.

“If Venus is there — if she’s fit, if she’s focused — she’s a top-10 player,” Flipkens said. “Everybody who knows a little bit of the game of tennis can see that. Today, she was like a top-10 player.”

There were bumpy patches early in the second set, when Venus faced eight break points, but she saved seven. At 2-all, Venus faced her final significant test, a 16-point, 12-minute game with three break chances for Flipkens that were erased this way: 113 mph ace, 115 mph service winner, 116 mph serve that set up an errant forehand. As that shot from Flipkens sailed long, Venus shouted, “Come on!” Venus won the next point, a 15-stroke exchange, with a volley winner and shook her left fist.

On a day that began with a retirement announcement by James Blake — a former top-five player who also is 33 — Venus showed she’s still capable of big shots at big moments.

“I stay positive because I know I can play great tennis. Sometimes you just have to go through more than what you want to go through,” the American said after winning the first four games and the last four games against Belgium’s Flipkens. “Sometimes you have to have losses.”

She was No. 1 in 2002, but hasn’t cracked the top 10 since she was No. 9 in March 2011.

She hasn’t been past the third round at a Grand Slam tournament since a fourth-round exit at Wimbledon later that year. Indeed, Venus lost in the first round in two of her previous four appearances at majors.

Her match was the day’s second in the main stadium, and owing perhaps to the early hour — or the stricter security measures, including new metal detectors, that led to long delays for spectators entering the grounds — there were thousands of empty blue seats in the 23,000-capacity arena.

The place was full for the night session, however, when the No. 1-ranked and top-seeded Serena won the first eight games, prompting Schiavone, in a brief moment of levity, to walk behind a baseline and envelope a ball boy in a full embrace.

“I don’t need a hug in that moment,” Schiavone joked afterward. “I need a game.”

It was that kind of evening for Schiavone, an often-demonstrative player who is certainly no pushover: In addition to her triumph at Roland Garros three years ago, she was the runner-up there a year later, and twice was a U.S. Open quarterfinalist. Ranked as high as No. 4, she is 54th this week.

“I knew playing a former Grand Slam champion in the first round was a really, really tough draw,” Serena said, “so I tried to be super serious.”

All told, the match took merely an hour. And it ended right in time, as far as Serena was concerned, because a light rain began to fall at the finish.

Russian player completes comeback from cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — Alisa Kleybanova of Russia won her first Grand Slam match since being treated for cancer, beating 44th-ranked Monica Puig of Puerto Rico 6-4, 3-6, 7-5 on Monday at the U.S. Open.

The 24-year-old Kleybanova was ranked as high as 20th, but after missing much of the last two seasons because of her illness is now 363rd. She entered the main draw at Flushing Meadows thanks to the WTA’s special ranking rule.

Until Monday, she hadn’t played in a Grand Slam in 2 1/2 years.

“I’m just taking it step by step, enjoying it every day, trying to improve as much as I can, and play my best tennis,” Kleybanova said.

After being diagnosed in the spring of 2011 with Hodgkin’s lymphoma, a form of blood cancer, Kleybanova announced she was sick via the WTA’s website on July 15 that year — her 22nd birthday. She underwent chemotherapy until December 2011.

“Everything is a little bit new for me right now, so I’m just trying to feel everything and try to deal with things as well as I can for the moment,” she said.

The 44th-ranked Puig, who cracked the top 50 after reaching the fourth round at Wimbledon, said it was hard to tell Kleybanova had been ill.

“She was a top-20 for a reason,” Puig said. “It’s amazing to see how she has come back from that, and be able to play at such a level. Definitely, I won’t be surprised to see her at the top.”

Lee lifts Phillies to win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP) — Philadelphia's Cliff Lee out-pitched Zack Wheeler after the Mets learned All-Star starter Matt Harvey has a partially torn ligament in his right elbow, Cody Asche had a two-run triple, and the Phillies beat New York 2-1 Monday night.

Lee (11-3) gave a bullpen taxed by an 18-inning loss Saturday a much-needed rest. He allowed a run and five hits in eight innings to win for the first time in seven starts since July 5.

Asche hit his first major league triple — with two outs in the fourth — as the Phillies improved to 7-4 under new manager Ryne Sandberg and won for the second time in 15 road games.

Dodgers 6, Cubs 2: Zack Greinke came within one strike of his fifth career shutout, Hanley Ramirez and Yasiel Puig homered, and the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Chicago Cubs, ending a two-game skid.

The Cubs lost for the eighth straight time to the Dodgers, including a four-game sweep at Wrigley Field earlier this month. The Dodgers equaled their longest winning streak against the Cubs in franchise history, set from June 9, 1974-May 19, 1975.

Greinke (13-3) tied his season high with nine strikeouts and he walked two while improving to 5-0 this month. The right-hander has won 10 of 11 decisions since June 22.

Greinke had a two-out hit in the fourth that scored the Dodgers' first run.

grand slam with two outs in the seventh inning, helping St. Louis rally to beat Cincinnati.

Matt Holliday also had a long three-run homer as St. Louis moved into sole possession of first place in the NL Central for the first time since July 29. The Cardinals lead idle Pittsburgh by a half-game and Cincinnati by 3½ games.

Rookie Carlos Martinez (1-1) pitched two innings for his first major league win, and Edward Mujica worked a perfect ninth for his 35th save.

Rockies 6, Giants 1: Todd Helton homered to move within three hits of 2,500, and Colorado beat San Francisco.

Juan Nicasio tossed six shutout innings and added an RBI single, and Charlie Blackmon also homered for the Rockies.

Buster Posey singled and reached base for the 49th straight game against Colorado.

The Giants spoiled the shutout attempt on Joaquin Arias' two-out RBI double off Jeff Francis in the ninth.

Arizona 6, Padres 1: Brandon McCarthy turned in seven strong innings, and Paul Goldschmidt drove in two runs to lead Arizona over San Diego.

After a shaky first inning, the 6-foot-7 McCarthy (3-8) allowed only four runners over his final six innings. It was his first win since he beat San Diego on May 28.

Goldschmidt stretched his NL-leading RBI total to 103 with his first triple of the season and a ground out.

Blue Jays end skid at 10 games

TORONTO — R.A. Dickey pitched into the seventh inning, Jose Reyes sparked Toronto's offense and the Blue Jays snapped a 10-game losing streak against the New York Yankees with a 5-2 victory on Monday night.

Alex Rodriguez hit his 650th home run, a leadoff drive in the fifth, but the Yankees lost for the ninth time in 13 road games this month. Rodriguez is 10 homers away from tying Willie Mays for fourth on the career list, which would secure a $6 million bonus for the third baseman.

Derek Jeter went hitless in his return to New York's lineup. Jeter, who had been out with a calf injury, finished 0 for 3 with a walk.

Reyes walked and scored in the third, and doubled and scored in Toronto's three-run fifth as the Blue Jays beat the Yankees for just the second time in 14 meetings this season.

Athletics 8, Tigers 6: Coco Crisp and Daric Barton each drove in two runs, leading Oakland past Miguel Cabrera and Detroit.

Cabrera hit his 43rd homer, bolstering his pursuit of another Triple Crown, but Barton had a tiebreaking RBI single in Oakland's two-run sixth inning. Crisp also had a solo homer during his three-hit performance.

A.J. Griffin (11-9) earned his first win since July 29 despite allowing four runs and seven hits in five-plus innings. The right-hander was 0-2 with a 3.47 ERA in his previous four starts.

Royals 8, Rays 1: Jeremy Guthrie tossed five effective innings, helping Kansas City roll to the victory in the makeup of a snowed-out game from early May.

Guthrie (13-10) allowed one run and six hits, struck out five and walked three. He fanned Kelly Johnson with two aboard to end the third inning, and then struck out David DeJesus on a called third strike to leave the bases loaded in the fourth.

Jeremy Hellickson (10-8) allowed five runs in just 2 2-3 innings for Tampa Bay. It was the right-hander's shortest start since June 30, 2012, when he went the same distance in a game against Detroit before getting pelted in the leg by a line drive.

Rangers 8, Mariners 3: A.J. Pierzynski hit a three-run homer for Texas, and Mitch Moreland had a solo shot.

Alex Rios had two hits and two RBIs as the Rangers picked up their fifth win in seven games. Elvis Andrus celebrated his 25th birthday with three hits and an RBI.

Kyle Seager hit his 20th home run of the season for the Mariners, who have lost four in a row.

Astros 10, White Sox 8: Matt Dominguez hit a tiebreaking homer with two outs in the ninth inning and Chris Carter followed with his second homer of the game, powering Houston to the win.

The Astros squandered a five-run lead and trailed 8-7 before Carter hit a tying RBI single in the seventh.

Carter finished 3 for 4 with the two homers and four RBIs in his third career multi-homer game.

"We said we were going to wait through fall camp," Langsdorf said. "We said that last winter and we followed through with that and told the kids that and they had to compete every day and I think that was good for them and good for our team."

The final decision was made over the weekend.

The players were notified of the decision on Monday morning before meetings.

"I talked to them both last week about continuing to compete and told them that we were closing in (on a decision) but we were going to continue to evaluate all the way to the weekend and they knew that last week," Langsdorf said. "I told them that they would know as we got into preparation for Eastern (Washington) on Monday. So there was no surprise there."

Both players have done so well that it made the final call a tough one.

"Pretty hard because it's so close," Langsdorf said. "You have both guys playing very well. It's not like we've had one completely separate from the other. They've both played very good football and have played very good football all the way to last year."

Washington explores Olympic bid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The nation's capital is making a push for the 2024 Olympic Games.

Organizers announced Tuesday the formation of DC 2024, aimed at bringing the Summer Games to the United States for the first time since Atlanta hosted in 1996.

DC 2024 president Bob Sweeney calls Washington "the safest and most secure city in the world." He pointed out that the largest expense of any Olympics is security, and that D.C. has it "built in to our everyday life here in Washington."

The bid has a long way to go. Washington was one of 35 U.S. cities to receive a letter from the U.S. Olympic Committee to gauge interest, and Sweeney expects about 10 to step forward as serious candidates.

Los Angeles, which hosted the 1932 and 1984 Olympics, Philadelphia and Tulsa, Okla., have announced their interest. San Diego wants to host a cross-border Olympics with Mexican neighbor Tijuana. Other potential 2024 contenders from around the world include Paris; Rome; Doha, Qatar; and a city in South Africa.

The 2024 Games will be awarded by international vote in 2017.

Elbow injury puts Mets ace on the sidelines

NEW YORK — Matt Harvey has a partially torn ligament in his right elbow, a potentially devastating injury for the pitcher that had given the foundering New York Mets reason to be hopeful about their future.

For now, the 24-year-old Harvey and the Mets hope that he will be able to avoid reconstruction surgery on the ulnar collateral ligament. A full prognosis will not be made until swelling in the elbow goes down in about two weeks.

The National League's All-Star game starter on his home field this July, Harvey has been experiencing forearm tenderness for a month or two but could not pinpoint exactly when it began. The discomfort increased during his start Saturday against the Detroit Tigers, when he allowed a career-high 13 hits.

Mets manager Terry Collins didn't know Harvey had any issues with his forearm until Sunday and the ace went for an MRI at the Hospital for Special Surgery a day later.

NFL hands suspension to Jets RB Goodson

NEW YORK — New York Jets running back Mike Goodson was suspended by the NFL for the first four games of the season for violating the league's substance abuse policy.

Goodson, signed as a free agent in the offseason, rejoined the team after being away all of training camp for personal reasons that the Jets declined to detail.

The NFL said in a statement announcing the suspension that Goodson will be eligible to return to the Jets' active roster on Sept. 30, a day after the team's game against the Tennessee Titans.

Minnesota fullback gets three-game suspension

MINNEAPOLIS — Adrian Peterson's lead blocker will be missing from the Minnesota Vikings for their first three regular season games.

Pro Bowl fullback Jerome Felton has received a three-game suspension for violating the NFL's policy on substance abuse. No details were disclosed, per the NFL's confidentiality agreement with the players' union.

Felton was drafted by Detroit in the fifth round in 2008 out of Furman but bounced between three teams over his first four years in the league until his breakthrough last season with the Vikings, when Peterson rushed for 2,097 yards and won the Most Valuable Player award.

Felton then signed a three-year contract with the club in March worth as much as $7.5 million, including $2 million guaranteed.

McGrady retires after 16 seasons in NBA

NEW YORK — Tracy McGrady says he is retiring from the NBA.

The seven-time All-Star announced his decision on ESPN and Twitter. McGrady spent 16 seasons in the NBA playing for the Raptors, Magic, Rockets, Knicks, Pistons and Hawks. He finished his career last season by signing with the San Antonio Spurs late in the year.

After being drafted by Toronto out of high school in 1997, McGrady averaged 19.6 points, 5.6 rebounds and 4.4 assists per game in a career that was curtailed by injuries.

He delivered his finest individual season in 2002-03, winning his first scoring title with 32.1 points while averaging 6.5 rebounds, 5.5 assists and 1.7 steals in a tour-de-force season that ended with a first-round exit at the hands of the Pistons.

Bills pick rookie for quarterback

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Passed over in the NFL draft in April, quarterback Jeff Tuel settled on signing with the Buffalo Bills a few days later with the sole objective of cracking the team's roster.

As of Monday, the raw rookie out of Washington State is in line to start in the Bills' season opener against New England Sept. 8.

"I came here to play football, and that's what I'm doing," Tuel said. "It just explains, you can never expect. You never know what's going to happen in this league.

"It's why you've got to be ready."

Tuel is in this position because of a string of injuries that have hit the Bills' quarterback position.

Veteran Kevin Kolb is out indefinitely after sustaining a concussion — the third of his seven-year career — in a 30-7 loss to Washington on Saturday. Then there's rookie first-round pick EJ Manuel, who might not be ready to play because he's still recovering from a left knee injury he hurt in a 20-16 win over Minnesota a week earlier.

Buffalo Bills quarterback Jeff Tuel throws to a receiver in the first half of a preseason game against the Washington Redskins on Saturday. Injuries have forced the Bills to go with the former Washington State quarterback as their starter for the season opener next week.

Leinart on Sunday, but the 2004 Heisman Trophy winner needs time to become familiar with the offense.

Should Tuel start against New England, he would be the first undrafted rookie directly out of college to start in Week 1 for any team since the NFL merger in 1970, according to STATS LLC.

This is not exactly what rookie coach Doug Marrone envisioned when he intended to have his starter in place within 10 days of the season.

"Well, I don't know if I'd use the word crazy," Marrone said. "But I would say a little bit of adversity, for sure."

And that wasn't the only unsettling news to greet the Bills, who returned to practice in preparing for their preseason finale against Detroit Thursday.

the U.S. Open, they would set up an all-Williams quarterfinal.

That seems a long way away at the moment. So does the stretch when they played each other in four consecutive Grand Slam finals in 2002-03.

"I realize that I haven't had a lot of chances to play this year or a lot of chances to play healthy this year, have had injuries and what have you, so I'm just going to have to keep working my way into it, maybe more than some of the other players," Venus said. "But I know I can do that."

LABOR DAY?

WHAT IS?

Every year, on the first Monday in September, the U.S. and Canada observe a holiday. Many get the day off from their jobs. Children get the day off from school. On Labor Day, (Labour Day in Canada) we honor working people and the dignity of labor.

The first Labor Day was held just over 100 years ago in New York City.

To labor means to work. In 1882, many kinds of workers lived in New York City. There were carpenters, bricklayers, furniture-makers, jewelers, printers and more.

While they were proud of their work and what they made, many laborers were unhappy with their long hours, unsafe workplaces and low pay. Many worked seven days a week and 12 or 14 hours a day. Pay was so low that even young children had to work.

This year's Labor Day parade is off to a strange start. Find at least 10 things wrong in this picture.

Standards Link: Visual Discrimination.

WORKING FOR CHANGE

In the 1880s, New York workers formed groups called craft unions. Bricklayers had their own union. The carpenters had theirs and so did the printers. After a while, these small unions formed a larger union called the Knights of Labor. The Knights of Labor fought for workers' rights. Their "weapons" were words and votes. They fought to get children out of the factories and the mines. They fought for better pay and safer working environments.

THE FIRST LABOR DAY

In 1882, a New York City union called the Central Labor Union (C.L.U.) decided to hold a parade and picnic for workers on September 5. The parade would be a chance for workers to show off their work. More than 10,000 marchers showed up that day. Thousands more watched the parade. Many of the people carried signs that told what the workers wanted to change.

Workers all over the country liked the idea of a workers' holiday. By the 1930s every state in the U.S. celebrated Labor Day.

Today we celebrate Labor Day to remember that working people help make our country strong. All workers are important!

Standards Link: History/Social Science: Students understand working conditions and the rise of the labor movement including bargaining, strikes and protests over labor conditions. Reading Comprehension: Follow simple directions.

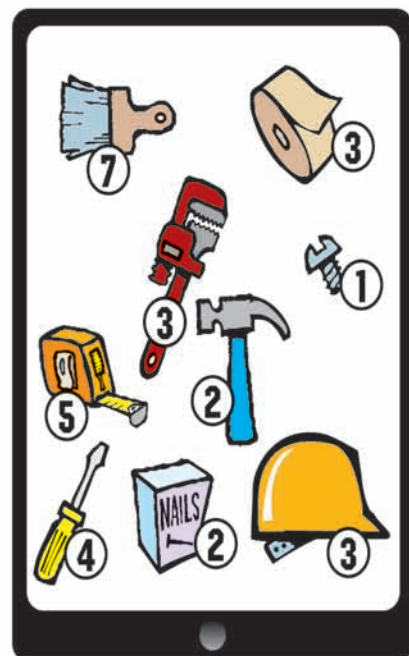

Use the letters above to complete the messages on the signs from the 1880s.

Where in The World? — Southern California

A splashing good time

Recently we've had Where in The World? photos taken on the back of a camel, and now on a thrill ride at Disneyland. I love the creativity. Trish McMichael sent us this narrative about her trip to Southern California: "I have attached photos of my family during our trip in June to California. One is my family on top of Hotel St. Laurens, on Catalina Island (center). My husband, Kyle McMichael, my aunt Susan McGough who lives in Santa Monica, myself, my son Nathan Midyette and my daughter Emily Midyette. We had a lovely breakfast of crepes with fresh California strawberries at The Pancake Cottage located in downtown Avalon on Catalina Island which is the photo of food (bottom). The owner, Muriel Wilhite, served us herself. She actually sat down on the bench next to my aunt and chatted while taking our order. When my aunt asked her what she recommended she said, 'Honey...it's all good!' It was perfect!" "The other photo is of us riding Splash Mountain (the order is Emily Midyette, Nathan Midyette, Trish McMichael, Kyle McMichael, Susan McGough, and a random stranger who said he was OK with his photo being in our local paper). Our family tradition is to have lunch at the Blue Bayou. We had salmon, jambalaya and monte cristo sandwiches with mint juleps. You can't beat the bayou atmosphere and hearing people scream 'Dead Men tell no tales!'"

Where in The World?

If you are going on vacation, take an edition of The World with you. When you find yourself in a picturesque spot as the McMichaels did in California, snap your family/group with the paper. Then, when you visit a local restaurant, get a picture of your meal.

Send the vital information: your name and hometown, the city you visited, the restaurant, who was in your group, what you ordered and what you liked about the meal. Photos can be emailed to twphoto@theworldlink.com as .jpg-format attachments.

Beer can chicken may be the easiest way EVER to make a whole chicken, but have you ever thought about cooking one low and slow? Here's a recipe in case you had.

A popular classic based on science

By W. WAYT GIBBS
The Associated Press

You may not find too many restaurant chefs plopping their poultry on cans of PBR, but all those tailgaters and beachside grillers are on to something.

There are solid scientific reasons that chicken really does roast better in a more upright, lifelike pose than when it is flat on its soggy back. And by adding a couple of extra prep steps to the technique and taking your care with the temperature, you can get the best of both worlds: succulent, juicy meat and crispy, golden brown skin.

On top of all that, you get to drink the beer! The chicken doesn't actually need it.

Beer-can chicken recipes are everywhere on the Internet, but most of them don't address the two biggest challenges of roasting poultry. The first is to avoid overcooking the meat. Nothing is more disappointing at a Labor Day cookout than to bite into a beautiful-looking chicken breast only to end up with a mouthful of woody fiber that seems to suck the saliva right out of your glands.

The solution to this first challenge is simple: take your time, measure the temperature correctly and frequently, and choose the right target for the core temperature (as measured at the deepest, densest part of the thigh). When you cook the bird slowly, the heat has more time to kill any nasty bacteria living in the food, so you don't have to cook the heck out of thing.

The federal government recommends bringing the meat to 165 F for at least 15 seconds. But guidelines issued by the USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service show that 35 minutes at 140 F achieves the same degree of pasteurization, even in the fattiest chicken.

The recipe below calls for several hours in the oven and a core temperature of 145 F to 150 F, which will meet those guidelines as long as you slow-cook the bird at a low temperature. But be sure you use a reliable, oven-safe thermometer and place it properly as directed in the recipe. The tip shouldn't be touching or near any bone.

The second challenge that most beer-can chicken recipes fail to overcome is crisping the skin. Here, liquid

9 ways to great flavor — marinades made easy

BY ALISON LADMAN
The Associated Press

Marinades are one of the simplest ways to add fast and easy flavor to your meals. Combine a few ingredients in a zip-close plastic bag, add your meat, seafood or veggies, then walk away for a while.

We've outlined some basic marinades below to help get you started, as well as some suggestions of what you can use them for. But the truth is, marinades are so versatile and easy to use, you can substitute whatever your favorite ingredients are or anything you happen to have on hand.

These marinades are enough to cover 1½ pounds of food. Double up as needed, but keep in mind that you don't need the food to swim in the marinade, just be thoroughly coated. Once the food has soaked up the flavor, you can pan-fry it, grill it or broil it.

- Citrus marinades
- Citrus juices are fairly acidic, which means they permeate and tenderize food quickly. They work great as a base for marinades that you want to throw together just before dinner. These marinades work equally well for seafood as they do chicken or steak. For seafood, marinate for up to 30 minutes; chicken and steak can handle up to 2 hours.
- Chipotle-lime: Juice and zest of 2 limes, 2 tablespoons adobo sauce and 1 minced chipotle chili from a can of chipotles in adobo sauce, 2 cloves minced garlic, a hefty pinch of salt. Great on flank steak or shrimp.
 - Orange-cumin: Juice and zest of 1 orange, 1 tablespoon ground cumin, 1 teaspoon chili powder, 1 teaspoon garlic powder, a hefty pinch of salt. Try with had-dock or chicken breasts.
 - Lemon-herb: Juice and
- zest of 1 lemon, 1 tablespoon Italian herb blend, 1 teaspoon ground black pepper, hefty pinch of salt. Good on salmon or chicken thighs.
- Vinaigrette marinades
- Because vinegar is so aggressive, you'll want to temper it with oil. This helps carry the flavor into the food, as well as prevent the flavors from becoming too jarring. Adding oil to vinegar also gives you a bit of leeway in your timing. For fish, seafood and vegetables, marinate for 30 minutes and to up to 2 hours. For chicken, steak and pork, you can go for up to 8 hours.
- Garlic-balsamic: 2 tablespoons olive oil, 2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar, 4 cloves minced garlic, hefty pinch salt. Try with pork loin or steak tips.
 - Spicy hoisin: 2 tablespoons rice vinegar, 2 tablespoons hoisin sauce, 1 tablespoon vegetable oil, 1 teaspoon red pepper flakes, 1

Clockwise from top, marinades of orange ginger, white wine mustard, lemon herb and garlic balsamic. At center is maple soy.

- teaspoon five-spice powder. Try on chicken tenders or scallops.
- Maple-soy: 2 tablespoons soy sauce, 3 tablespoons apple cider vinegar, 2 tablespoons maple syrup. Try with pork tenderloin medallions or cod.
- Wine marinades
- Wine is a great base for subtle marinades. Because they have a softer flavor than citrus or vinegar, you can use them to highlight other flavors.
- White wine-mustard: ¼ cup dry white wine, 3 tablespoons Dijon mustard, 1 tablespoon vegetable oil, hefty pinch each salt and black pepper. Great with chicken thighs or eggplant.
 - Raspberry-ginger: ¼ cup sweet red wine, ¼ cup seedless raspberry jam, 1 tablespoon vegetable oil, 2 tablespoons grated fresh ginger, hefty pinch each salt and black pepper. Try on pork chops or chicken breasts.
 - Red wine-rosemary: ¼ cup red wine, 1 tablespoon olive oil, hefty pinch each of salt and black pepper, 1 large stem rosemary, chopped. Try with sirloin steak or portobello mushrooms.

TRUSTEE'S NOTICE OF SALE

This Trustee's Notice of Sale is made with respect to that certain Trust Deed having Robin L. McComas as Grantor, Key Title Company, an Oregon corporation, as Trustee, and Glenn Felder and Shirley Felder, or the survivor thereof, as Beneficiary, dated June 23, 1997, and recorded on August 11, 1997, in the real property records of Coos County, Oregon, as instrument no. 97-08-0456. Said Trust Deed shall hereinafter be referred to as the "Trust Deed." The real property subject to said Trust Deed is legally described as follows:

The East 100 Feet of Lots 12 and 13, Block 17, Charleston, Coos County, Oregon.

(Tax Account No. 566803)

Both the Beneficiary and the Trustee have elected to sell the above described real property to satisfy the obligations secured by the Trust Deed and a Notice of Default and Election to Sell has been recorded pursuant to Oregon Revised Statutes 86.735(3). The default for which foreclosure by advertisement and sale is made is Grantor's failure to pay when due the following sums:

The sum of $1,196.26 together with interest thereon at the rate of 9% per annum from May 11, 2007, until paid, the sum of $1,825.74 together with interest thereon at the rate of 9% per annum from September 10, 2012, until paid, and the sum of $300.00 together with interest thereon at the rate of 9% per annum from April 4, 2013, until paid.

By reason of the above described default, Beneficiary has declared all sums owing on the obligation secured by the Trust Deed immediately due and payable, which sums are the following:

The sum of $1,196.26 together with interest thereon at the rate of 9% per annum from May 11, 2007, until paid, the sum of $1,825.74 together with interest thereon at the rate of 9% per annum from September 10, 2012, until paid, and the sum of $300.00 together with interest thereon at the rate of 9% per annum from April 4, 2013, until paid.

WHEREFORE, notice is hereby given that Lawrence F. Finneran as Successor Trustee on December 3, 2013, at the hour of 11:00 o'clock A.M. at the front door of the Coos Bay City Hall, 500 Central, in the City of Coos Bay, County of Coos, state of Oregon, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash the interest in the real property described above which Grantor had or had power to convey at the time of the execution by Grantor of the Trust Deed together with any interest which Grantor acquired after the execution of the Trust Deed, to satisfy the foregoing obligations secured by the Trust Deed and the costs and expenses of the sale, including compensation of the Trustee as provided by law, and the reasonable fees of Trustee's attorneys. Notice is further given that any person named in ORS 86.753 has the right, at any time prior to five days before the date last set for the sale, to have this foreclosure proceeding dismissed and the Trust Deed reinstated by payment to Beneficiary of the entire amount then due (other than such portion of the principal as would not then be due had no default occurred) and by curing any other default complained of herein that is capable of being cured, by tendering the performance required under the Trust Deed and/or the obligation secured thereby, and in addition thereto, paying all costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligation and Trust Deed, together with Trustee and attorney fees not exceeding the amounts provided by ORS 86.753.

In construing this Notice, the singular includes the plural, the word "Grantor" includes any successor in interest to Grantor as well as any other person owing an obligation, the performance of which is secured by the Trust Deed, and the words "Trustee" and "Beneficiary" include their respective successors in interest, if any.

TRUSTEE'S NOTICE OF SALE

Reference is made to that certain trust deed made by Diane M. Pierce, as Grantor, to Fidelity National Title Company, as Trustee, in favor of Columbia River Bank dba CRB Mortgage Team ("Columbia River Bank"), as Beneficiary, dated July 2, 2008, and recorded on July 11, 2008, in the real property records of Coos County, Oregon, as instrument number 2008-7413 (the "Trust Deed"), covering the following described real property situated in the above-mentioned county and state, to-wit:

See attached Exhibit A.

On or about January 22, 2010, the Oregon Division of Finance and Corporate Securities closed Columbia River Bank and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (the "FDIC") was appointed as receiver for the bank. On March 14, 2011 and pursuant to an Assignment and Transfer of Lien, the FDIC transferred the beneficial interest under the Deed of Trust to Clark Jennings and Associates, Inc. ("Clark Jennings"). The Assignment and Transfer of Lien was recorded on March 21, 2011, in the Crook County real property records as Recorder's No. 2011-2145.

On April 11, 2011, Clark Jennings and AgStar Financial Services, FLCA ("Agstar FLCA") entered into an Offer and Certificate of Participation under which Clark Jennings agreed to sell to Agstar FLCA a participation in certain loans, including the loan made to Diane M. Pierce secured by the Deed of Trust described above. Pursuant to an Origination, Field Servicing & Master Participation Agreement entered into on September 21, 2010 between Clark Jennings and Agri-Access, a division and trademark of Agstar Financial Services, ACA, and its wholly owned subsidiary entities, Agstar Financial Services, PCA, and Agstar Financial Services, FLCA (collectively, "Agstar"), Agstar is (1) to service the loan made to Diane M. Pierce secured by the Deed of Trust described above; and (2) to be appointed as Clark Jennings' attorney-in-fact to permit Agstar to service the loan and enforce the loan documents, including pursuing a foreclosure action.

On September 23, 2011, a Limited Power of Attorney for Participation Loans dated October 20, 2010 was recorded in the Coos County Real Property Records as Recorder's No. 2011-7492 appointing Agstar as Clark Jennings' attorney-in-fact. Pursuant to the Limited Power of Attorney for Participation Loans, Agstar is entitled to pursue foreclosure of the Deed of Trust granted to secure the loan made to Diane M. Pierce on behalf Clark Jennings.

Fidelity National Title was designated Trustee in the Deed of Trust. The Beneficiary, by and through its attorney-in-fact, has appointed Howard M. Levine as Successor Trustee under an Appointment of Successor Trustee, dated April 8, 2013, and recorded on April 22, 2013, in the Official Records of Coos County, Oregon, as Recorder's No. 2013-3727.

Both the beneficiary and the trustee have elected to sell the said real property to satisfy the obligations secured by said Trust Deed and a Notice of Default has been recorded pursuant to Oregon Revised Statutes 86.735(3); the defaults for which the foreclosure is made are grantor's failure to pay real property taxes when due and grantor's failure to pay when due the following sums:

$10,149.00 Missed Principal and Interest Payments ($845.75/month from May 1, 2012 to April 1, 2013)

$507.45 5% Late Charges from May 15, 2012 to April 15, 2013
$560.00 Appraisal
$ 282.87 Delinquent Property Taxes (2012-2013)
$11,499.32* TOTAL

 Plus additional missed payments, late charges, attorney's fees and costs, and advances.

By reason of said default the beneficiary has declared all sums owing on the obligation secured by said Trust Deed immediately due and payable, said sums being the following, to-wit:

$106.991.37 Accelerated Principal though April 1, 2013
$8,852.01 Accelerated Interest through April 30, 2013, at 7.70% per annum
$507.45 Late Charges from May 15, 2012 to April 15, 2013
$560.00 Appraisal
$282.87 Delinquent Property Taxes
$117,193.70* TOTAL

Plus additional missed payments, late charges, attorney's fees and costs, and advances.

WHEREFORE, notice hereby is given that the undersigned Trustee will on October 14, 2013, at the hour of 10:00 a.m., in accord with the standard of time established by ORS 187.110, at the front steps of the Coos County Courthouse, 250 N. Baxter, City of Coquille, County of Coos, State of Oregon, sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash the interest in the said described real property which the grantor had or had power to convey at the time of the execution by grantor of the said Trust Deed, together with any interest which the grantor or grantor's successors-in-interest acquired after the execution of said Trust Deed, to satisfy the foregoing obligations thereby secured and the costs and expenses of sale, including a reasonable charge by the trustee.

Notice is further given that any person named in ORS 86.753 has the right, at any time prior to five (5) days before the date last set for the sale, to have this foreclosure proceeding dismissed and the Trust Deed reinstated by payment to the beneficiary of the entire amount then due (other than such portion of the principal as would not then be due had no default occurred) and by curing any other default complained of herein that is capable of being cured by tendering the performance required under the obligation or Trust Deed, and in addition to paying said sums or tendering the performance necessary to cure the default, by paying all costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligation and Trust Deed, together with trustee's and attorneys' fees not exceeding the amounts provided by said ORS 86.753.

In construing this notice, the singular includes the plural, the word "Grantor" includes any successor in interest to the grantor as well as any other person owing an obligation, the performance of which is secured by said Trust Deed, and the words "Trustee" and "Beneficiary" include their respective successors in interest, if any.

10 new ways to dress your dog

Remember when all it took to dress a dog was a squiggle of neon yellow mustard and a splash of ketchup? We've come a long way. These days, dogs are dressed to the nines. Never mind all the geographic differences (it seems like every major city now has to claim its own distinct way of doing up a hot dog). Chefs and food trucks are getting in on pushing limits, too, topping hot dogs with everything from kimchee to mango chutney. It's an exciting time to eat a hot dog. To help you create your own delicious

Why be normal when it comes to toppings? masterpiece, we came up with some creative ways to adorn your dog. ■ REUBEN DOG: Sauerkraut, Thousand Island dressing, Swiss cheese, caraway seeds ■ HAWAIIAN: Thin slices of fresh pineapple, jalapeno peppers, bacon ■ FRENCH PICNIC: Whole-grain mustard, chopped cornichons, aioli (garlic mayonnaise), served on baguette ■ THE ITALIAN: Wrap the hotdog in salami before grilling. Top with garlic pickled peppers and sharp provolone ■ SWEET PEACH: Chopped fresh or frozen peaches, shaved red onion, barbecue sauce, fresh cilantro ■ CAPRESE: Sliced tomatoes, miniature fresh mozzarella balls, torn fresh basil, drizzle of balsamic glaze ■ GREEN GARDEN: Scallion mayonnaise, thinly sliced cucumber, fresh tarragon, arugula ■ MIDWESTERN: Pepper jack cheese, fresh corn kernels, pickled jalapenos, diced red bell pepper ■ BETTY: Grape jelly mixed with brown mustard, topped with crushed kettle-cooked potato chips ■ LUMBERJACK: Baked beans, bacon, caramelized onions

Classic French is now a salad

Heat the grill to medium-high. Using a paring knife, slice shallow slits into the cut sides of the eggplant halves. Drizzle the eggplants with olive oil, then rub half of the garlic and a sprinkle of salt and black pepper into the flesh. Brush the onion slices and the zucchini halves with a little more olive oil and sprinkle them with salt and pepper. Fold a large sheet of heavy duty foil into thirds the long way. Open the foil. Place the tomatoes in the middle third of the foil, then drizzle them with the balsamic glaze and 1 tablespoon olive oil. Sprinkle with the herbes de Provence, the remaining garlic, and the red pepper flakes. Stir gently to combine. Fold the foil closed, crimping the ends to make a packet. Grill the eggplant, onion slices, zucchini halves, tomato packet, and red bell pepper (left whole) for 7 to 10 minutes, or until the vegetables are charred and tender, and the tomatoes are juicy. Place the red pepper in a brown paper bag and crimp the top closed. Set aside. Dice the eggplant, onion and zucchini and place in a large bowl. When the pepper cools slightly, rub the charred skin away, using the paper bag to assist. Cut the pepper into strips, discarding the core, and add to the other vegetables. Pour the tomatoes and their juices over the other vegetables and sprinkle with the goat cheese. Serve warm or at room temperature.

uid is the enemy, and adding additional liquid in the form of a can full of beer is the wrong approach. So empty the can first — the specifics of that will be left as an exercise for the reader— and use the empty can merely as a way to prop up the bird and to block airflow in its interior so that the meat doesn't dry out. Also, give the skin some breathing room by running your (carefully washed) fingers underneath it before roasting. As the subdermal fat melts away, it will trickle downward; a few well-placed punctures provide exits without compromising the balloon-like ability of the skin to puff outward under steam pressure. Held apart from the juicy meat, the loose skin will dry as it browns, especially during a final short blast of high heat in a hot oven. Done right, each slice of tender meat will be capped with a strip of wonderfully flavored skin, which will be at its crispiest when it emerges from the oven. So have your table ready, and don't be slow with the carving knife. But do take a moment to remove the can before you tuck in. SLOW-ROASTED CHICKEN ON A BEER CAN Start to finish: 3 1/2 to 4 1/2 hours (30 minutes active) Servings: 4 1 medium roaster chicken 12-ounce can of cold beer (any variety you like to drink) Set an oven rack in the lowest position in the oven. Remove the upper racks. Heat the oven to 175 degrees, or as low as your oven will allow if its controls do not go this low. Wash your hands well with soap. Remove the neck and bag of giblets, if included, from inside the chicken. Slide your fingertips underneath the skin at the neck opening and gently work the skin away from the meat. Use care to avoid tearing the skin as you pull it loose from the body; continue as far as you can reach on both the front and the back. Turn the chicken over, and repeat from the cavity opening at the base of the bird, making sure to loosen the skin on the drumsticks so that it is attached only at the wings and the ends of the legs. Use a knife to pierce the skin at the foot end of each leg and at the tail end of the front and back. These small incisions will allow the cooking juices to drain away so that they don't soak into the skin. Pour the contents of the beer can into a glass, and enjoy it at your leisure. Push the empty can into the tail end of the bird far enough that the chicken can stand upright as it rests on the can. If the neck was included with the chicken, use it like a stopper to close up the opening at the top of the bird. Otherwise you can use a bulldog clip to pinch the skin closed so that steam inflates the loose skin like a balloon and holds it away from the damp meat as the chicken roasts. Set a baking sheet in the oven. Insert the probe of an oven-safe thermometer into the deepest part of the chicken's thigh. Stand the chicken upright (on the can) on the baking sheet and roast until the core temperature reaches 145 degrees if you want the white meat to be juicy and tender; for more succulent dark meat, continue roasting to a core temperature of 150 degrees. A medium-size roaster will need 3 to 4 hours. After the first 30 minutes of roasting, check the effective baking temperature by inserting a digital thermometer through the skin to a depth of 1/8 inch. The temperature there should be within 5 degrees of the target core temperature (either 145 degrees or 150 degrees). If it is too high, open the oven door for several minutes; if too cool, increase the oven setting slightly. Repeat this check of the near-surface temperature every half hour or so. When the core temperature hits the target, take the chicken out and let it rest, uncovered, for 20 minutes. Meanwhile, increase the oven temperature to its hottest baking setting. Don't use the broiler, but do select a convection baking mode if your oven has one. Return the bird to the hot oven, turn on the light, and watch it carefully as it browns. The goal is crisp, golden brown skin. The skin will start to brown quickly, and browning will accelerate once it starts. So keep your eye on it. Once the chicken is browned, remove the can, carve the bird, and serve immediately, while the skin is still crispy.
