Crash leaves Barview without power

More than 2,000 customers in the dark for four hours

COOS BAY — A one-car crash Wednesday afternoon left much of Barview and Charleston without power.

Coos County dispatchers received a report of a crash at the intersection of Cape Arago Highway and Kellogg Avenue at 11:41 a.m.

Arriving officers found a dark-colored sedan had crashed into a telephone pole, which broke at the base and caused an outage.

Pacific Power estimated the incident left approximately 2,191 customers without power.

The driver was taken from the scene by Bay Cities Ambulance.

Traffic along Cape Arago Highway was delayed as a utility crew worked to reconnect the downed lines. Power was restored to the Charleston area by 4 p.m.

Crash victims remain in critical condition

COOS BAY — A sheriff's deputy and a Bandon woman were in critical condition this morning at a Portland hospital, following a Wednesday crash south of Coos Bay.

Connie Walle, 58, of Bandon and Coos County Deputy Doug Miller were flown to Oregon Health Sciences University for injuries sustained in a collision at the spur road between state Highway 42 and U.S. Highway 101.

The crash forced Walle's vehicle off the highway into a ditch and smashed Miller's patrol car, which came to rest against a guard rail.

OHSU Strategic Communications said

both Walle and Miller were listed in critical condition as of 7:20 a.m. The hospital defines a patient in critical condition as having vital signs that are unstable or outside normal limits.

In a press release Wednesday, Coos County District Attorney Paul Frasier said the crash remained under investigation.

An Oregon State Police crash reconstruction expert from Roseburg completed his investigation Wednesday. But, Frasier said investigators still needed to interview eyewitnesses.

Neither Walle or Miller had been interviewed as of Wednesday evening because of their injuries.

The investigation is being handled by the Oregon State Police in conjunction with the Coos County Crash Team.

Lawmaker pushes grandparents' rights

BY TIM NOVOTNY
The World

COOS BAY — The bond between child and grandparent would be harder to dissolve, under a grandparents rights bill proposed by state Rep. Wayne Krieger, R-Gold Beach.

House Bill 3249 will be the main topic of discussion when Krieger visits Coos Bay on Friday. He'll appear at a Grandparents ROCK meeting from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. inside the Coos Bay Fire Station on Elrod Street.

Char Luther is one of the organizers for ROCK, which stands for Raising Our Children's Kids. She says grandparents' rights are definitely an issue in this community.

"Currently they have no legal rights, even if the grandparent took care of the child," she said. "Even if they lived with them."

Krieger said HB 3249 would provide for visitation or communication by letter, email, fax or phone, as determined by a judge.

"It requires the Department of Human Services to identify the grandparents and make sure they know the child is in the custody of DHS."

The grandparents would be notified of any court hearings where they could ask to be heard before the judge. If the request is granted, they could petition the judge for visitation or other contact.

The proposed law is not intended to be a recourse in a family feud. Courts can't interfere with parents'

Pension cuts plan scaled back

BY JONATHAN J. COOPER

SALEM — The Oregon House significantly scaled back a Democratic plan to raise taxes on corporations and wealthy individuals Wednesday after it became clear that the proposal didn't have enough support to pass.

Lawmakers stripped the bill of its controversial provisions and unanimously approved what was left: An effort to tax corporate revenue held in off-shore accounts. Democrats had hoped to phase out income tax deductions for the highest-earning taxpayers and increase the corporate minimum tax, but they couldn't get the two Republican votes they'd need to raise revenue.

In a separate, nearly party-line vote, lawmakers approved a

20 days for Thefts & Mischief Walmart robber

THE WORLD

COOS BAY — A Coos Bay man was found guilty on Wednesday of robbing Walmart last summer.

Curtis Randolph Pearce pleaded guilty to third-degree robbery for an Aug. 2 incident at the Newmark Avenue store.

Pearce, 22, made the plea in exchange for dismissal of his other charges of third-degree theft, fourth-degree assault, harassment and second-degree disorderly conduct to be dismissed.

Third-degree robbery is a Class C felony.

He was sentenced by Judge Michael J. Gillespie to 20 days in jail and two years' probation. He must pay $729.92, $49.92 of which is restitution for the robbery.

As part of his probation, Pearce is banned from Walmart for the next two years.

Bandon showcases its hometown offerings

By AMY MOSS STRONG
The World

BANDON — Two dozen local businesses converged on The Barn Wednesday afternoon for the Bandon Chamber of Commerce's first Micro Biz Fair.

The event gave business owners and attendees a chance to network and discover what each has to offer.

Chamber Executive Director Julie Miller came up with the idea as a way to allow Bandon businesses to showcase their products and services to front-line employees — including visitor center volunteers and others who often give recommendations to visitors.

"We can think of no other way to help promote Bandon businesses during the 2013 season than to help them make a memorable impression on those individuals who regularly field questions from visitors," Miller said.

Dozens of people came to The Barn to check out the fair and talk with business owners, who had tables displaying their products, samples, brochures and business cards.

"I was extreme pleased with the event considering it was the first time," Miller said after the fair. "I think the business community seemed pleased and it's definitely something they'll want to expand on in the future."

Miller said at least one visitor went to the owner's shop after visiting a booth at the fair.

"The fact that some people came and then went and shopped in that business is proof this was successful," she added.

Businesses included restaurants, photographers, vacation rentals, retail stores, a golf course and others.

"I thought the event was great and was good for businesses," said Angie Gonzales-Smith, who manages the Windemere motel with her husband, Leigh. "It was good to talk to people about your business and also to talk to other businesses about how we can help each other."

Jessica Brink, owner of the Toy Room, agreed.

"I wasn't sure what to expect but I thought it went really well and I was happy with the turnout. A lot of people came out, both other businesses and the community," Miller said the event's success was inspiring, and the chamber will definitely host it again next year.

COOS BAY — Children of all ages can eat barbecue food, jump in a bouncing house, run a 5-K, fish, canoe and participate in other activities at this year's Family Fun Day, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday.

"We always have it in April on a Saturday," said Sue Thornton, one of the event's planners, who also works for the Coos Bay Child Advocacy Center. For the past 10 years, the organization has provided the day — free — to help focus the public's attention on child abuse.

The group chose April because it's Child Abuse Awareness Month, she added.

Between 700 and 1,000 attendees are expected. The predicted sunny weather could help, Thornton said.

A free shuttle will take attendees from Southwestern Oregon Community College to the park, to help ease parking.

Culinary arts students from Oregon Coast Culinary Institute will make pies for the pie-eating contest at noon. Teen Idol contestants will perform at 1 p.m. Signup for the 5-K run is at 9 a.m., and the run is at 10 a.m.

FAA furloughs serve Obama agenda

President Barack Obama and his team don't have to worry about commercial flight delays. Maybe that helped secure the decision to begin furloughing air traffic controllers this week, leading to delays at the nation's airports and the Democrats' finger of blame pointed at tax-averse Republicans.

The administration claims that, because of the sequester-related budget cuts, it has no choice but to furlough all 47,000 Federal Aviation Administration employees, ordering them each to stay home one of every 10 days between now and September.

It's nonsense, of course. The agency has refused to consider reducing its workforce in areas that would not directly affect air safety. Nope, not a single deputy-assistant to the deputy-assistant can be spared.

Meanwhile Democrats in the Senate have refused to consider legislation to allow the administration more flexibility in imposing cuts. They've chosen to wallow in the inconvenience.

Because, of course, the inconvenience furthers the cause — another major tax increase. Forget the impact on the economy when business travel is stalled, airline schedules up-ended, shipments of inventory delayed or canceled, or when a family heading on a summer trip decides to avoid the hassle and stay home.

According to House Republicans, the FAA's $10 billion operating budget has increased 110 percent since 1996, and includes $2.7 billion in non-personnel costs. By no means should these cuts cripple the commercial aviation system, but in the interest of scoring political points, they might.

Either bombers have rights or no one does

Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, the 19-year-old naturalized U.S. citizen suspected of planting bombs at the Boston Marathon, was charged Monday with using a "weapon of mass destruction" against people and property, and he faces an aggressive prosecution and the possibility of the death penalty.

But that's not good enough for Sens. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C.,

Other Views

Excerpts of newspaper editorials from around America.

and John McCain, R-Ariz. Because Tsarnaev and his brother, Tamerlan, were terrorists the two senators would rather see Tsarnaev classified as an enemy combatant, deprived of a lawyer and placed in military detention.

To its credit, the Obama administration rejected the senators' counsel.

The U.S. attorney in Boston said the Justice Department was invoking a "public safety exception" to the Miranda rule. Under the exception, police may forgo reading a suspect his rights in the interests of public safety — and if the suspect then makes an incriminating statement, it can be used at trial.

It would have been a legitimate use of the public safety exception in the Boston case if law enforcement officials had refrained from reading Tsarnaev his rights only for as long as it took to establish whether other bombs had been planted.

On Monday, a federal magistrate finally informed Tsarnaev of his rights. We hope that, in the days and hours before that intervention, his interrogators didn't exploit his ignorance to build their case. A public safety exception so broad that it swallows the Miranda rule would be bad for the Constitutional rights of all Americans.

'Great Divider' finds victory in defeat

Washington might have a gun control bill now were it not for President Barack Obama's overreach. The Great Divider has again lived up to the moniker by refusing to embrace compromise.

After all, compromise is in the realm of governing. Obama stays in the realm of politics, the perpetual campaigner who will try to win back the U.S. House by demonizing the gun lobby and Republicans for dishonoring victims of the Newtown massacre.

Obama and pro-gun control Democrats had opportunities to reach a compromise, most notably in the area of background checks. They weren't interested. Other Democrats joined Republicans in refusing to embrace the overreach.

Americans want sensible, fair and constitutional gun restrictions debated with reason and restraint. Obama consistently refuses to back legislation that has a chance to win bipartisan support. Sometimes he gets his way, as with Obamacare. Often he doesn't, but The Great Divider still notches a victory in defeat because it becomes part of his campaign strategy going forward.

We're still waiting for him to have a governing strategy. It's pretty shameful that he seems less interested in running the country than in running a campaign.

Questions in evil's wake

Martin Richard's life ended as he waited at the Boston Marathon finish line on a local holiday. He was there to celebrate his dad's victory with his family. Instead, he is dead and his family's life is changed forever.

When I heard that the 8-year-old victim of the marathon bombings had just received First Communion, I thought immediately of Christina-Taylor Green. She's the 9-year-old who was murdered in Jared Loughner's 2011 rampage in Tucson. She had recently undergone that rite, as well — she, too, had an unforgettable smile. It's the look of innocent joy, an encounter with hope. She was prone to thanksgiving: "We are so blessed. We have the best life," she would say to her family.

Christina-Taylor's name and now Martin's become for us a meditation. Not necessarily of a political nature — the testimony of their truncated lives calls us deeper. The photo of Martin in a classroom holding up a sign that says, "No more hurting people. Peace." has understandably gone viral.

Jarring attacks on innocents cry out for us to do something. To really and truly build a culture of life, as Boston Archbishop Sean O'Malley urged at the prayer service at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross three days after the marathon ended in death.

"This Patriots' Day shakes us out of our complacency and indifference and calls us to focus on the task of building a civilization that is based on love, justice, truth and service," he said.

"We do not want to risk losing the legacy of those first patriots who were willing to lay down their lives for the common good. We must overcome the culture of death by promoting a culture of life, a profound respect for each and every human being made in the image and likeness of God, and we must cultivate a desire to give our lives in the service of others," he went on.

We are reminded, too, of our common bond: vulnerability. This should compel us to service and support, to friendship and love. And it's not easy — a mere donation to the Red Cross is not the true charity that we're called to.

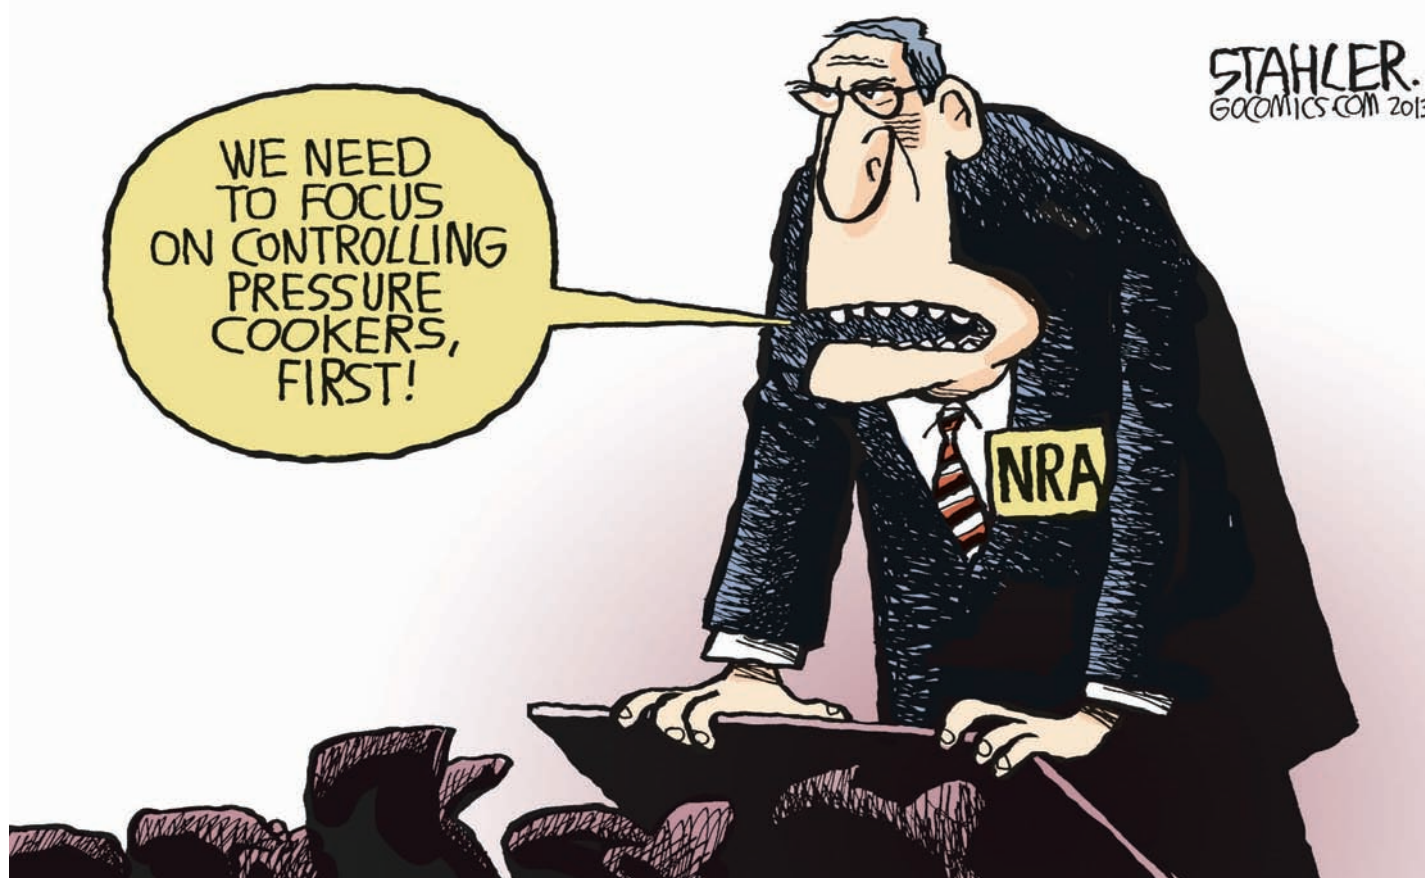

While many scrambled to find a motive for the attacks, Rev. Roberto Miranda of a Baptist church in nearby Roxbury named the problem: "As we have confirmed so graphically this week, wickedness does exist in this world," he said at the Holy Cross prayer service.

"We are people of faith," he continued. "We believe in a benevolent God who holds a steady hand over history; who even as He allows hatred and fanaticism to have its moment, has also deflected time and time again, through the many voices of millennial faiths, that in the end, goodness will always prevail."

And so what do we do with the uncertainty and insecurity left in the wake of an encounter with evil? We recommit to what is good. If we take Martin's poignant message to heart, it will change the way we treat one another. Was I impatient with my brother? Did I ignore my sister? Did I hurt him? Before he celebrated his First Communion, Martin would have taken part in the sacrament of Reconciliation for the first time. He would have asked himself similar questions.

In the midst of mourning and fear, Boston and a nation gathered to give thanks. To come together and better understand freedom and evil and redemption, raising the kind of questions that laws or manhunt alone can't solve. That's not the work of legislation, but a lifetime of sacrifice, service, born out of and fueled by love.

The baby-faced bomber

deceptive. The picture of "Bomber No. 2" didn't look a bit like a mass murderer. A sweet-faced college kid, the former life-guard, the nice young man described by classmates and friends. It couldn't be. There must be some outside organization calling the shots. An international conspiracy, perhaps. Brainwashing.

Or maybe it was just a deceptive picture of a cold-blooded murderer.

He and his brother put bombs next to children.

One of those children was murdered.

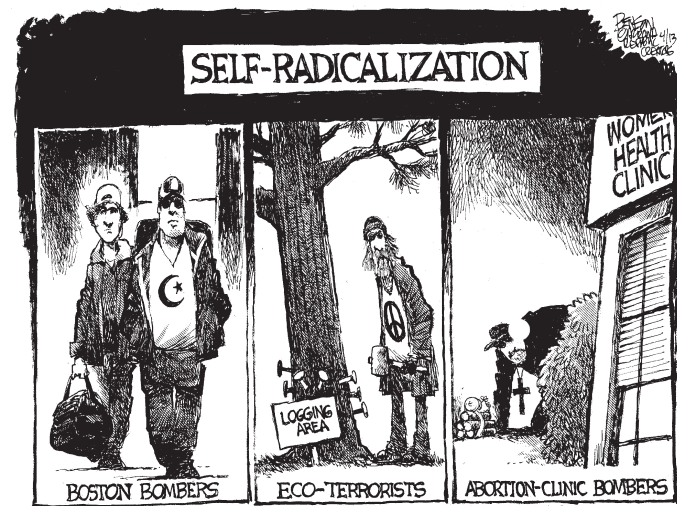

In a court of law, innocence is presumed. That is a rule of law, not a finding of fact. For those of us who watched, watched over and over, the proof appears to be nothing less than overwhelming. Others may have been involved. Further investigation is absolutely required.

But I for one have no doubt that the defendant is not a baby-faced college student, that he is no one's victim, that he is responsible for heinous crimes. Responsibility is not an exacting standard in criminal law. Did he know what he was doing? Did he understand that there was a bomb in that backpack, and that bombs kill people and terrorize cities? Whatever other pressures may have been at work, however influenced he was by religion or his brother or anyone else, if he knew what he was doing, if he understood the nature of his conduct, that is enough to make him responsible.

But that does not make him an enemy combatant.

The evidence against Tsarnaev is overwhelming. He wouldn't need to say a word to government authorities to be convicted in an American court. The only consequence of not giving him Miranda rights is that his statements might not be admissible in a criminal trial, which, frankly, won't matter. Anyone who thinks a Boston jury will be unduly sympathetic (unlike military officers) is just plain wrong. Indeed, for my money, military officers — who are more accustomed to seeing death on the fields of battle than the rest of us are to seeing destruction and devastation in Copley Square — might have an easier time focusing solely on the evidence admitted at trial.

Dzhokhar Tsarnaev is not a baby-faced innocent, even if that is how he looks in the pictures that flashed on the screen every minute. He placed a bomb in the middle of hundreds of innocent people, children included.

He is also not an enemy combatant by any definition, nor do we need to treat him as one in order to ensure that justice is done.

Susan Estrich is a lawyer and professor in California.

Supreme Court saves our privacy

I'd feared that, after George W. Bush and Dick Cheney and, even worse, Barack Obama, the Fourth Amendment's protection of our personal privacy had nearly vanished. But on April 17, a majority of the Supreme Court, ruling in Missouri v. McNeely, remembered a fundamental liberty we lost during the British occupation that helped ignite the American Revolution.

As John W. Whitehead of the Charlottesville, Va.-based Rutherford Institute put it in the organization's news release: "Fourth Amendment Victory: Citing Bodily Integrity, U.S. Supreme Court Prohibits Police From Forcefully Taking Blood From Blood Samples From DUI Suspects."

Whitehead had also filed an amicus brief before the court on behalf of the defendant in Missouri v. McNeely.

Here's the case: While driving erratically in October 2010, Tyler McNeely was pulled over by a Missouri state highway patrolman, who arrested him on suspicion of drunk driving and took him to a hospital to undergo a blood test for alcohol content. McNeely didn't want to subject himself to a blood test, but the officer ignored him and had his blood drawn anyhow. Based on the results of the blood test, McNeely was then charged with driving under the influence.

It's worth noting that Justice Sonia Sotomayor, writing for the majority of the court in upholding McNeely's refusal to consent, described the forced extraction of a person's blood as: "An invasion of bodily integrity (that) implicates an individual's most personal and deep-rooted expectations of privacy."

Crucial to the outcome of this case, as Whitehead emphasizes, is "at no point did the officer attempt to obtain a warrant authorizing the extraction."

The Fourth Amendment forbids "unreasonable searches and seizures," thereby first requiring a warrant from a judge to establish probable cause for a search. Sotomayor points out that there is "expeditious processing of warrant applications, particularly in contexts like drunk-driving investigations (to quickly get a warrant) where the evidence supporting probable cause is simple."

"The law now allows a federal magistrate judge to consider 'information communicated by telephone or other reliable electronic means.'"

But there must be that judge-issued warrant to the probable cause of the search before the extraction of blood — not just the police officer's suspicions.

Whitehead makes this crucial point concerning Missouri v. McNeely:

"While public safety is of great concern, especially when it comes to serious offenses such as driving under the influence of alcohol, Americans' constitutional rights cannot be wholly discounted and conveniently discarded.

"The Supreme Court is to be commended for recognizing that if we allow the government agents broad powers to invade our bodies without consent or court order, the bodily integrity of all persons in the United States will be in serious jeopardy."

Stranger's encouraging words inspire woman

DEAR ABBY: I was moved by the letter from "Losing Slowly in Ohio" (Jan. 14), who is 50 pounds overweight and walks every day with her friend to lose weight. She said that almost daily people made fun of them. My heart goes out to her.

I was in her shoes once. With diet and exercise I lost more than 60 pounds, and I've kept it off. But I was never ridiculed as she was. On the contrary, one day after I had just begun a daily 1-mile jog and was struggling to keep going, I passed by a man who cheerfully called out to me to "keep at it, and one day you'll be a 10!"

Abby, I can't tell you what that meant to me. I thought about his encouragement whenever I felt hopeless and was thinking of giving up. The memory of his kind words inspired me to go on. Thirty years later, I still think about his encouragement with amazement and gratitude.

We all have a choice: We can be kind to each other and offer friends and strangers alike support for the challenges we all face, or we can make ourselves feel superior by being cruel and demeaning. In the end, our choice shapes our character and we receive what we give, so we must choose wisely.

I'm sorry that "Losing" has met with only ignorant jerks so far. I would be honored to pay it forward and tell her how incredibly brave she is, and to encourage her to stick with it. Because she has the courage to keep exercising in the face of constant humiliation, I know without a doubt that she will reach her goals. — WENDY IN COLORADO

DEAR WENDY: Thank you for your upbeat response. Many other readers were quick to "weigh in" with letters of support for "Losing Slowly".

DEAR ABBY: I, too, have a weight problem, which I am working to resolve. But I can tell you from experience that the worst kind of discrimination is directed against people with weight problems. I have been insulted in the workplace, in restaurants and doctor's offices. I have not been hired for jobs because I am perceived as fat and lazy.

I am NOT lazy! I keep a clean house, work hard at my job as a secretary every day, and I am a good wife and parent. We may ignore it and pretend that it doesn't hurt us or matter, but I can tell you it IS painful, demeaning, and it doesn't go away. I have been in meetings or at social functions and have had to excuse myself to have a good cry. — STILL SUFFERING IN KENTUCKY

DEAR ABBY: Please let "Losing Slowly" know she has another option to continue her new, healthy lifestyle in a safe environment. I have worked in malls for years, and they have all had a mall walkers' club.

The mall allows people in to walk, including many seniors, before it opens in the morning. There she will have access to a place where everyone is on the same page. The walkers are safe from traffic, the climate, and morons who have the manners of a junkyard dog. The regulars there can tell her how many miles they can cover. It's a great society of people who support and root for each other. — NEVER GIVING UP IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ABBY: I would suggest the two ladies create T-shirts that read "At Least We're Trying!" and watch the jeers turn into cheers. — CAROL IN WISCONSIN

Teacher Kerry Patton's second grade class at Coburg Community Charter School use exercise balls in place of chairs in Coburg. The balls provide a way for students to move, while allowing them to work simultaneously.

No more wiggling, Coburg pupils have a ball

COBURG (AP) — Twenty-five second-graders walk single file to their classroom at Coburg Community Charter School for their social studies class.

"All right, ladies and gentleman," their teacher, Kerry Patton, says as they enter. "Have a seat."

But instead of sitting on chairs, the students sit on 18-inch-diameter, yellow, plastic exercise balls.

Students bob up and down on the balls, as they would during a bumpy bus ride. Some sit with their feet on the ground, shoulders back and a straightened spine. Others tuck their feet under their bottoms and sit on their knees, balancing on the balls.

"I usually feel a lot comfier sitting on my knees," 8-year-old Bryson Cannaday said.

There was no falling over, no vigorous bouncing. The students worked as if it were entirely normal to sit on inflatable balls, which they've been doing since September.

Patton is one of a growing number of teachers across the United States who in recent years have substituted classroom chairs with balls commonly found in yoga and Pilates exercise classes. Several studies suggest that the balls increase focus because students can constantly move and get all the wiggles out.

Students must engage their core muscles to balance on the ball, and Patton said some students complained about being tired in the first few weeks.

"We have P.E. every day in our class," she said, laughing. "We have the best abs in the school."

Patton's class was "wiggly" last year, she said, and getting students to focus posed a challenge. So she began combing through research that found that exercise balls could increase productivity and focus in the classroom.

"There are fewer trips to the bathroom," Patton said, which students frequently used as an excuse to get up and move.

Patton bought 30 balls from Amazon.com for $600, which the school paid for. So far, none has deflated or popped. No student has been injured, either.

"It's been awesome," she said.

Eugene to allow homeless camping on city property

EUGENE (AP) — The Eugene City Council voted Wednesday in favor of allowing the homeless to camp overnight on some city property, but not parks.

The Register-Guard reports the vote will lead to a proposed ordinance for a four-month test. The homeless also would be allowed to camp on church property or private property with the permission of owners.

The move is a response to homeless advocates who urged the council to legalize camping in parks.

Concrete police pig back in pink

ASTORIA (AP) — The Astoria Police Department's concrete pig is back in the pink and ready for another 20 years of duty.

The Daily Astorian reports the pig was dropped off at the station in 1993 by someone who didn't stay to explain the gift.

Unoffended, the police promptly adopted the animal and left it in place.

But two decades took a toll, washing off the pink paint, pitting the surface, loosening the ears.

Michael Peden, the 16-year-old grandson of a department administrator, took on the restoration chores as an Eagle Scout project.

SALEM (AP) — The Oregon House has approved a bill to let counties authorize the use of dogs to hunt cougars. Voters banned the practice statewide in 1994, with opponents saying it's inhumane.

The measure passed Tuesday 40-19. The Oregonian reports that the measure goes to the Senate, where three previous efforts to change the ban have died.

Using dogs to tree them is considered the most reliable way to bag cougars.

Individual counties could opt out of the ban if the commissioners put it on the ballot or if residents undertake an initiative.

Officials: Oregon won't shift workers to exchange

SALEM (AP) — Oregon's top legislative budget officials say they haven't seriously discussed dropping health insurance coverage for part-time state workers to shift some of their costs to the federal government.

Political leaders in Washington state are exploring a plan that would shift some government workers out of their current health plans and onto the insurance exchange developed under the health care law championed by President Barack Obama.

Oregon Sen. Richard Devlin and Rep. Peter Buckley, co-chairmen of the Legislature's budget committee, say no similar plan is being considered in Salem.

The Washington state plan would save money for the state government but threatens to affect the federal budget and the pocket-

Rural county sees more physician assistants

NYSSA (AP) — The number of physician assistants has more than doubled in Malheur County over the past five years, helping to fill a gap in medical care for a rural county at the edge of Eastern Oregon that has trouble attracting doctors.

The county has one primary care physician for every 1,958 residents, but, statewide, the number is one primary care physician per 1,134 residents, the Ontario Argus Observer reported.

Picking up the slack are physician assistants, who can perform many of the duties of doctors, such as interviewing patients, ordering tests and writing prescriptions.

"There's a need for the personnel, for one," said Haley Halleman, a physician assistant at Malheur Memorial Health Clinic in Nyssa. "Second, in my opinion, is there's not as many physicians willing to move to a rural area and move their families."

The number of licensed PA's in Malheur County jumped from 16 in 2007 to 41 by the end of 2012. There are more statewide, as well, though not so dramatically, up 32 percent in the five years ending in 2012.

Physicians have to complete four years of medical school after they get their undergraduate degree and then spend three or more years in residency.

Physician assistants must receive a four-year undergraduate degree and then complete a two-year master's program, with the first year spent in the classroom and the second doing clinical rotations before becoming licensed.

Because of the need for rural health care providers, new physician assistants who start out in rural areas and work for specified times can see most of their student loans forgiven by the National Health Service Corps, said Malheur Memorial Health Clinic Administrator Nikki Jasper.

Obituary

Patrick Robert Little
April 27, 1947 — April 20, 2013

A memorial service will be held for Patrick Robert Little, 65, of North Bend at 2 p.m. Saturday, April 27, at the River View Campus of Bandon Christian Fellowship, 64253 Solari Lane in Coos Bay.

Patrick was born in Berkeley, Calif., April 27, 1947, to Robert Caroline Little. He passed away April 20, 2013, after a long illness.

After high school graduation Patrick served in the U.S. Army, stationed at Fort Greely, Alaska. Upon his return home he married his high school sweetheart, Deborah Walters, and they had two children. After Debbie's death from cancer in 1978, Patrick was lucky enough to fall in love and get married to Mary Schroeder of North Bend. They were blessed with four children. Though they divorced after 20 years of marriage, they remained good friends.

Patrick was a skilled electrician and worked for many years as a foreman in California and Oregon. He was a loyal member of IBEW Local Union 595 and 932. He was well respected by his union brothers. Pat was also a member of the North Bay Volunteer Fire Department for over 20 years.

In his spare time, Pat was an avid outdoorsman, inheriting a great love of the outdoors from his father. He spent a lot of time in nature while growing up and found great joy in it, as well as sharing it with others. He taught that love to all of his children.

Patrick is survived by his children, Alicia (Steve) Campbell of Livingston, Mont., Ryan (Julie) Little of Grovetown, Ga., Jessica Little of Seattle, Wash., Lindsay Little of Livingston, Mont., and Joseph Little of North Bend; his grandchildren, Cailin, Shelby and Erin Little of Grovetown, Ga., and Dominic and Dawson Post of Livingston, Mont.; his siblings, Kevin Little of Hayward, Calif., and Cheryl Craig of Larkspur, Calif.

He was preceded in death by his parents and first wife. Sign the guestbook at www.theworldlink.com.

Woman to plead guilty in ballot-altering case

PORTLAND (AP) — The former Clackamas County elections worker accused of ballot tampering will plead guilty today and receive a 90-day jail sentence, her attorney has confirmed.

Deanna Swenson of Oregon City was arrested last fall after another election worker saw her filling in ovals on ballots where preferences had been left empty by voters.

Defense attorney Jason Short said late Wednesday that a plea deal was reached in which Swenson will admit to tampering with two ballots. Besides 90 days in the county jail, Swenson will be ordered to pay a fine and perform community service.

Swenson was charged last fall with two counts each of official misconduct, altering a cast ballot and voting more than once.

Swenson told reporters after the arrest that her thinking had been affected by an illness and the use of a prescription drug. Short said he considered a defense that would take into account Swenson's mental state at the time she altered the ballots.

R.I. to be 10th state to allow gay marriage

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Rhode Island is on a path to becoming the 10th state to allow gay and lesbian couples to marry after a landmark vote in the state's Senate on Wednesday.

The Senate passed gay marriage legislation by a comfortable 26-12 margin, following a House vote of approval in January. The bill must now return to the House for a largely procedural vote, likely next week, but the celebration began Wednesday.

Hundreds of people filled the Statehouse with cheers following the vote.

Heavily Catholic Rhode Island is the last remaining New England state without gay marriage. Marriage legislation has been introduced in the state for nearly two decades, only to languish on the legislative agenda.

Supporters mounted a renewed push this year, and the Senate vote was seen as the critical test after the House easily passed the bill. Gov. Lincoln Chafee, an independent, called Wednesday's vote historic.

The first gay marriages in Rhode Island could take place Aug. 1, when the legislation would take effect. Civil unions would no longer be available to same-sex couples as of that date, though the state would continue to recognize existing civil unions. Lawmakers approved civil unions two years ago, though few couples have sought them.

Hundreds of opponents also gathered at the Statehouse for the vote, singing hymns and holding signs as the Senate deliberated. Rev. David Rodriguez, a Providence minister, said he was disappointed by the vote. He said he planned to continue to stand up for traditional marriage.

A massive explosion on one of the two barges still ablaze in the Mobile River in Mobile, Ala., at 3 a.m. EDT today.

Fire out hours after fuel barges explode in Ala.

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Firefighters today extinguished a huge blaze that erupted hours earlier when two fuel barges exploded, leaving three people with critical burns and forcing the evacuation of crew from a nearby cruise ship.

The cause of the fire, which started Wednesday night, remained under investigation, but it was believed to be accidental, Mobile Fire-Rescue spokesman Steve Huffman said in a statement.

The blaze was extinguished early today, U.S. Coast Guard spokesman Carlos Vega.

Firefighters from Mobile and Coast Guard officials responded after 8:30 p.m.

CDT Wednesday to a pair of explosions involving the gas barges in the Mobile River east of downtown. Additional explosions followed over the next few hours.

Authorities say three people were brought to the University of South Alabama Medical Center for burn-related injuries. The three remained in critical condition this morning, hospital spokesman Bob Lowry said.

Across the river, the Carnival Triumph, the cruise ship that became disabled in the Gulf of Mexico last February before it was towed to Mobile's port, was evacuated.

Officials: Bomb suspect silent after read rights

BOSTON (AP) — Sixteen hours after investigators began interrogating him, the surviving suspect in the Boston Marathon bombings went silent: He'd just been read his constitutional rights.

Dzhokhar Tsarnaev immediately stopped talking after a magistrate judge and a representative from the U.S. Attorney's office entered his hospital room and gave him his Miranda warning, according to a U.S. law enforcement source and four officials of both political parties briefed on the interrogation. They insisted on anonymity because the briefing was private.

Before being advised of his rights, the 19-year-old suspect told authorities that his older brother, Tamerlan Tsarnaev, 26, only recently had recruited him to be part of the attack that detonated pressure-cooker bombs at the marathon finish line, two U.S. officials said.

The CIA, however, had named Tamerlan to a terrorist database 18 months ago, said officials close to the investigation who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss the case with reporters.

Suspects' father says he's returning to U.S.

MAKHACHKALA, Russia (AP) — The father of the two Boston bombing suspects, Anzor Tsarnaev, said today that he is leaving Russia for the United States in the next day or two, but their mother said she was still thinking it over.

The suspects' father has expressed a desire to go to the U.S. to find out what happened with his sons, defend his hospitalized 19-year-old son Dzhokhar and if possible bring his older son's body back to Russia for burial.

The new disclosure that Tamerlan Tsarnaev was included within a huge, classified database of known and suspected terrorists before the attacks was expected to drive congressional inquiries in coming weeks about whether the Obama administration adequately investigated tips from Russia that Tsarnaev had posed a security threat.

White House says it's open to fix on FAA furlough

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under growing pressure, the Obama administration signaled Wednesday it might accept legislation eliminating Federal Aviation Administration furloughs blamed for lengthy delays affecting airline passengers, while leaving the rest of $85 billion in across-the-board spending cuts in place.

The disclosure came as sentiment grew among Senate Democrats as well as Republicans for legislation to ease the impact of the cuts on the FAA, and Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood held talks with key senators.

"I think there was a meeting of the minds" on steps to remedy the situation, Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., said after the meeting. He said he hoped for a resolution before the Senate begins a scheduled weeklong vacation at week's end.

Said LaHood, "There are too many delays and common ordinary citizens are being affected."

According to the National Air Traffic Controllers Association, which is privy to FAA data, there were 5,800 flight delays across the country for the three-day period beginning Sunday, when the furloughs took effect. Some were caused by weather. The union said that compares with 2,500 delays for the same period a year ago.

Survey: Americans' confidence in job market grows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Confidence in the U.S. job market has rebounded to roughly a normal level from its record low after the Great Recession, a trend that could help boost the economy.

Americans increasingly feel they could find a new job if necessary, according to the results of the 2012 General Social Survey, a long-standing poll of public opinion. And fear of being laid off dropped last year from its 2010 peak to roughly its average for the 35 years the question has been asked.

The percentage of Americans who said it would be somewhat or very easy to find a job if they lost theirs rose to 54 percent last year from 46 percent in 2010. The 2010 figure was the lowest since 1983, when the United

Kuwait puts media law proposals on hold

KUWAIT CITY (AP) — Kuwait put proposals to impose tough new media laws on hold today after the country's prime minister suggested that objections from press groups and others could force the Gulf nation to scrap the plans.

Rights groups and media watchdogs have criticized the draft law, announced earlier this month, because it would impose possible penalties such as fines of nearly $1 million for insulting Kuwait's Western-backed emir. The proposals also would give authorities greater leeway to close and control websites and other online outlets.

Avalanche survivor buried for 4 hours

DENVER (AP) — The sole survivor of an avalanche that killed five other men on the Continental Divide west of Denver was able to clear snow from his face with his unburied lower left arm so he could breathe, but he remained stuck for four hours until rescuers arrived, the Colorado Avalanche Information Center said Wednesday.

The avalanche was tragic but avoidable, the center said. The center's final report offered new details on the avalanche that occurred as snowboarders and skiers converged near Loveland Pass for the Rocky Mountain High Backcountry Gathering. The event was promoted by a Colorado snowboarding magazine as a day for backcountry riding but also avalanche gear and safety demonstrations.

The four snowboarders and a skier who died were all from Colorado. The Clear Creek County sheriff's office identified them as Christopher Peters, 32, of Lake-wood; Joseph Timlin, 32, of Gypsum; Ryan Novack, 33, of Boulder; Ian Lamphere, 36, of Crested Butte; and Rick Gaukel, 33, of Estes Park.

Boeing sees early-May restart of 787 planes

Boeing reported a better-than-expected first-quarter profit even as it scrambled to fix its grounded 787.

The company said on Wednesday that deliveries of the 787 should resume in early May. Most of the 50 planes that have been delivered to airlines will be fixed by the middle of the month, Chairman and CEO Jim McNerney said on the company's quarterly earnings conference call.

Resuming deliveries and passenger flights would cap a notable turnaround for Boeing. The three-month grounding over battery problems frustrated airlines and turned a spotlight onto the way commercial planes are designed and regulated. Putting the problem behind it will let Boeing focus on building new versions of its best-selling 737 and 777.

Air safety authorities around the world grounded 787s after two different planes suffered from smoldering batteries — one of them including a fire, one of them in-flight — in January. The Federal Aviation Administration has approved Boeing's redesigned battery system, which the company says should sharply reduce the risk of a fire.

Once the FAA approves the fix on individual planes, airlines can start flying them again. United Airlines, the only U.S. airline with the planes, moved one of its six 787s to a Boeing facility in San Antonio, Texas, on Tuesday so it can get the battery fix. Neither of the battery incidents involved a United jet.

Paltrow selected 'most beautiful'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gwyneth Paltrow says she's thrilled to be picked by People magazine as "World's Most Beautiful Woman" for 2013 but it's "obviously not true."

Paltrow questioned her own selection as she walked the red carpet at the Hollywood premiere of "Iron Man 3" Wednesday night.

"It's funny, these things, because it's like obviously not true. But it's very sweet to be named that," Paltrow told The Associated Press. "Because I mean you can't say that, you know! But it's been wonderful. It's been very wonderful. And as my friend said, it's so nice that someone who has kids and is a mom and is not like 21 is named that. It's really an honor."

Paltrow said her two children weren't aware of the news in this week's edition of the magazine, but she'd been getting plenty of congratulatory emails from friends and family.

The 40-year-old actress stars as Pepper Potts, Tony Stark's love interest and assistant-turned-business partner in the "Iron Man" trilogy.

Ohio hopes to save Richter scale developer legacy

CINCINNATI (AP) — Fans of the Ohio native credited with developing the Richter scale for rating earthquake magnitude don't want his name and legacy forgotten.

They are determined to keep Charles Richter from fading from public memory as other magnitude measurements have been developed and references to the Richter scale are used less in reports about earthquakes.

A group of historians and Richter supporters has joined with local officials to establish an annual celebration of his life near the southwest Ohio site where Richter was born April 26, 1900. This year's Charles F. Richter Day ceremony on his birthday will be held Friday in Butler County, about 25 miles north of Cincinnati.

Richter, working with other scientists, is credited with developing the method for rating magnitude by measuring the shock waves produced.

21 dead in China clash

BEIJING (AP) — A violent clash between authorities and assailants described as a terrorist gang left 21 people dead in China's restive northwestern region of Xinjiang, the local government said Wednesday.

Among the dead in the Tuesday afternoon fighting were 15 police officers and local government officials, the Xinjiang government propaganda office said in a news release. It said six assailants were killed on the spot and another eight were captured alive.

"Initial investigations show this was a gang plotting to carry out terrorist acts and the case is now being further cracked open," the release said.

A leading activist from the region's indigenous Turkic Muslim Uighur ethnic group questioned the official account, saying local sources said that police sparked the incident by shooting a Uighur youth during an illegal search of homes.

The death toll was the highest for a single incident in months in Xinjiang, which sees recurrent outbreaks of violence pitting Uighurs against the authorities and majority ethnic Han Chinese migrants. Rioting in July 2009 between Uighurs and Han killed nearly 200 people in Xinjiang's capital. Sporadic attacks since have been quickly suppressed by local paramilitary units.

The U.S. State Department expressed deep concern over the violence and said it was seeking more information.

Chiheb Esseghaier, one of two suspects accused of plotting with al-Qaida in Iran to derail a train in Canada, arrives at Buttonville Airport just north of Toronto, on Tuesday.

Canada terror suspect grew more radical

TORONTO (AP) — One of two men accused of plotting with al-Qaida members in Iran to derail a train in Canada became radicalized to the point that his father reached out to a Muslim support group for help and advice, a local religious leader said Wednesday.

Muhammad Robert Heft, president of the Paradise Forever Support Group Inc., a non-profit organization that provides support to Muslims in Canada, said Muhammad Jaser came to him several times citing concerns about the radicalization of his son.

"He came to me about his son saying he how concerned he was getting about the rigidness of his son and his interpretation of Islam. He was becoming self-righteous, becoming pushy, pushing his views on how much they (his family) should be practicing as a Muslim," said Heft.

Jaser's son, Raed, 35, has been charged along with Chiheb Esseghaier, 30 with conspiring to carry out an attack and murder people in association with a terrorist group in their plot to derail a train that runs between New York City and Montreal.

Canadian investigators say the men received guidance from members of al-Qaida in Iran. Iranian government officials have said the government had nothing to do with the plot.

"His son was becoming overzealous and intolerant in his understanding of the religion," Heft said. "Those are the telltale signs that can lead into the radicalization process."

The discussions took place between 2010 and 2011, while the father was renting a basement apartment in Heft's home in Markham, Ontario.

On Wednesday, the other suspect appeared briefly in court where he made a statement suggesting he did not recognize the court's jurisdiction.

"This criminal code is not a holy book," Esseghaier said at the hearing. "We cannot rely on the conclusions taken out from these judgments."

At the hearing Esseghaier rejected the allegations against him and declined to be represented by a court-appointed lawyer.

Owners of collapsed factories ignored evacuation orders

SAVAR, Bangladesh (AP) — Deep cracks visible in the walls of a Bangladesh garment building had compelled police to order it evacuated a day before it collapsed, officials said today. More than 230 people were killed when the eight-story building splintered into a pile of concrete because factories based there ignored the order and kept more than 2,000 people working.

Wednesday's disaster in the Dhaka suburb of Savar is the worst ever for Bangladesh's booming and powerful garment industry, surpassing a fire less than five months earlier that killed 112 people. Workers at both sites made clothes for major brands around the world; some of the companies in the building that fell say their customers include retail giants such as Wal-Mart.

Hundreds of rescuers, some crawling through the maze of rubble in search of survivors and corpses, worked through the night and into today amid the cries of the trapped and the wails of workers' relatives gathered outside the building, called Rana Plaza. It housed numerous garment factories and a handful of other companies.

An Associated Press cameraman who went into the rubble with rescue workers spoke briefly to a garment worker pinned face down in the darkness between concrete slabs and next to two corpses. Mohammad Altab pleaded for help, but they were unable to free him.

"Save us, brother. I beg you, brother. I want to live," Altab moaned. "It's so painful here ... I have two little children."

Another survivor, whose voice could be heard from deep in the rubble, wept as he called for help.

"We want to live, brother. It's hard to remain alive here. It would have been better to die than enduring such pain to live on. We want to live. Please save us," the man cried.

After the cracks were reported in the walls of Rana Plaza on Tuesday, managers of a local bank that also had an office in the building evacuated their workers. The garment factories, though, kept working, ignoring the instructions of the local industrial police, said Mostafizur Rahman, a director of that paramilitary police force.

The Bangladesh Garment Manufacturers and Exporters Association had also asked the factories to suspend work starting Wednesday morning, hours before the collapse.

Pro-Kremlin youth hunt down 'spice' pushers

MOSCOW (AP) — Two men in their early twenties lie face down in the snow, hands tied behind their backs, heads doused with dark red paint. A dozen young men, some wearing surgical masks, wreck a car with hammers and axes. One sets fire to a plastic bag filled with a greenish powder and a stack of cards that read: "Aroma. Smoking mixes."

The powder is a synthetic drug known as "spice" that is Russia's latest scourge. The pair on the ground are alleged pushers. And the hammer-wielding men? Vigilantes fighting the drug's spread with widespread public approval, admiring television coverage — and, according to critics, the Kremlin's tacit blessing.

The anti-drug gangs roaming streets in Moscow and other urban centers are an offshoot of the pro-Kremlin youth movement Young Russia. The vigilantes, who call themselves the Young Anti-Drugs Special Forces, have tapped into rising public outrage over the spread of drug use in Russia, and the impotence of law enforcement to stop it. They are also stirring concerns about President Vladimir Putin's perceived tolerance for extralegal actions against forces considered harmful to the regime or to public order.

Young Russia and a half dozen other pro-Kremlin youth groups were formed in the mid-2000s, analysts and opposition figures say, to prevent street protests similar to those that ushered pro-Western opposition forces into power in three ex-Soviet states: Georgia, Ukraine and Kyrgyzstan. Russian authorities are accused of encouraging violence, or the threat of violence, by youth gangs when dealing with what they see as threats to stability. The vigilantes' free hand indicates that the spice epidemic is seen as one of such threats.

The Interior Ministry, which controls Russia's police, declined comment to The Associated Press on the gangs, which suspended their activities this month without explanation.

Spice consists of herbs coated in chemicals that mimic the effects of marijuana, cocaine and methamphetamine. In recent years, millions here, mostly teenagers, have smoked various kinds of spice, attracted by its cheapness, availability and reputation for being harmless, officials and anti-drug campaigners say. Reliable figures on usage are not available because of the variety of kinds of spice on offer and the lack of official studies on the phenomenon.

Pushers sell bags of spice for less than $15, in schools or online, from bulletproof cars and shops with barred windows and metal doors. Their phone numbers are often scrawled on walls or sidewalks, or printed on business cards that carry messages such as "100 percent harmless smoking mix" and "Smoke and go to paradise."

Spice is mass produced in China and Southeast Asia and exported to Russia as bath salts, incense and slimming additives, often in mail packages.

Presidents converge on Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Five American presidents past and present gathered in Dallas Thursday for a rare reunion to salute one of their own at the dedication of the George W. Bush Presidential Center.

Profound ideological differences and a bitter history of blaming each other for the nation's woes were giving way — if just for a day — to pomp and pleasantries today as the five members of the most exclusive club in the world were to appear publicly together for the first time in years. For Bush, 66, the ceremony also marked his unofficial return to the public eye four years after the end of his deeply polarizing presidency.

Hundreds of former Bush White House officials and other dignitaries mingled outside on a cool, sun-splashed Texas morning ahead of the ceremony. Obama, fresh off a fundraiser for Democrats in Dallas the night before, arrived mid-morning at the sprawling, 23-acre complex.

Obama was to join former Democratic presidents Bill Clinton and Jimmy Carter in making brief remarks at the event. Bush's father, George H.W. Bush, also was to speak before the 43rd president addressed the crowd.

In a reminder of his duties as the current Oval Office inhabitant, Obama planned to travel to Waco in the afternoon for a memorial for victims of last week's deadly fertilizer plant explosion.

Key moments and themes from George W. Bush's presidency — the harrowing, the controversial and the inspiring — would not be far removed from the minds of the presidents and guests assembled to dedicate the center, where interactive exhibits invite scrutiny of Bush's major choices as president, such as the financial bailout, the Iraq War and the international focus on HIV and AIDS.

punctuate the chaos at ground zero three days after 9/11. Addressing a crowd of rescue workers amid the ruins of the World Trade Center, Bush said: "I can hear you. The rest of the world hears you. And the people who knocked these buildings down will hear all of us soon."

"Memories are fading rapidly, and the profound impact of that attack is becoming dim with time," Bush told The Associated Press earlier this month. "We want to make sure people remember not only the lives lost and the courage shown, but the lesson that the human condition overseas matters to the national security of our country."

children," he added. The bill passed out of the Judiciary Committee earlier this month. Krieger said the job now is to make sure it gets through the Ways and Means Committee. He said efforts were taken in drawing up the bill to see that it would have minimal fiscal impact.

PENSION Shortfalls made up by taxpayers

Democrat-backed bill that would cut pension benefits for retired government workers over the objection of Republicans who said it doesn't go far enough to address the rising costs of public-employee pensions. It goes to Democratic Gov. John Kitzhaber, who has said he'll sign it but has also called for much more aggressive pension cuts.

The Democrats' victory on pensions was largely overshadowed by the surprise struggles with their tax-increase plan. It came just two days after House Speaker Tina Kotek, D-Portland, confidently declared that she had enough votes to pass it, including at least two Republican votes that would be needed to reach the supermajority required to raise taxes. The scaled-back bill is estimated to raise about $18 million over the next two years, less than 7 percent of the $275 million in new revenue that Democrats said they'll need to balance the state budget and increase funding for schools. The new revenue will be dedicated to mental health.

Buoyed by their success blocking the tax increases, Republican leaders said they'd keep pushing for stronger cuts to benefits from the Public Employees Retirement System.

"By taking this tax package off the table, now we can get to a more serious discussion about PERS," said Rep. Vicki Berger, R-Salem.

The sanitized tax bill now goes to the Senate, where lawmakers are likely to work up their own plan. Democrats have slim control of the Senate but will need at least two Republican votes to raise taxes.

GOP senators have said they're open to tax hikes if they come with steeper pension cuts.

The Democratic pension measure approved Wednesday would save state and local governments about $460 million over the next two years, mostly by reducing cost-of-living increases for retirees earning more than $20,000 a year. Kitzhaber proposed $860 million in cuts, and Republicans are pushing for more than $1 billion.

In addition to their proposed cuts, Democrats want the pension system to delay $350 million worth of taxpayer contributions into future budget cycles.

Severe investment losses during the Great Recession erased 27 percent of the pension fund in 2008, requiring steep increases in taxpayer contributions to make up the difference and limiting money available for state and local government services.

Speedgolf got day in spotlight

Anticipation had built for half a year in the speedgolf community.

The first World Speedgolf Championships were held in October at Bandon Dunes Golf Resort. Before the event, CBS had agreed to show a 30-minute production on the event before its tournament coverage on Saturday of Masters week.

Many of us who participated in the tournament — I was among 41 amateurs to go with the field of 15 golfers in the elite division — were perched in front of our TVs that recent Saturday morning.

My first reaction was that Bandon Dunes looked great on network TV.

That was before an unexpected three-second treat midway through the show.

A small portion of the broadcast focused on the amateurs. By chance they included my one big highlight of the day. During a 65-minute exercise of mostly golf futility, I managed to sink a downhill putt from off the 15th green, while catching up with the woman who started in front of me. On the CBS show, you can see her celebrate as my putt goes in the hole, and then me bending down to grab the ball and charge toward the next tee.

Unfortunately, the cameramen didn't get me actually taking the putt, which would have shown how difficult (or lucky) it was. Fortunately, they were smart enough not to include the footage of my tee shot on the 16th hole — a hook so bad I never found the ball. As I ran toward the fairway, a cart sped alongside me with a cameraman filming me in action. My running form might have been good — the speed portion is always my strength in speedgolf. The confused look as I tried to find the ball certainly wasn't good.

Anyhow, within a few minutes of that segment airing on TV, I heard from three different people who had recognized me.

While my three seconds of personal fame were cool, the entire 30-minute production was great for Bandon Dunes and for speedgolf.

The different aspects of the resort were highlighted by CBS, and golfers who haven't been to the Oregon Coast had a chance to see how beautiful the setting is. Meanwhile, the three pros from the resort who participated in the event — Jeff Simonds, Brandon Carter and Michael Chupka Jr. — all got a little air time.

The TV coverage should provide a big boost for the emerging sport of speedgolf. Bandon Dunes has hosted a tournament for a decade, and a few events have been held in other parts of Oregon and in other states.

But now it might take off. Tim Scott, one of the driving forces behind the annual Bandon Dunes Speedgolf Classic, retired from his job as a teacher and now is the director of Speedgolf International.

Scott recently started a speedgolf league in Sacramento, Calif. Denver has a speedgolf group, too.

And this week, Scott began publicizing a new speedgolf tournament in New Jersey that will be held in May. That goes with tournaments in Florida and Virginia in June, one in Minnesota in September, and two events in Oregon, the second Salem Speedgolf Classic on May 25 and the Oregon Speedgolf Open in Banks in August.

The Second World Speedgolf Championships will be held Oct. 26-27 at Bandon Dunes.

That's at least six organized tournaments in one calendar year, a big jump over past years.

For people who missed the CBS production, it's on TV three more times this weekend on the cable channel CBS Sportsnet — at noon Friday, 8:30 a.m. Saturday and 7 a.m. Sunday.

Kylee Woodman smiles as she listens to the accolades from family friend Aron Boesl after signing her letter of intent to play tennis for Slippery Rock University in Pennsylvania in the fall. She will graduate from North Bend this year.

Woodman will go east for tennis

■ North Bend senior will play for Slippery Rock University

By JOHN GUNTHER
The World

NORTH BEND — Kylee Woodman went looking for the perfect fit to continue her tennis career in college and found it on the other side of the country.

The North Bend senior signed a letter of intent Wednesday to play tennis at Slippery Rock University in Pennsylvania.

"It was a long search," Woodman said. "I couldn't be any happier."

Slippery Rock was especially appealing to Woodman because of its academics. She plans to study physical therapy.

"It was definitely the right school, the right balance of academics and athletics," she said.

She will receive some scholarship aid both for academics and tennis from the school, which plays at the NCAA Division II level.

Woodman has been one of the area's top tennis players and a three-time state qualifier. She hopes to make a fourth trip to state next month.

"I'm training hard and looking forward to districts," she said after signing her letter in front of a large group of supporters including fellow students, family and friends at the North Bend Hall of Champions.

Woodman started playing tennis more than a decade ago and attributes a lot of her success to the area's junior program.

Her mom, Sally, encouraged her to get her start in the sport.

"I just wanted somebody to hit the ball with," Sally Woodman said. "Pretty soon, it's like, 'Mom, you're not good enough to hit balls with.'"

Now Woodman does a lot of her training with Stacy McKenna Farm, herself a former North Bend standout who played for Washington State University.

"I'm just really happy for Kylee," she said. "I'm very happy for the Woodmans."

"It takes a lot of dedication, not only on Kylee's part, but also by her parents."

McKenna Farm said parents provide a lot of financial and emotional support, as well as time, for students like Woodman who play tennis beyond the local level, competing in regional events.

Bulldog cheer team repeats national title

By JOHN GUNTHER
The World

NORTH BEND — A year ago, North Bend's cheerleading squad won the national title in its division at a competition in Las Vegas.

Over the weekend, the squad one-upped itself.

The Bulldogs repeated as champions in their division by winning the overall title as well, besting 12 other squads at the Sharp Invitational Las Vegas Nationals.

"I'm super excited," said Raegan Spence, one of the squad's captains.

The Bulldogs used the same routine from the state championships, with a tweak on one of the stunts. That was the squad's strength in Las Vegas, Spence said.

North Bend also has a strong tumbling squad, and the Bulldogs scored high in that area while placing third at the state championships.

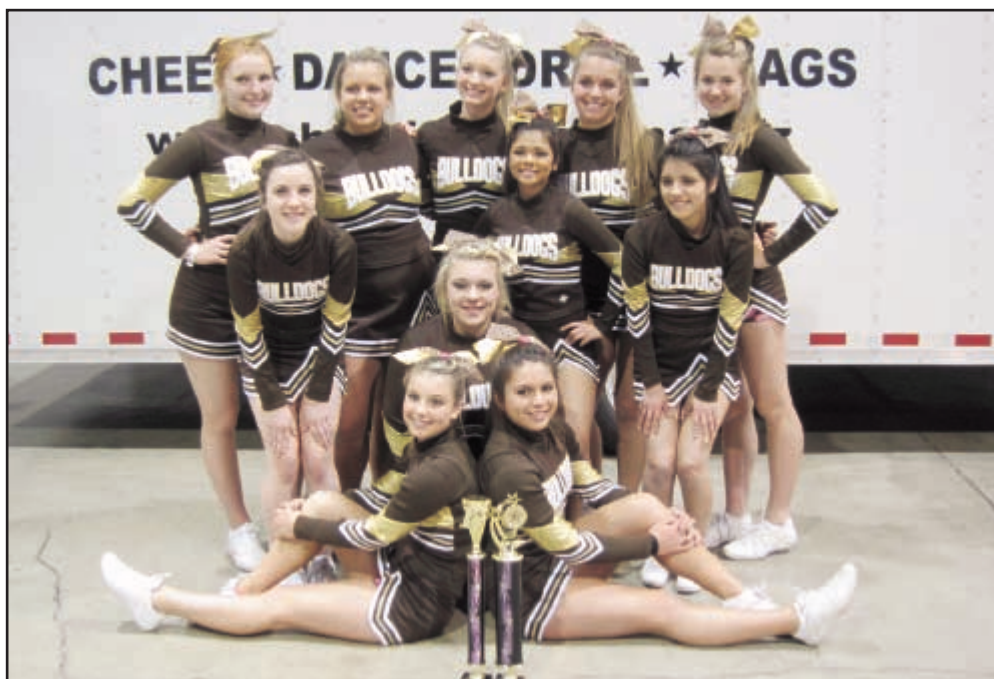

North Bend's most experienced tumbler, co-captain ShaeLee Iparraguirre, won first place in a tumbling competition at the national event.

Spence and Iparraguirre were two of five North Bend team members who also were part of last year's team. The others are Rylee Stringfield, Anahi Ayala and Lexi Laird.

The newcomers are Chelsea Fuels, Edith Ayala, Emily Midyette, Karen LaGesse, Abby Padgett and Taylor Clarno.

The team is coached by Lena Franson and her daughter, Brittany.

Last year's national title was a surprise — none of the six members of North Bend's competition had participated in even the state tournament last winter, but they placed third there and then won in Las Vegas.

Spence said this year's title was more rewarding.

"It was better than last year," she said. "We were all excited to defend our title — and there were twice as many girls."

Spence said the team's effort was impressive considering that several of the girls have other activities. For example, she is part of North Bend's top doubles team in tennis.

"All the people are really dedicated," she said. "We made time" for cheer practice.

Now that North Bend has won the national title twice, there's one big hole in the team's resume, Spence said.

"We definitely want to get first at state," she said.

Most of the team is eligible to return next year. Iparraguirre and Stringfield are the only seniors.

NFL draft has strength in depth, not glamour

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — This year's NFL draft is heavy on size and light on glamour.

There's no high-profile quarterback destined to go No. 1 and instantly become the face of a downtrodden franchise. There's not even a running back or wide receiver worthy of the top overall pick, someone with the kind of swagger that wins over fans weary of losing.

Nope, there's just beef. And lots of it.

There's 6-foot-6, 306-pound Luke Joeckel, the offensive tackle from Texas A&M whom the Kansas City Chiefs are expected to select first overall. There's also Eric Fisher of Central Michigan and Lane Johnson of Oklahoma, two more 300-pounders who could be snapped up in the first 10 picks.

Even the defensive side of the ball is big on bigness: Florida's Sharrif Floyd, Utah's Star Lotulelei and Sylvester Williams of North Carolina are considered premium space eaters.

Utilitarian? Sure. Flashy? Not so much.

"There are a lot of good football players there,"

Broncos President John Elway insisted. "It's kind of a matter of what kind of flavor you like, but there are plenty of defensive linemen — not only defensive ends but defensive linemen — in this draft, and it's deeper than most."

Only twice since the AFL-NFL merger in 1970 has an offensive tackle been chosen first overall, but the Chiefs figure to make it three when NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell reads off the name of the league's newest millionaire shortly after 5 p.m.

Cardinals complete sweep

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Yadier Molina hit a two-run single off Stephen Strasburg during St. Louis' three-run first inning, and the Cardinals beat the Nationals 4-2 Wednesday to complete a sweep and give Washington's All-Star ace the only four-start losing streak of his young career.

Jaime Garcia (2-1) allowed a run on Bryce Harper's sixth-inning ground-out, but otherwise added to the offensive struggles of the Nationals, who have lost six consecutive home games and nine of their last 12 overall to fall to 10-11.

Washington produced only four runs in the three-game set, a rematch of the 2012 NL division series won by St. Louis.

Needing to be nearly perfect given Washington's lack of offense, Strasburg (1-4) struggled through a 26-pitch, 12-minute first inning.

Strasburg, who hasn't won since opening day against Miami, settled down and threw 110 pitches over seven innings, giving up no other runs and a total of five hits, along with seven strikeouts.

Rockies 6, Braves 5, 12 innings: Wilin Rosario scored on Yorvit Torrealba's single to left in the 12th inning as Colorado rallied in the ninth to deny Atlanta's Tim Hudson his 200th career win.

Michael Cuddyer and Josh Rutledge homered for the Rockies, who ended a three-game skid behind one-hit pitching by the bullpen over the last six innings. Matt Belisle (1-1), the fourth reliever used by Colorado, pitched two perfect frames.

Diamondbacks 3, Giants 2, 10 innings: Pinch hitter Will Nieves delivered a sacrifice fly in the 10th inning to lift Arizona to a victory over San Francisco.

Gerardo Parra and A.J. Pollack also drove in a run for the Diamondbacks, who beat the Giants in 11 innings Tuesday night. Didi Gregorius had two hits.

Arizona led 2-1 before Brandon Crawford hit a tying homer off David Hernandez (1-0) with one out in the ninth.

Reds 1, Cubs 0: Mat Latos (1-0) retired the first 10 batters and 15 of the first 16 he faced and mostly spared an overworked bullpen, leading Cincinnati over Chicago.

Todd Frazier hit a long home run to provide all the scoring Latos would need. With one out in the sixth inning of a scoreless tie, Frazier blasted a 2-1 pitch from Jeff Samardzija (1-4) 480 feet to straightaway center field to increase his team-leading home run total to six.

Pirates 5, Phillies 3: Brandon Inge got a pinch-hit tiebreaking RBI single in the eighth inning and Pittsburgh rallied to beat Philadelphia.

Roy Halladay pitched six innings of one-hit ball and Chase Utley and Ryan Howard hit upper-deck solo homers for the Phillies off Wandy Rodriguez, but Mike Adams (1-2) couldn't protect an eighth-inning lead.

Pedro Alvarez hit a solo homer off Antonio Bastardo in the seventh and his RBI single in the fourth was the only hit off Halladay. Halladay struck out eight and walked two.

Mets 7, Dodgers 3, 10 innings: Jordany Valdespin hit a grand slam in the 10th inning and New York rallied past Los Angeles to save early sensation Matt Harvey from his first loss of the season.

David Wright tied it with a two-out single in the ninth off Los Angeles closer Brandon League, who had his first blown save in six chances.

Padres 2, Brewers 1: Edinson Volquez (1-3) threw seven strong innings and Carlos Quentin hit his first home run of the season, helping San Diego snap Milwaukee's nine-game winning streak.

Marco Estrada (2-1) pitched 6 1-3 innings, allowing two runs, one earned, with two walks and three strikeouts.

Zobrist put the Rays up 2-0 on a two-out, two-run double off Andy Pettitte (3-1) in the fifth.

Rangers 11, Angels 3: Nelson Cruz capped a nine-run fourth inning with a three-run homer, Lance Berkman had four RBIs and the Rangers helped Yu Darvish cruise to a victory over the Angels.

Darvish (4-1) allowed three hits over six scoreless innings, struck out 11 and lowered his ERA to 1.65 after getting staked to an 11-0 lead.

DRAFT

Joeckel is considered the surest thing in a draft full of uncertainty.

He protected the blind side of Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Manziel last season, won the Outland Trophy as college football's top interior lineman, and wowed just about everyone at the NFL's annual scouting combine with his speed, agility and, yes, his size.

"I think this year, the offensive line position has some true prospects in it," Chiefs general manager John Dorsey said. "Every draft has its own unique set of characteristics. Last year's draft had its own unique set of characteristics. This year's draft has its own unique characteristics."

Last year's draft made for must-see TV.

One of the deepest quarterback crops in recent years stoked the passions of fan bases in several NFL cities, including Indianapolis, which took Andrew Luck with the first overall pick.

It was the fourth straight year that a quarterback went No. 1.

NASCAR: 3 grams is major violation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PRO BASKETBALL

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — NASCAR has a zero tolerance policy when it comes to engines, tires and fuel on a race car. Anything even slightly improper is dealt with swiftly and severely. NASCAR always throws the book at offenders.

Matt Kenseth and Joe Gibbs Racing were no exception, getting hit with one of the largest penalties in NASCAR history Wednesday after the engine from Kenseth's race-winning car at Kansas failed a post-race inspection. The team had nothing to do with the error, and manufacturer Toyota immediately accepted responsibility for one of eight connecting rods failing to meet the minimum weight requirement by 3 grams — less than an empty envelope.

"We take full responsibility for this issue with the engine. JGR is not involved in the process of selecting parts or assembling the Cup Series engines," Toyota Racing Development President Lee White said.

Kenseth was stripped of everything but the trophy from Sunday's win at Kansas. He was docked 50 driver points in the standings — he earned only 48 points for the victory — and NASCAR also erased the three bonus points he earned for the win that would have been applied in seeding for the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship. In addition, the victory will not be credited toward his eligibility for a wild card berth in the Chase.

NASCAR also suspended crew chief Jason Ratcliff for six races and fined him $200,000. And in a rare move, car owner Joe Gibbs had his owner's license suspended for the next six races and he won't earn car owner points during that time. He also was docked 50 car owner points while Toyota lost five points in the manufacturer standings.

The Rose and Sugar will host the first semifinals Jan. 1, 2015. The next season, the Cotton (Arlington) and Orange bowls will host the semifinals on New Year's Eve. The semis will be played at the Fiesta (Glendale, Ariz.) and Chick-fil-A (Atlanta) after the 2016 season.

Bandon Crossings will host free youth clinic Saturday

THE WORLD

Bandon Crossings will host a free youth clinic for golfers in first through eighth grade on Saturday.

The one-hour clinic starts to confirm a spot in the clinic, call Chris at 760-625-2348 or Karen at 760-625-2315. Do not call the golf course.

The run of signal-callers didn't stop there, either. The Redskins traded up to select Heisman Trophy winner Robert Griffin III at No. 2, and two more quarterbacks went in the first round.

West Virginia's Geno Smith is expected to go in the first round this year, perhaps as early as No. 2 to Jacksonville. But outside the strong-armed but erratic quarterback, the market at the NFL's most critical position is weak. That means a handful of teams in need — Oakland, Buffalo, Cleveland, Philadelphia and Arizona among them — might wait until later in the draft to make their move.

That's all assuming that no trades are made on the opening night.

Quarterbacks who could still be on the board when the draft resumes with the second round Friday night include USC's Matt Barkley, Florida State's E.J. Manuel and Ryan Nassib of Syracuse.

"This is really a meat-and-potatoes draft, certainly early in the first couple of rounds with linemen, which is exciting," said Eagles general manager Howie Roseman, who will pick fourth.

"It may not be the flashiest thing, but it's exciting," he said. "It's hard to find big guys who can move, play with power, and there are a lot of guys in this draft."

Guys who can protect those expensive quarterbacks.

Joeckel may be the top offensive tackle available, but Fisher and Johnson are both expected to go early in the draft. And they'll probably spend their careers lining up against a slew of players on the defensive side of the ball who could be picked early in the first round, too.

The Oakland Raiders, who pick third, have had their eye on Floyd and Lotulelei, among others, and defensive ends Dion Jordan of Oregon, Ziggy Ansah of BYU and Barkevious Mingo of LSU should have their names called in the first couple hours Thursday night.

Defensive back Dee Milliner is a trendy choice to go in the top 10, and offensive linemen D.J. Fluker and Chance Warmack — Milliner's teammates from national champion Alabama — also are expected to go early in a draft that is more wide open than any in recent history.

coach Dustin Hood. "She's put a lot of hard work in. It's nice to see that hard work pay off."

Woodman has been primarily a singles player for the Bulldogs. Hood said he can't wait to see how she does in college, when she can play both singles and doubles.

"I think she's going to be a solid doubles player," Hood said.

Woodman's father, Doug, said she worked hard both on the courts and in school at North Bend.

Woodman will head to Slippery Rock in August. The school is in a relatively small community in central Pennsylvania. Slippery Rock has about 3,000 residents, while the university has close to 9,000 students.

Drew lifts Red Sox to win in series finale

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Stephen Drew hit a two-run triple, David Ortiz had two hits and drove in a run and the Boston Red Sox beat the Oakland Athletics 6-5 on Wednesday afternoon to take a three-game series.

It was Boston's ninth win in 12 games and came after a 13-0 loss to Oakland a night earlier.

Chris Young had a three-run homer and a solo shot for the Athletics, who finished a six-game road trip 1-5. They were swept at the Tampa Bay Rays over the weekend.

Ortiz is 8 for 16 since returning to the lineup on Saturday for the first time since last August. He missed 71 of the final 72 games last season and all of spring training with an Achilles tendon injury.

Blue Jays 6, Orioles 5, 11 innings: Jim Johnson walked Maicer Izturis with the bases loaded in the 11th inning to force in the tiebreaking run, and the Blue Jays beat the Orioles to avert a three-game sweep and end Baltimore's run of consecutive extra-inning victories at 17.

The Blue Jays hit four home runs, but the decisive run came without Izturis taking a swing. With two outs in the 11th, J.P. Arencibia and Munenori Kawasaki singled before Johnson (1-2) hit Brett Lawrie with a pitch and issued a four-pitch walk to Izturis, the No. 9 hitter in the lineup.

White Sox 3, Indians 2: Alex Rios hit a two-run homer and the White Sox beat the Indians to stop a four-game losing streak.

Jeff Keppinger had two hits and drove in a run for the White Sox, who earned a split of the rain-shortened series.

Astros 10, Mariners 3: Chris Carter, Ronny Cedeno and Brandon Laird homered, Lucas Harrell pitched seven innings, and the Astros beat the Mariners.

The Astros took two of three in the series, and four of their seven wins this season have come against the Mariners, their new AL West foe. Seattle and Miami are the only teams without a series win this season.

Tigers 7, Royals 5: Jose Valverde returned to Detroit with a save and Victor Martinez drove in a pair of runs to help the Tigers beat the Royals.

Max Scherzer (2-0) got the win, allowing five runs in five innings, with three Tigers relievers finishing the game. Valverde, called up earlier in the day, returned to the Tigers with a perfect ninth inning. Valverde lost the closing role during the postseason and wasn't offered a contract, but signed a minor-league deal earlier this month and returned to Detroit after a short minor-league stint.

Rays 3, Yankees 0: Alex Cobb (3-1) scattered three hits over 8 1-3 innings, Ben Zobrist drove in two runs and the Rays beat the Yankees.

Spurs take 2-0 edge on Lakers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN ANTONIO — Tony Parker had 28 points and seven assists and San Antonio beat the Los Angeles Lakers 102-91 on Wednesday night to take a 2-0 lead in their first-round playoff series.

Tim Duncan and Kawhi Leonard had 16 points each, Manu Ginobili added 13 points and Matt Bonner had 10 for San Antonio.

Dwight Howard and Steve Blake had 16 points each to lead Los Angeles. Metta World Peace and Pau Gasol added 13 points each, but no other player had more than nine as the Lakers shot 45 percent from the field.

Game 3 is Friday night in Los Angeles.

The Spurs shot 51 percent from the field after shooting 38 percent in Game 1. San Antonio was 7 for 14 on 3-pointers, including 5 for 7 in the first half.

The Lakers shot 37 percent (9 for 24) in the first quarter, a slight improvement over their 7-for-20 performance (35 percent) in the opening quarter of Game 1.

Thunder 105, Rockets 102: Kevin Durant and Russell Westbrook both scored 29 points, and Oklahoma City recovered after squandering a 15-point lead in the fourth quarter to take a 2-0 series lead.

Durant hit the go-ahead 3-pointer with 2:28 to play, and the Thunder didn't relinquish the lead after that. Durant missed a free throw with 1 second left, but Houston was out of timeouts and Carlos Delfino couldn't connect on a desperation shot at the final buzzer.

James Harden scored 36 points and spearheaded a 21-2 comeback that wiped out the big deficit and put the Rockets up 95-91. But the top-seeded Thunder were able to respond and protect the home-court advantage they'd spent all season earning.

Game 3 is Saturday night in Houston.

zone defense. Oklahoma City came back to tie it before Harden knifed to the basket for a layup to give Houston its last lead, 97-95 with 2:42 to play. Durant answered right away with a deep 3 from the left wing, and the Thunder came up with back-to-back stops before Thabo Sefolosha's 3 provided a little breathing room at 101-97.

Pacers 113, Hawks 98: Paul George followed his triple-double by scoring a playoff career-high 27 points to lead Indiana to a 2-0 series lead.

The Pacers have won four straight home games over the Hawks. It's the first time

Indiana has held a 2-0 series lead since the 2004 Eastern Conference semifinals.

George, playing in his first game since being named the league's Most Improved Player, was 11 of 21 from the field, had eight rebounds, three assists and four steals and again played well defensively. George Hill had 22 points.

Atlanta was led by Devin Harris with 17 points. Jeff Teague and Josh Smith both had 16.

Game 3 is Saturday in Atlanta.

Indiana again took control late in the first quarter and never trailed again.

Tigers top Riddle

THE WORLD

BANDON — Bandon's baseball team topped visiting Riddle 12-2 on Wednesday as the Tigers tuned up for a couple of big games in the coming days.

Quentin Coomer, Robert Martino, Chance Garrett and Coleton Jackson each had two hits for Bandon in the win. Jackson drove in three runs.

Mychal Yarbora pitched a three-hitter in the five-inning victory.

"We played well enough to get a pretty decent win," Bandon coach Tyler Pendergast said.

Riddle is 11-5 on the season and in contention for a playoff spot in Class 2A-1A.

"Their record is pretty good," Pendergast said. "They're in the middle of constant league play. They might not have pitched their top dog or dogs."

Still, that didn't take away from Bandon's performance, he said.

"I thought we hit the ball well," he said. "We had a few mental errors we're going to try to fix."

The Tigers host Marshfield on Friday and then host Glide on Tuesday — the first of three matchups with the Wildcats that are crucial in the playoff chase.

"We're in a little stretch of pretty good competition," Pendergast said.

TRACK & FIELD

Glide Small Schools Meet: Pacific's Mike Wagner won both the 300-meter hurdles and triple jump to lead the Pirates to second place behind the host Wildcats in the 11-school meet Tuesday.

Glide finished with 94.5 points, while Pacific had 91 and Illinois Valley 90.

Wagner took the day off from his specialty, the 400 meters where he leads Class 1A, to compete in the hurdles for the first time. He finished in 44.04 seconds, which ranks fifth on the season for the classification.

Wagner also helped Pacific win the 4x400-meter relay.

Pacific's girls finished fourth behind Glide, Illinois Valley and Gilchrist. Riley Engdahl finished second in both the 100 and 200 for the Pirates.

Controller

The World is seeking an experienced, hands-on Controller to lead our financial department and join our leadership team. Reporting to the Publisher, this results-oriented position provides pro-active financial analysis and evaluation, advice to senior managers in performing their responsibilities and directs the small local accounting staff to accomplish specific initiatives.

The focus of this position is financial planning, analysis and consultation, including maintaining internal accounting controls; ensuring accurate financial statements; providing the leadership team with financial information and analysis to make informed decisions and accurately assess the ongoing impact of strategies; and protecting the assets of the company.

The successful candidate will have solid accounting (GL, budgeting, financial statement prep, AR/AP) experience, prior management experience, analytical and organization skills, solid computer application skills, and demonstrated ability to effectively lead in a complex business environment. The successful candidate will have demonstrated innovative leadership, communication and staff development skills. Prior accounting management experience and a bachelor's degree or higher in accounting is required. CPA preferred. Prior experience in the newspaper industry is a plus.

We offer competitive pay and benefits. This is an excellent opportunity for a proven financial professional to bring his/her skills, ideas and knowledge to an established organization.

As part of Lee Enterprises, we offer a strong package of pay and benefits, including medical, dental, vision and 401(k). See our Web site at www.theworldlink.com. Learn about our parent company at www.lee.net.

Please apply online at www.lee.net/careers. Submit cover letter, resume and salary requirements.

We are an equal opportunity and drug-free workplace. Pre-employment drug screen and criminal background check required.

CASE NO 12CV0096

NOTICE OF SHERIFF'S SALE ON WRIT OF EXECUTION IN FORECLOSURE

GMAC MORTGAGE, LLC, its Successors in interest and/or assigns Plaintiff, Vs.

JEFF DIXON; JANET DIXON; OREGON FIRST COMMUNITY CREDIT UNION UNITED STATES OF AMERICA; WESTERN MERCANTILE AGENCY, INC.; AND OCCUPANTS OF THE PREMISES Defendant(s),

By virtue of a Writ of Execution issued out of the above entitled Circuit Court on March 26, 2013 pursuant to a judgment of foreclosure enrolled and docketed on March 05, 2013, in favor of Plaintiffs, and against Defendants, wherein it was ordered that the following described real property be sold in the manner prescribed by law for the sale of real property upon execution, to satisfy the judgment against, In Rem the Property at: 965 Plymouth Avenue, Coos Bay OR. 97420, defendant, in the sum of $209,459.86 together with interest thereon at the rate of 9% per annum ($51.65 per diem) from March 6, 2013 and the cost of this writ, until paid.

The West 10 feet of Lot 4, All of Lot 5 and the East 20 feet of Lot 6, Block 113 First Addition to Empire, Coos County, Oregon.

Commonly known as: 965 Plymouth Avenue, Coos Bay, Oregon 97420

I will on Monday May 06, 2013, at 10:00 o'clock a.m. at the main entrance of the Coos County Courthouse, 250 N. Baxter, Coquille, Coos County, Oregon, sell at public auction, (subject to redemption as provided by law), to the highest bidder for cash; all of the interest which the Defendants, had on June 09, 2005 the date of the trust deed, and all the interest Defendants had thereafter.

Before bidding at the sale a prospective bidder should independently investigate:

- (a) The priority of the lien or interest of the judgment creditor;
- (b) Land use laws and regulations applicable to the property;
- (c) Approved uses for the property;
- (d) Limits on farming or forest practices on the property;
- (e) Rights of neighboring property owners; and
- (f) Environmental laws and regulations that affect the property.

BRIDGE

Jascha Heifetz, a great violinist who was born in Russia but moved to the United States at 16, said, "If I don't practice one day, I know it; two days, the critics know it; three days, the public knows it."

Bridge players do not need to practice that often — but it would be beneficial if they did.

Look at the North hand. He deals and opens one diamond, and South responds one spade. What should North rebid?

North has three possible choices, but all have drawbacks: one no-trump

(with a singleton), two clubs (aims at minors) and two spades (only three trumps). Best is two spades, which limits the hand and looks for a major-suit fit. We love majors and dislike minors. (I will say more on this tomorrow.)

South should then jump to three no-trump. If North has four spades, he will correct to four spades. Here, though, he passes.

After West leads the heart six, South sees a disappointing four top tricks: one spade, two hearts and one club. Four more are available in diamonds, and another winner can come from clubs. However, declarer must be careful to take the club finesse at trick two. Although the finesse loses, West cannot safely lead another heart, and the contract comes home.

Note that if a diamond is led at trick two, the contract dies. East wins with his ace and leads a heart through the ace-jack. When West gets in with his club king (or East with his spade king), the defenders cash enough hearts to defeat the contract.

Yes, playing ace and another club works here, but not if East has the king.

Flakey headlight probably just needs new bulb

Dear Tom and Ray:

I have a 2000 Subaru Outback wagon. Recently, the passenger-side daytime running light and low-beam headlight stopped working. When I got out of my car to check that the headlight was out, I happened to bump the front of the headlight casing and — lo and behold! — the headlight came back on. I opened the hood and tried to see if any wires were loose, but it did not appear so, and tugging on the wires does not cause the light to go on or off. So now, whenever I start the car and the headlight isn't working, I simply get out and give the front of the headlight casing a bump —

Fonzie-style — and that usually does the trick (sometimes it takes two or three whacks for it to stay on). What could be causing this, and how can I fix it? — Steve TOM: You can fix it with a new headlight bulb, Steve.

RAY: I'm guessing the filament is cracked and is separating slightly when the bulb cools off. And somehow, when you pound on the headlight casing with your fist, you're getting the two parts of the filament to make contact again.

TOM: But eventually — probably by the time you read this, Steve — the bulb will fail permanently, and the Fonzie trick will only result in a large black-and-blue mark on your hand. Hint: The time to stop banging on it and give up is when you're putting dents in the hood.

RAY: Here's the good news, Steve: A bulb for this car costs less than 10 bucks. And you easily can change it yourself.

TOM: So, pound away as long as you want. But sometime before you actually break your hand, I'd recommend just replacing the bulb instead.

Your Birthday:

FRIDAY, APRIL 26, 2013

Although conditions may look promising, don't make the mistake of thinking you can coast on circumstances. You'll need to work hard to take advantage of the opportunities that come your way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

— If an agreement you make is not constructed fairly, you will be forced to make some adjustments later, which will prove difficult. Make sure things are equitable from the get-go.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

— Before implementing a new program, be sure everyone involved understands exactly how it will work. It could quickly fail if people are working at cross-purposes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

— Don't attempt to turn a serious meeting into a social event. Mixing business with pleasure in this instance would only end badly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

— Procedures shouldn't be altered if they have been producing good results. Changing things for change's sake would only make things worse.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

— Focus and deep concentration are essential to your success. Whatever you do, don't let your thoughts wander off what's important.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — If you have to deal with someone whose ideals and standards aren't on par with yours, take things with a grain of salt. Check out their information before you act on it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)

— Guard against inclinations to do things the hard way. Remember, just because something comes easily doesn't make it worthless. In fact, it could be quite valuable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)

— Even if you're willing to do more for your friends than they've ever done for you, it doesn't necessarily make them self-serving. Keep your expectations reasonable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

— Evaluate your objectives as realistically as possible. If you don't, you might strive to achieve something that turns out to be worthless.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

— A good friendship could be jeopardized if it becomes competitive instead of compatible. Don't be the one to introduce such friction; instead be cooperative.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)

— Examining your alternatives from every angle is the smart thing to do, but don't overanalyze things to the point of paralysis. First thought, best thought.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

— Don't take offense if a colleague is paying a lot of attention to a relatively new acquaintance. Your pal is just trying to get to know him or her better.

SATURDAY, APRIL 27, 2013

The possibility of you fulfilling a number of secret ambitions looks to be pretty good in the year ahead. Your sense of timing will be better than it has been in the past.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

— If you are far too sensitive for your own good and read all kinds of slights into the actions or words of others, you're likely to let the least little thing ruin your day.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

— There's a good chance that most of your perceptions won't be in line with reality. You'll allow your imagination to make erroneous judgments that won't serve your interests.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

— Do your best to accomplish as many essential tasks as possible early in the day. As the afternoon closes in, your sense of priorities might dissolve.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

— It'll be important to guard against your more extravagant inclinations. If you lack control, you won't be too effective at managing your resources.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

— Involvements with others are likely to go much smoother when conducted early in the day. Don't wait until the afternoon, when everyone's patience will be wearing thin.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)

— There is a strong possibility that you might judge people based on your emotions rather than your logic. If you do, others will evaluate you in the same manner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)

— If you feel compelled to keep up with the Joneses, you'll quickly exhaust your resources. Status isn't worth bankruptcy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)

— Be realistic regarding the demands you make of loved ones. Without realizing it, you might expect more of them than they're able to give.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

— If you have some confidential information that you're anxious to talk about, make certain that you don't spill the beans to the wrong people.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

— Because you're likely to be unusually receptive to investment proposals, be extra careful that you can tell the good from the bad. Don't act impulsively.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)

— You're opening yourself up for disappointment if you expect credit for an accomplishment that you have yet to achieve. Do what needs doing, be patient and let your deeds speak for themselves.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

— To be successful, you must be tenacious and quick on your feet. If one of these elements is missing, you won't have much to boast about.
