Prolific contractor Mike Holmes continues to 'make it right'

By Jacqui Wiens

is name is essentially synonymous with home renovations, and his efforts in advocating for more stringent building standards, as well as promoting the trades amongst young people, earned acknowledgment in the Canadian House of Commons in 2006. Now, prolific contractor and Canadian television host Mike Holmes is taking his commitment to "making it right" even further, with a new reality series entitled "Home Free," airing a new episode Wednesday, July 29, on Fox.

"Home Free" expands on Holmes' storied dedication to giving back and setting things right. It's the contractor's first non-HGTV television series and adds a competitive element to the renovations covered. Holmes leads nine couples through the renovation of eight different rundown houses, in which the couples must live during the overhaul.

Each week, the contestants will move to a new house, where Holmes will assign challenges to test just how much the do-ityourselfers actually know. He's still the Holmes you know, and he won't keep quiet if someone makes a mistake, but he will be there to teach them and explain what is being done wrong. In each episode, the couple who "didn't perform up to code" will be eliminated, while the others move to the next house. Eventually, after fixing up several houses and expanding and refining their skills along the way, the final two couples will battle it out for their dream home.

It's been a long road for Holmes to get to this point in his career. While his first TV show, "Holmes on Homes," kicked off on HGTV in 2003, that wasn't even close to the start of his involvement in construction. As young as six years old, Holmes was learning about his future trade from his father, apparently assisting with rewiring a section of his family's home. By 12, Holmes had enough expertise to — with his father's guidance — install the plumbing in his uncle's basement.

When Holmes was 19, he passed two milestones in his life. He married Alexandra Lorex, future mother of his three children, and founded a contracting company despite never having finished high school. With business cards that advertised him as "The F-up Fixer," Holmes seems to have had a focus on fixing poorly renovated or constructed buildings since the early days of his career. Two years later, Holmes expanded his success with a second company.

In his late 20s, things took a turn for the worse. The construction industry and Holmes' business were severely impacted by the recession, forcing him to sell the company and his car. Holmes and Lorex divorced when he was 30, and Holmes' father fell down the stairs to his death just a few weeks later.

So, after losing his company, his wife and his father, Holmes found himself working on HGTV's home renovation show "Just Ask Jon Eakes," building sets. It was there that he met Alliance Atlantis's then-director of studio programming, Michael Quast, and launched into a tirade about shoddy construction work and amateurs thinking they could do renovations on their own.

Quast was impressed by Holmes' passion and agreed that the concept would make a good series. One small sticking point came up when Ouast wanted Holmes to host the series he had proposed. Holmes insisted he was only a contractor, but Quast eventually convinced him to give it a shot.

It took two years to get enough publicity to find participants for the first season, but "Holmes on Homes" premiered in 2003 and was a phenomenon by the following year. The surge in the housing market was timed perfectly, with home renovation experiencing a new level of popularity and making the show more relevant than ever over its seven-season run.

Following the wrap of his first show, Holmes jetted off to New Orleans to meet up with Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie's Make It Right Foundation, which had used his trademarked phrase without permission. Rather than antagonizing the Hollywood couple, Holmes brought his crew along to help build the first house the foundation erected in the decimated city, airing the process as a one-season series. "Holmes in New Orleans."

Producers have promised plenty of twists and turns for the new competition series, so tune in and see if you could fix up these dilapidated houses when "Home Free" airs a new episode Wednesday, July 29, on Fox.

Hollywood's favorite fixer sees new problems in season 3 of 'Ray Donovan'

By Rory MacDonald-Gauthier

TV Media

aving car problems? Take it to a mechanic! Leaky pipe underneath your sink? Call a plumber! Television reception coming off a bit fuzzy? Call the cable guy! Things break all the time. For those of us who aren't fixers, most of our problems can be remedied simply by picking up the phone and making a request. For Hollywood's rich and famous, they pick up the phone and dial one man whose job it is to fix ... bigger problems. Catch a new episode of the hit crime drama "Ray Donovan," airing Sunday, July 26, on Showtime.

If Ray Donovan (Liev Schreiber, "X-Men Origins: Wolverine," 2009) shows up at your door, it'll go one of two ways. Either all of your past problems, headaches and sleepless nights will be fixed for a lump sum of cash with no strings attached or you'll find yourself being put to bed in a cozy spot, roughly six feet under the ground. Stemming from his days as a ruthless Boston thug, violence and the allure of money and material rewards saw him relocate west to become Hollywood's No. 1 fixer — anything from a hired kill to arranging bribes — for the rich and famous.

Playing the bad guy has become a bit of a routine for Schreiber, who has taken on a plethora of villainous roles throughout his career. From Victor Creed/Sabretooth in "X-Men Origins: Wolverine" to the wrongly framed but eventual murderer Cotton Weary in the "Scream" franchise, he's been there and done that, but they're roles Schreiber says ultimately are the best — even though we, as viewers, tend to dislike the dark-hearted characters.

"Everyone says villains are thankless parts, but those are really the best roles," said Schreiber in an interview with "Vanity Fair." It also helps his case that he has a rather nefarious look about him, but that doesn't always translate well in real life, as people tend to "think I'm a lot meaner than I am.

Mean is good for Donovan, though, as he faces some new challenges in season 3, especially with his personal life in such a state of disarray. He's focusing a lot more of his time and energy on his career, which sees him working with a new client — one with a lot of wealth and a lot of power.

In the season premiere, he met billionaire Andrew Finney (Ian McShane, "American Horror Story") and took him on as a client after hearing that Andrew's son had been kidnapped. This led to him meeting an entirely new class of people, including Paige Finney (Katie Holmes, "Dawson's Creek"), a tough and savvy businesswoman who has her own plans to usurp her father's wealth by any means necessary.

Donovan is presented with an immediate problem — one that he may not be able to fix on his own. Will he work and operate under the established and reputable billionaire or give in to temptation and side with the manipulative, up-and-coming billionaire's daughter? It's a storyline that promises to play out over the course of the season, as both McShane and Holmes have signed on to the show for extended quest arcs.

While Donovan may be great at fixing other people's problems, most of the time the biggest issue for him is the one dear to his heart - his family — which always seems to prove too difficult for him to fix. Donovan's father, Mickey Donovan (Jon Voight, "24"), is a charismatic ex-con who's on a mission to claim what he deems to be rightfully his and routinely threatens to destroy all that his son has built for himself. Also causing issues is Donovan's brother, Terry Donovan (Eddie Marsan, "Sherlock Holmes," 2009), who is currently in jail because of a heist gone wrong led by — you guessed it — his father Mickey.

Starring in "Ray Donovan" as the titular man himself could seem very daunting and challenging to viewers, especially with all the emotional turmoil and what seems to be a constant drain on the psyche. For Schreiber, however, it's actually the opposite.

"The [scenes] that people typically think are challenging are the scenes that are very dramatic and have some emotional pull on them," Schreiber told actor Maggie Gyllenhaal ("The Honorable Woman") in an "Actors on Actors" segment for "Variety." "Those are the scenes that I generally find the easiest because there's something to do and you know what you're doing.

"I think the scenes that are more difficult [for me] are the scenes that you're not sure or maybe the writers aren't sure what they want the scene to be about," he added. "You're sort of rifling around in the scene with different attitudes and approaches in the hopes of finding something that has some narrative continuity to it."

For all problems, there's a solution. Most of the time. Can't figure it out? Pick up the phone and call someone. If you're Hollywood's biggest and brightest, you call Donovan. From paying off local corrupt government officials to using scare tactics to quieting someone forever, Donovan is a stoic character who rarely focuses on himself, but more so on what's most important to him — family. Tune in to catch a new episode of "Ray Donovan" airing Sunday, July 26, on Showtime.

Kix Brooks hosts "Steak Out with Kix Brooks"

Country music superstar Kix Brooks is following his tastebuds

By Andrew Warren TV Media

I've said it before, and I'll be darned if I don't say it again: music and food are the perfect pairings.

That's probably why there's been so many cooking shows in the past while that have starred musicians. Whether it's country superstar Trisha Yearwood's "Trisha's Southern Kitchen" or hip-hop artist Rev. Run's "Rev. Run's Sunday Suppers," it seems that more and more successful musical artists are making the transition from the stage to the kitchen.

Following in Yearwood's footsteps is another country artist. Kix Brooks, one-half of "Brooks & Dunn," is launching his own Cooking Channel show starting Tuesday, July 14.

"Steak Out with Kix Brooks" isn't about the cowboy hat-wearing, guitar-playing Brooks getting down and dirty in the kitchen, though. This is a show about a man with a passion for many things: music, raising cattle, fine wine and steak. And here, the focus is squarely on the steaks.

Brooks will be traveling around the nation to find some of the best steakhouses out there — and there sure are a lot to choose from! Americans love steak and steakhouses, and each episode will take Brooks to a the enormously successful duo new city where he'll be hunting down the local legends and wrapping his taste buds around some of the best-tasting beef that money can buy.

Appropriately enough, the premiere episode will find Brooks in Omaha, Nebraska, the metropolitan center of a state dominated by its agricultural industry. First, he'll be swinging by the historic Johnny's Cafe, a 100-year-old business that started out as a saloon and is now a steakhouse that many locals say has the best prime rib in town.

Also on the menu is a stop at Dario's, where the traditional European steak frites is served, followed by a chocolate cake that's made with a dark Belgian beer.

And, of course, no stop in Omaha would be complete without a big plate of the local specialty. Gorat's is serving up what's arguably the best whiskey steak in town, and Brooks will be singing a happy note after digging into it.

With so many different cuts, seasonings and cooking methods, the steak really is a versatile meat. "Steak Out with Kix Brooks" premieres Tuesday, July 14, on Cooking Channel.

Stacy London hosts "Love, Lust or Run"

Defiance

SYFY 7 p.m.

Doc Yewll (Trenna Keating) investigates the victim of a ghastly murder in this new episode, while Nolan (Grant Bowler) and Irisa (Stephanie Leonidas) hunt the beast loose in Defiance. T'evgin learns a disturbing truth about his daughter.

Gotham

A killer is targeting unsuspecting people with serious phobias, and Dets. Bullock (Donal Logue) and Gordon do everything they can to hunt down the murderer. Elsewhere, Oswald Cobblepot's loyalty is tested.

Love, Lust or Run TLC 8 p.m.

Modern day fashion guru Stacy London guides women with questionable style. The participants shed their over-the-top looks so that London can perform a dramatic "makeunder" that will better reflect their

Dark Matter

The crew becomes suspicious of Six (Roger R. Cross) in a new episode of this sci-fi series. He makes clandestine use of transfer transit -- a station-to-station technology that allows the user to cross vast distances via subspace mind transmissions.

Hollywood

By Adam Thomlison TV Media

Q: Do you have any news of the intriguing Dennis Franz?

A: Only that no news is good news, for him at least. Though he admits that he misses some aspects of his old, celebrity life, Franz is enjoying a long retirement from the acting business.

"I miss Sipowicz sometimes," he said in a 2012 interview with "Access Hollywood," referring to his star-making "NYPD Blue" character. "As far as being back in the game, I'm enjoying life so much right now, with golf and grandkids, and we travel quite a bit. I have a full life."

That said, he didn't completely rule out a return to acting. "I'm not going to say never again. If the right script comes along, I always have my eyes open."

The chances of that are seeming more and more remote as the years pass. He hasn't taken an acting role since he left "NYPD Blue" in 2005.

His name did reappear in the entertainment papers last year, however, when Bryan Cranston tied his record for the most Emmy wins in the best-dramatic-actor category. Both actors won four Emmys, Franz for his "NYPD Blue" role, Cranston for "Breaking Bad."

Franz showed up on screen as well in 2014, but not in an acting role. He was one of the many celebrities lending his support to the 2014 Chabad Telethon, a fundraiser held by the West Coast Jewish community.

Q: I was enjoying the new game show "500 Questions," which was on for a few episodes then just disappeared. Why was it taken off? Are there plans to bring it back? A: "500 Questions" is gone because everything went according to plan. The series was billed as a "game show event," and when networks use the word "event," they usually mean it won't be on very long, but it'll come back if people like it.

It also apparently required a remarkable amount of work to produce its seven episodes, so it was never designed to be a normal, fivetimes-a-week game show.

That's the show's hook:
The questions are extremely difficult. ABC's description of the show says that "the smartest people in the country try to achieve the seemingly impossible task of answering 500 of the most difficult general-knowledge questions ever devised."

That kind of premise is tough to keep up in the long term. That said, if ABC is happy enough with the results, it'll presumably be back next summer.

The show posted remarkably steady ratings, drawing about five million viewers for each of its seven episodes. Those numbers aren't great, but the show is also fairly cheap to produce.

Buzzerblog.com called the show's prizes "bizarrely small." The prizes are certainly small compared to Burnett's more famous competition series, "Survivor," but he said that the size of the prize isn't the point. It's about "bragging rights."

"Listen, no one's impressed with the milliondollar thing anymore, doing it for 15 years on 'Survivor,'" Burnett said in his "Extra" interview. "This is more about the game, this is for someone who believes they're smart."
