Let's Navigate Your Brand's Success!

Thank you so much for partnering with the Advocate to get the word out about your company or organization.

When you advertise with us, you align yourself with a reputable, award-winning product that gets directly to the people you want to reach: United Methodists in South Carolina.

Founded in 1836, the Advocate is the oldest newspaper in Methodism still thriving today in a variety of formats, both print and digital. A monthly printed newspaper, we also offer online news in new and exciting ways, including an app, website, social media, email and more. The voice of the people of The United Methodist Church in South Carolina, we strive to connect church members through news coverage and reader engagement while providing a platform for denominational dialogue.

We're also a consistent connectional tool that goes directly to every single South Carolina United Methodist pastor, as well as leaders and church members in almost every church across the state.

We have won more than 150 journalism excellence awards, and we strive to deliver a product that is both interesting and excellent, igniting a passion for Jesus and the church in all we do.

Organizational Summary.

About Us

The South Carolina United Methodist Advocate is a print and online news ministry committed to journalistic excellence and shining the light of Christ throughout South Carolina.

1836

The Southern Christian Advocate is established at General Conference with three offices—Charleston, Richmond and Nashville.

1837

On June 24, 1837, in Charleston, the first issue is published with Rev. William Capers as Editor.

1948

The paper becomes the South Carolina Methodist Advocate after a merging of the two South Carolina conferences.

1968

The paper becomes the South Carolina United Methodist Advocate after The Methodist Church and the Evangelical United Brethren join to form The United Methodist Church.

1979

The first woman and layperson editor, Maryneal Jones, was hired.

1980

The first Black staff writer/reporter, Rosetta Ross, was hired.

Mission

The Advocate fosters discipleship within South Carolina United Methodism by providing relevant news in various formats to unite followers in Christ.

Vision

The Advocate strives to be the premier independent news source and voice for South Carolina United Methodists by building relationships through strategic partnerships. We aim to prioritize digital expansion, grow the Advocate Press and enhance communication strategies as we continue to share the impactful stories of the church at work in the world.
