

People fleeing violence in Central America based on well-founded fears of persecution have a legal right to seek asylum in our country.

Yet asylum seekers rarely win without lawyers.

We can help you help them.

Even in Alaska, the heartbreak of the U.S. southern border is never far away.

DAN RODGERS

Volunteer Coordinator, Pro Bono Asylum Project
Alaska Institute for Justice

Dan Rodgers has been a full-time volunteer attorney at AIJ since 2008, and has represented many clients seeking asylum, including two recent clients escaping violence in El Salvador. He is the recipient of the Pro Bono Lifetime Achievement Award and the Robert K. Hickerson Public Service Award from the Alaska Bar Association.