COMMUNITY OUTREACH

Oxford grad leaves legacy in leadership group

BY ASHLEY MORRISON
The Anniston Star

High school senior Joshua Baker has a bright future ahead of him. Soon he will walk the halls of the University of Alabama at Birmingham for psychology, but not before leaving Oxford High with a legacy of sorts.

Baker has been a part of the leadership development group Vision One — stylized as Vis1on — since his freshman year. In that time, he has worked diligently to transform the pathways of the community outreach group within that program to maximize its benefit towards the community.

“I have seen him grow in his collaboration, communication, and leadership skills through Vision One. He stepped up this year and led the community outreach group. He took time outside of his school day to sit down with community leaders to create action steps for the ideas of his group members,” said Assistant Principal Holley Harmon.

Harmon said Baker approached other community leaders such as the director of the Oxford Senior Citizen Center, Kim Thomas, to open a discussion on how the group might be able to help the city’s senior population. Those discussions lead to Baker and his peers at Vision One collecting donated items for the seniors and staff members at the center.

Baker said that earlier this year, he was also able to aid the city’s fire department in installing smoke detectors in various neighborhoods around Oxford.

“We went with the firefighters at the school and went to neighborhoods around the city and knocked on doors. And if they wanted smoke alarms put up for them, then we put it up for them. But if not, then we just handed it to them, and then went to the next door,” Baker said.

Fellow senior, XaiOnna Whitfield, said that visiting the other neighborhoods in Oxford opened her eyes to why reaching out to other communities is so important as not everyone is as fortunate as some.

“We went to different communities, communities I’ve never seen before. I thought everybody had smoke alarms. Not everybody has smoke alarms. You’ll see like, some people don't have the things that you have," Whitfield said.

Baker echoed Whitfield's statements, saying that giving back to that community was so important.

"Because we all have so much, you kind of don't realize what the 'lack of' is around you, because of what we have personally. So it kind of just showed us that we should be grateful for what we have," Baker said.

Baker said that it was important to him to show those who have lived in Oxford for so long, even before he was born, that teens like him still care about them.

"And we want to include them in everything we do. [It] kind of just brings the community together," Baker said.

Because of the pathways Baker has opened, future Vision One members will have more opportunities to work with various groups in the community.

In addition to Vision One, Baker is also an active member of choir, show choir, and has interest in bowling.

He plans to attend UAB, majoring in psychology with a minor in music. He said his goal for the future would be to marry his love of music with a career in psychology by instituting music therapy with children.

Baker said Vision One has also aided him in making connections for his future at UAB as well. "I've made friendships and relationships with city leaders and officials that have attended UAB and know Birmingham in and out and could help me with assistance if I ever needed any help," he said.

TYLER DAVIDSON

Tyler Davidson, the son of Kevin and Vanecia Davidson, is a 2024 graduate of Cleburne County High School. Anniston salutatorian working to become defense attorney

When E'Leah McCoy gives Anniston High School's salutatory address to her class, she will have finished a stellar educational career that she hopes will land her in the courtroom as an attorney.

McCoy, 18, plans to be a criminal defense attorney, and will attend the University of Alabama where she will start studying pre-law in the fall. For McCoy, making good grades has landed her a nice scholarship to kick-start her secondary education.

McCoy has always had a knack for making the grade. She currently holds a 4.05 GPA, but in previous years she's landed on the "A" honor roll numerous times while attending Randolph Park Elementary School.

Like most students she has had her share of ups and downs but has always come out ahead.

"She had some little hurdles she's had to jump over, but other than that she's persevered through it and now she's where she is," said Tamar Towns, Anniston High's career coach.

McCoy said she reaches out for help if she needs a helping hand.

"I see if I can fix it or overcome it myself. If not, I ask for help," the soft-spoken McCoy said. "I just remember the motivation from my mom, my siblings, and my family. And I know that they want me to do good."

Of course, McCoy's favorite TV program is Law and Order, although she of course knows that in the real world cases are not wrapped up in an hour like on TV.

"I'd love to help people and figure things out and help people who have been wronged," she said.

McCoy — who categorizes herself as "fiercely independent" — said she does not have any attorney role models.

"I'm going to be my own person," she said.

Towns said becoming an attorney is the perfect trajectory for McCoy.

"I think she will be a phenomenal attorney, and especially the field that she's actually looking into which is the criminal justice, the criminal side of the attorney, but I really do think she's phenomenal and has picked a perfect road to take to where she's planning on going in life," Towns said.

During her tenure at Anniston High School, McCoy played both softball and basketball.

"It was fun," she said.

McCoy's other extracurricular activities include FBLA, SkillsUSA, Beta Club and student government.

"They're proud of me, really proud, I'm the first one in my family to be successful in school," McCoy said, adding that she has two sisters and one brother.

Early on McCoy wanted to help others as evidenced by her letter to Santa that ran in a December 2014 edition of The Anniston Star:

"Dear Santa, I want a Baby Alive so I can help my Auntie take care of my baby cousin. Another thing I want is earrings so I can be pretty and also want some roller blades skates so I can practice skating. I also want clothes and shoes. Something I will want is some stuff off of TV. I will leave cookies and milk out!!!"

*Love you,
E'Leah McCoy."*

Once McCoy heads off to college, she said she will miss her classmates.

"I feel like we are all really close right now, and everyone is going to different colleges so we'll be kinda separated," she said.

McCoy — a member of Mount Liberty Baptist Church — said she knows what she will during her salutatorian address to her fellow seniors.

"I'm going to thank God and my family," McCoy said.
