From the Editor

'Tis the season for unusual conversations

On occasion in this space, I have mentioned my friends the Hathorns: Stan and Chasidy and the daughter Abby (whose byline you've likely seen on the annual Lakeside Living Fall Fashion Report). It's been a while since I've crossed paths with them, although I was recently reminded of an amusing conversation we had the last time it happened.

Over the course of knowing the Hathorns, I've grown accustomed to hearing unusual remarks from them in conversation. Such as Chasidy's hand-wringing confession about being a serial resuer of home decor items. Or fashion stylist Abby outlining her plan to dress like the taste of a pumpkin spice latte.

But I wasn't prepared to hear something as bleak as what Chasidy said as she and Stan and I were standing in their newly remodeled kitchen.

"I tell you, it almost killed our spirit."

Stan nodded solemnly as Chasidy poured a mug of coffee. I'd declined her offer to make one for me, as I remain convinced that there's no such thing as a good cup of coffee (which Chasidy knows, but she's too polite not to offer me one anyway).

"Surely it wasn't that bad," I said, even though I wasn't sure what the topic was.

"Well, it was not awful, but it was not so great either," she said after the inaugural sip. "Charming, lots of potential, and the bones were excellent. But it was still a time capsule in desperate need of attention and love."

"Light mauve counters, floating cabinets that blocked the view, white tiles with fruit impressions and a large awkward space where nothing existed," Stan said, gesturing with his mug to the former awkward space. The kitchen we were standing in looked nothing like the one he described.

"It was big enough to land a helicopter," Chasidy said, "so we knew an island was the perfect solution."

"And you obviously found it," I said, indicating the handsome structure the three of us stood by.

"Oh, we didn't find it," Chasidy quickly corrected. "That's what almost killed our spirit."

"You didn't find it?"

"Not that we didn't go looking. How hard could it be for really picky people to locate the perfect piece of furniture on an unreasonably low budget, right?"

"Unreasonably is such a judging word," Stan said over his mug.

"The budget was set by the hubby," Chasidy explained, "who thinks everything is overpriced. And I do mean everything. And after countless hours of shopping, our ideal island was not found. We had no choice. We had to make it ourselves. And Stan was very sweet to design with all my requests and more."

"What was one of your requests?" I asked.

"I absolutely hate looking at trash cans. They gross me out. Out of sight, out of mind. My number-one request for my island was for it to house the trash bin. But it had to be easy to get out so I could scrub it and disinfect it often."

"So you built an island for your trash can."

"Not just. I also wanted a place to drop vegetables. And use a piece of vintage marble that I bought many moons ago. Stan accomplished that and added wine bottle storage.

Although truth be known, I use it to store my two-liter Diet Pepsi bottles."

I was pleased to see that a copy of Lakeside Living also resided on the Hathorns' new island, and I hope this issue will also find a spot there. In its pages you'll find informative and entertaining features about seasonal shopping, the secret family recipe behind a new Pell City business, a Q&A with the organizer of the first Lakeside Live music festival, and a visit to the festively decorated lake home of Leigh and Jim Rice.

It's guaranteed not to kill your spirit.

Live Bait for December Gamefish

The month of December can be a great time to catch various species of gamefish. As winter nears, gamefish species will continue their rapid feeding habits. All gamefish will be prepping for the harsh winter months ahead by feeding or “stocking up.” Anglers can capitalize on these opportunities and have a blast in doing so.

Common artificial lures and techniques can produce results, but if you really want to load the boat, I suggest using live bait techniques. Live bait is often overshadowed by artificial techniques, but if used correctly, it can really shine even on the coldest of December days.

The number one bait source for the Coosa River impoundments is threadfin shad. Using a shad net (better known as a casting net) can yield high quantities of these precious bait fish. You can catch them in pretty much any areas of main creeks, or in current pockets this time of year. To keep these bait fish alive, you will need some type of aeration system, which will keep oxygen circulating in the live well water. If you don't have the means to catch live shad, don't worry, because a standard live minnow will work as well. Whatever baitfish you use, be sure to keep them healthy and happy. Happy, healthy bait will yield better live bait action.

The setups needed are very simple. Standard live bait hooks (#1 size circle hooks or regular bend hooks), 12-15 lb test line, 1/2 oz. egg sinker, and a medium- to large-sized swivel. This setup is basically a “Carolina rig” setup, if you are familiar with such. The setup will be the egg weight attached to the main line, followed/attached to the swivel, and a 2-foot leader line attached to the swivel with the hook attached to the end of that 2-foot main line (check YouTube for C Rig information, if needed).

The most critical part of this whole setup is locating the fish. Focus on the upriver portions or in the backs of creeks. I like to find current pools

(also known as eddies or current swirls/seams) for the best results. Gamefish will stack up and feed heavily in these current seams. Cast your live bait Carolina rig into these current seams, keep tension, and hold on! I've had clients literally get the rod pulled out of their hands from aggressive fish strikes!

Using Live bait can yield awesome results. Move around, layer up to stay warm, and use live bait to aid your chances in catching various game species of fish in the month of December. As always, take a kid fishing!

Merry Christmas!

Not every good recipe has a story to tell, but the best ones usually do.

You know the ones. You're probably thinking of one right now. How about that recipe that started off as a disaster but turned into one of the best-tasting mistakes ever? Or the recipe you learned to re-create to remind you of a favorite place you'd traveled?

But the best kind is the family recipe passed down from generation to generation, usually made every Christmas, where each smell and taste carries with it love and memories, bringing life to those who have passed on and joy for generations to come.

On a chilly Wednesday, I walked through the door of Brittle Heaven & More and discovered a little heaven on earth (which, coincidentally, is the name of an ice cream dessert on the menu that's swirled with a combo of cookie and brittle crumbs).

Sarah Deese, founder and owner of Pell City's new heavenly haven of sweets and treats, greeted me like a dear friend. Seated at a cozy table under the framed decorative plate gifted to her mother as a wedding present in 1947, Sarah told me her story of family, dreams, and a decades-old secret peanut brittle recipe.

"My mother's name was Sadie, and we would always make brittle at Christmas and give it out as gifts. People would love it and say, 'oh, you need to sell this.' We thought, well, that would be nice, but we never did. We cooked our family's secret brittle recipe together from the time I was a teenager until she passed in 2003."

Glancing up at the hand-painted plate depicting a likeness of her mother wearing her favorite color, bright red, Sarah grew a little misty-eyed. "When I was talking with my sister about a business logo, she looked at that plate sitting on an old jukebox and said, why not use the plate as the logo?"

It was an inspired idea. The only change? Sadie traded in her red hat for a golden halo.

"I've wished so many times that mother could have been a part of Brittle Heaven & More, but she is a big part of it. Her spirit is here, and it's like she's watching over us and the store. She would be enjoying every minute of it. She loved people, and that's one of the things I love about this place is seeing all the people coming through here."

The store, which opened on September 2 of this year, is housed in the old Chicago Mike's hot dog place. "There's a lot of people still coming in wanting hot dogs," Sarah laughs.

While you may not be able to get a hot dog or a sandwich here yet, that's where the "& More" comes in.

Sarah's granddaughters have always loved playing in the kitchen, wanting to bake cookies and cakes with her, "and I always let them," Sarah says. Who doesn't want to lick the spoon or get the extra batter out of the bowl? "One day, they mentioned that they wanted to help me make brittle plus all sorts of things, and so I thought, we'll have to add the "& More" for them."

The "& More" covers a lot of ground, from protein balls for breakfast to sourdough bread made from a 40-year-old starter. You can even buy a slice of tempting carrot or pound cake or go for a whole one to pack back on the calories you worked off during the day. Sarah and her daughters-in-law, Taren Otwell and Tammy Ray, whip up all sorts of goodies in the small kitchen that at first was unfamiliar but is now starting to feel like home.

One recent addition to the menu is the soft-serve ice cream blends.

Sarah served me up an “Oh My Heavens” made with vanilla ice cream swirled with a golden dusting of sweet yet salty, crunchy brittle crumbles.

“Who knows? Phase two could include a sandwich or even a hot dog. There’s a lot of things we would love to do,” Sarah said, just as a customer from Helena popped in to pick up his order of two pounds of chocolate and peanut butter fudge.

He glanced my way, asking, “Have you tried this fudge? I don’t know how she does it, but her fudge tastes just like what my mother used to make. Haven’t been able to find it anywhere until now. Do you sell gift baskets?”

As Sarah showed him the baskets and variety of gifts they offer, I listened in as she revealed that the Pecan Brittle is the bestseller, with the next one being Peanut. The Coconut Brittle is good but not too strong, and the Jalapeno has just enough kick.

In addition to the edible merchandise, Brittle Heaven & More offers its own branded merchandise such as t-shirts, hats, placemats, and kitchen towels. “All this merchandise is thanks to my oldest brother, Richard Miles, who has supported me 100 percent. He surprised me with it all, and I’m really thankful to him for believing in me.”

But it’s not just family who believe in Sarah; it’s the community as well.

“All these years I’ve been told to make brittle and sell it, and finally, this is the right moment for it. I’ve had so much local encouragement from the community and other businesses, especially the

HEAVEN'S GOLD CAKES

Childersburg
917 First St. SW
W-F 9-5, Saturday 9-2

Chunde McKinney began baking in December 2005 as a way to raise money for her choir uniform. She specialized in small $5 poundcakes from a recipe she got from her mother. One day, someone asked if she could decorate birthday cakes, and McKinney decided to branch out.

Today, McKinney still sells her $5 small loaf cream cheese pound cakes, as well as cupcakes, brownies, candy and specialty cakes through her bakery, Heaven's Gold Cakes. Her cousin, Stephanie Drake works with her every day, and late this summer, they celebrated their 11th anniversary of being in business. The most popular cupcake flavors throughout the year are banana pudding, red velvet, strawberry and key lime. During the holiday season, red velvet and German chocolate are very popular.

For McKinney, her business is also a ministry. She meets a lot of people, and she loves the opportunity to be able to tell her clients she loves them and cares about them. She loves having the opportunity to encourage everyone who comes into her shop.

Although McKinney likes baking specialty cakes, such as those designed to look like expensive handbags or those decorated for baby showers or birthdays, she also enjoys creating simple and elegant wedding cakes. Goodies at the bakery range in price from $5-$250.

Christmas on the Coosa

Finding joy, warmth, and appreciation in the color of the holiday season

Written by Sarah E. Moreman
Photography by Bob Crisp

The color red draws my eye whenever I gaze upon outdoor Christmas decorations.

Red is that pop of color. Red is what brings joy. Red is what makes me wonder of what joy and tidings Christmas will bring each year.

Whenever I drive alongside the river or across the bridge over the river, it is the red that stands out among the holiday-adorned homes and parks. The red reminds me to take a pause and appreciate the time and effort that others made to set up the lights and decorations to celebrate the gift-giving season.

The red velvet ribbons and bows nestling within wreaths and garlands, even on evergreen and deciduous trees guarding the backyards of homes, give a pop of excitement. Yet the color red also soothes and warms me whenever I join friends or family for a boat ride.

In the daytime, it is the color red that draws anyone's attention to the creativity displayed in someone's backyard. Therefore at night, my companions and I would go back out for another boat ride to see the creative displays against the backdrop of a crisp, pine-scented starry night. Others have the similar idea of taking their watercraft out to admire the lit Christmas decorations on display not only in backyards but also parks and venues.

A particular state park uses translucent lollipops of different colors, especially red. The translucence juxtaposes nicely next to the red and white-striped candy canes. The displayed lollipops in their translucency meld sweetly with the glassy surface of the river as we gaze upon the Christmas lights that are twinkling at us with a secret. What is the secret? We may wonder as we glide along on the water to admire more displays of the Nativity, angels, St. Nicholas, The Nutcracker, poinsettias, deer, elk, snowflakes, and anything related to the gift-giving spirit of the holidays.

Is the secret in the color of red?

The color red warms us, connects us to each other. We welcome each other's company or interaction by indulging in the holiday spirit of gathering, decorating, baking, and giving. We wave at each other from our boats as we share in the precious moments celebrating the reason of the season. Our hands hold thermoses filled with apple cider with its aroma teasing our olfactory senses, tantalizing us to take cautious sips of the heated, spiced liquid. We listen to Christmas songs that someone over yonder is playing, since the river carries the energy of sound across water so beautifully. The music engages our focus to how the red of St. Nicholas' suit symbolizes giving, reminding us how it is more blessed to give than to receive.

Feeling the smoothness of water curving around the boat as we slowly glide to the next Christmas display, I see how the river is the perfect place to ponder about the twinkling secret. The calm darkness of the river softly reflects the twinkling lights and stars. Even the darkness of the night looks darker between the brilliance of stars, enhancing the color of red everywhere. The red softens the austerity of the night, providing a welcoming sense of community.

When we finish admiring the outdoor decorations, we hurry to dock the boat before scampering back inside the house. We gather in the living room where a beautiful fir tree stands decorated with only red ornaments, reminding me of the berries on a holly sprig. Seeing these berries nestled in the holly spring brings clarity to the twinkling secret when it comes to the color of red. The red encourages us to open our hearts through giving, and our hearts are the same color, which is red.

'It was truly a great day:' Lakeside Live makes its Logan Martin debut

Music festival benefits Pell City fire and police departments

Written by Vallean Jackson
Photographed by Tucker Webb

The first Lakeside Live music festival on Logan Martin Lake was a success.

The Five16 Foundation, founded by Casey Cambron, staged the event last month at Pell City's Lakeside Park. The one-day event featured a host of bands, a car show, a poker run, and The Battle of the Badges.

"The meaning behind my foundation is based upon a Bible scripture and my love for lighthouses," Cambron said. "It is important to be the light in the dark that some people need, and this event was us shining the light in our community and restoring hope. Without light, we will stay in the darkness. No matter what is going on, we will find our way to get through it, and this festival is a great way to showcase that and fellowship with the residents of this community, with the ultimate goal of continuing to support our city's fire and police departments."

Cambron was happy to speak with Lakeside Living about the success of Lakeside Live's first year.

Q: Why did you create Lakeside Live?

Cambron: The idea for this event came to me back in 2016. I have a long history of doing car shows and being a part of charitable events, and the idea of music with any event is a good fit. We had set out for 2019, but thought 2020 would be a better year. Then COVID hit, and the idea was back on the drawing board. I am kind of glad that it happened this year instead. With things opening back up and with the help received from vendors, sponsors, and the community, we are very fortunate to be able to host it this year. This is something I am highly passionate about and love discussing. I wanted to do something locally to highlight our everyday heroes in the process and let people see those that work to protect the community in a different light.

Q: How does Lakeside Live benefit the community?

Cambron: The people that came out to this free event purchased t-shirts and raffle tickets and cheered on the competition of the departments. It created another event in the city where the community can come together and fellowship and enjoy one another. I would say it even helped to restore hope. As I was observing the festival, I noticed some kids playing with a football from one of the vendors that they gave out, and to see that warmed my heart. It gave the kids something to do, and showed that hope isn't dead. Since moving here in 2012, I have noticed that Pell City gives a different type of love that people need to experience, and I am glad to be able to share with others the love I see within this community.

Q: For a first time event, how was the turnout?

Cambron: It was truly a great day. I don't have the exact number of people that were in attendance yet, but I would definitely say a couple of thousand. We bought a roll of tickets and were sure to give everyone one. That roll had 5,000 tickets on it, and it was halfway gone after the course of the day.

Q: Who are the beneficiaries of Lakeside Live?

Cambron: All of the money generated from this event will be given to the Pell City fire and police departments. One of the core values of my foundation is to give back to the community and continue to raise money for our brave and honorable heroes.

Q: What was The Battle of the Badges?

Cambron: The Battle of the Badges was three competitions between the fire and police departments. The three competitions included tug of war, tire run relay, and a team ski challenge. Those in attendance definitely enjoyed watching them, and even I myself shared some laughs in watching them in a different environment and just enjoying themselves.

Q: Who were the musical performers, and did you have a favorite?

Cambron: Berritt Haynes, who auditioned for NBC's The Voice, opened with a special presentation of the National Anthem. Then there was The Bolee III who is a new band whose genre is like outlaw country that I loved. Second band was Cory Jr. & Company, and I was super excited to see them as I am a big R&B fan. Thirdly was Fuzz Huzzi, who is from San Diego, that I would describe as a punk rock genre. Fourthly, Kudzu, a

Q: What do you most look forward to for next year's festival?

Cambron: Warmer weather for sure. We have already discussed that next year's festival will be closer to the end of September. We look to increase the activities and more things to do for the kids. Next year we may focus on more local talent to showcase what we have here in our community. There is so much that we truly do not know about that is amazing and should be shared. ## A host of furry, four-legged creatures calls the lakeside area home

Written by SUSAN COOK

For centuries, poets have praised them, songs have been sung about them, and artists have struggled to capture their complexity. Scientifically speaking, we know how they work, but they still manage to mystify and magnetize us.

Whether they twinkle and dance or pierce us with their icy glance, we're still mesmerized by eyes and what they may, or may not, be telling us.

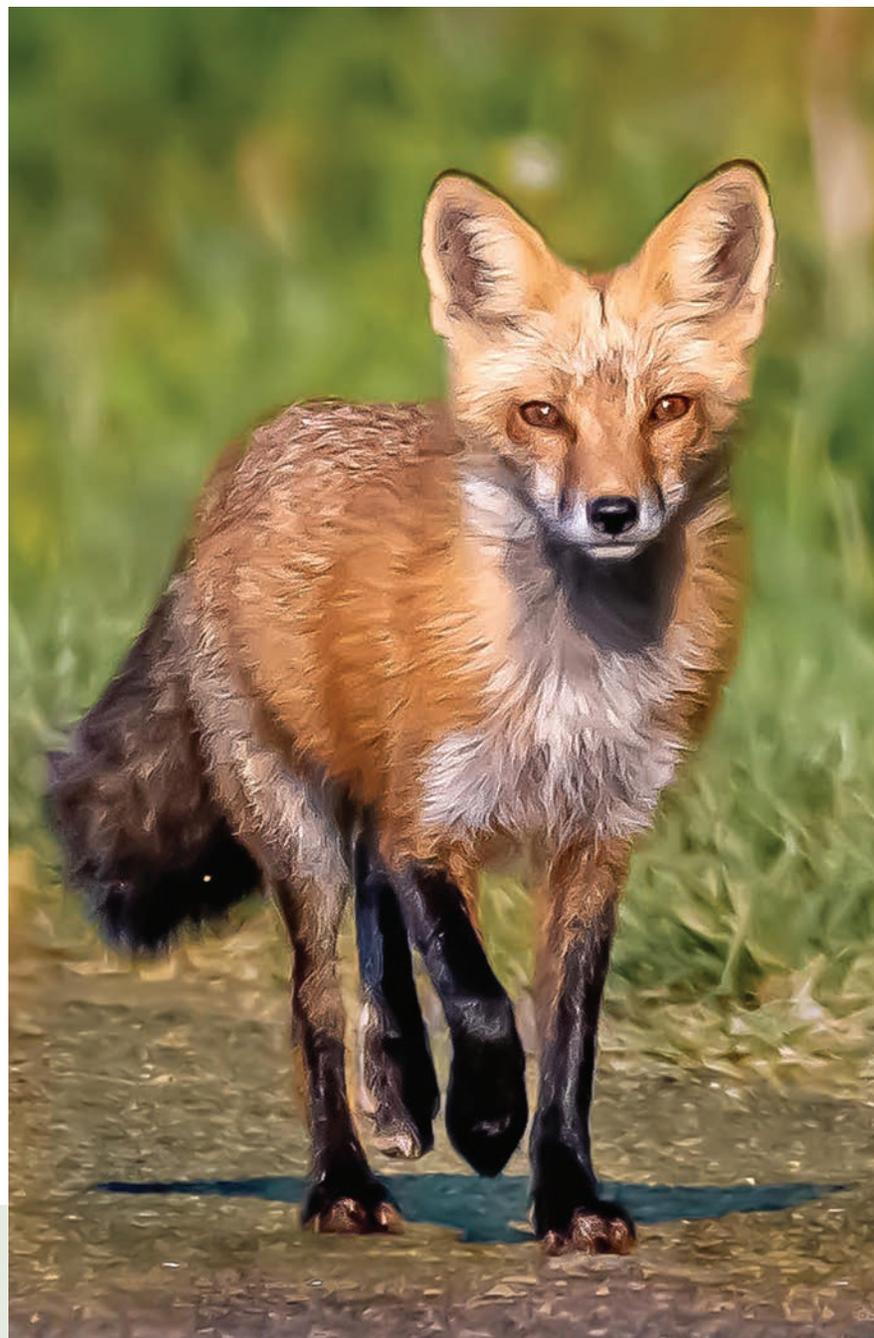

Eyes may be the windows to a human's soul, but what can we discover when we gaze into the eyes of an animal?

If you looked into the eyes of a field mouse, for example, the poor thing probably wouldn't even see you. Mice have notoriously bad eyesight, which is why they're usually bumping into things or using a wall and their whiskers to help guide them. For mice, it's less about having 20/20 vision and more about motion. Their dark glossy eyes jut out just enough from their sleek little heads, allowing them to detect motion all around. While they can barely see 2 feet in front of their face, they can detect movement up to 45 feet away.

A chipmunk's vision also benefits from the placement of his alert little eyes. Compared to humans, a chipmunk's eye view of the world is wider, larger, and even faster, giving them a slight edge when they need to dart away from predators. Shadows are a chipmunk's friend, signaling to their tiny brains that a hawk or other danger is lurking overhead, which is why you'll only see chipmunks stuffing those fluffy cheeks during the day.

One rascally animal that has no problem seeing in the day or night is the raccoon—the literal masked bandit of the woodland world. Your neighborhood raccoon may look like a furry masked Zorro going for a dumpster dive, but his “mask” actually works like the black greasepaint or under eye stickers football players wear to reduce glare.

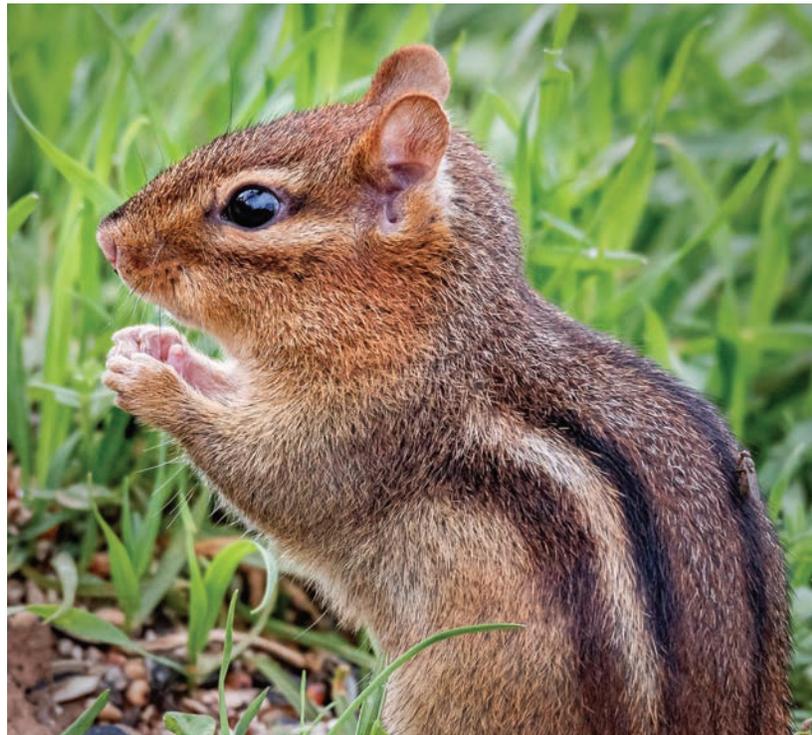

Raccoons see with more than just their eyes, however. While it looks like they “wash” their food before eating it, they're really wetting their paws to activate sensory receptors that heighten their sense of touch. Their nimble paws shed light on what they are about to eat, although they don't seem to be too picky. Give a raccoon a puzzle, and as long as there's food involved, they'll usually find a way to solve it. Although, I think the same could be said for humans.

But the one animal that literally outfoxes them all is the red fox, a member of the canine family, including coyotes, wolves, and domestic dogs. Even this fact is somewhat misleading when you consider how much a fox has in common with a cat. If you've ever looked into a cat's eyes and noticed the vertically slit pupils, you've essentially seen the eyes of a fox. Like cats, foxes use their night vision to hunt after sundown, stalking and even pouncing on their prey.

Also, like cats, foxes use the sensory whiskers on their legs and faces to help them “see” their surroundings. The fox has even learned to harness Earth's magnetic field to hunt, seeing it as a ring of shadow on its eyes that darkens as the fox moves towards magnetic north. When the shadow and the sound of the prey align, it's time to pounce.

Sly little foxes indeed.

Locking eyes with any animal, domesticated or otherwise, is a remarkable experience. We may not be seeing a window to these animals' souls, but they are windows to a wilder world that speaks volumes on nature, perspective, and survival when we pause to reflect and consider each silent gaze.

Jim and Leigh Rice feel 'grateful' to be part of the local community

Written by Faith Dorn
Photographed by Bob Crisp

Jim and Leigh Rice moved to Pell City in January 2020 after selling their house in Birmingham very quickly.

Jim recently retired after a 37-year career with the Dow Chemical Company as a senior territory manager specializing in termiticides. Leigh worked as an IT recruiter before becoming a stay-at-home mom in 2007.

"I was born and raised in Birmingham, and my husband, Jim, and I have lived there for the majority of our married life," said Leigh.

In December 2019, the couple decided they wanted to leave Birmingham.

"We were tired of the traffic. We have one son, and we knew he wasn't coming back to the area," Leigh said, "We had also made the decision to downsize because we wanted a small home at the lake and a small home at the beach with lawn maintenance included."

At the time, the Rices' son, Jake, was about to begin graduate school at Kennesaw State University in Georgia. The Rices have relatives in the Pell City area, and moving here meant they would be closer to Jake, as well as Leigh's sister and brother-in-law, Cindy and Reggie Burlison, residents of the Pine Harbor community.

The Rices also own a farm in Ashland, and living at the lake placed them closer to the farm. Jim is currently finishing a "barndominium" that he and Jake use as a hunting camp.

"In October 2019, I decided to put the house on the market on a whim to see if it would sell. It sold in three days," he said.

City and started looking for a lakeside property. One of Leigh's friends mentioned that six new townhomes were being built in the Images subdivision and that four of the six were still available. The subdivision was developed by the Brascho family from its former life as Aqualand marina.

"The foundation had been poured, and the studs were in place, so the project was in its early stages. As a result, we were able to do some customization to the interior finishes which gave me the opportunity to add my design preferences." Local designer Renee Lilly had been hired to assist the new homeowners with their selections, and "she was a tremendous help to me throughout the process," said Leigh. "We became friends after spending so much time together on this project. This two-story townhome was the perfect solution for

The neighborhood is quiet and peaceful and conveniently located off of Highway 231 and close to Highway 280 and I-20. The townhome features an open concept living room, dining room, and kitchen. The ceilings are 10 feet tall and add to the feeling of spaciousness.

On the lake side, there is a patio off the main level and covered porch above that. The community features a boardwalk for all residents, as well as a community pavilion, dock and community pool. The Rices have not bought a boat yet, but they do have friends and relatives with boats and jet skis.

enjoy the views and living here. We eventually probably will get a boat,” Jim said.

Their first neighborhood gathering was on Halloween at the pavilion, and the neighbors brought snacks and candy for trick-or-treaters.

“Everybody really enjoyed it, and we are looking forward to our next one. We are talking about doing something for Christmas, but it hasn’t been planned yet,” said Jim.

Christmas is Leigh’s favorite time of year. Normally, she begins decorating right after Thanksgiving.

Christmas came early for the Rice family this year. While they were finding their perfect lake home, they learned that their son had been selected by the Arizona Diamondbacks in the ninth round of the MLB Draft.

“We’re looking forward to being able to travel to his games on the West Coast without worrying about home maintenance,” Jim said.

Now that the Rices have lived in their lake home for more than a year, they are in the process of building a small cottage in a new 55+ community in the Florida panhandle, Margaritaville Watersound.

“We look forward to traveling between the two homes starting next year,” said Jim, adding that he and Leigh have thoroughly enjoyed becoming a part of the Pell City community and that they have met some of the friendliest people.

“It is truly a great retirement destination, and we are looking forward to welcoming several families we know who are in the process of moving here from Birmingham. We are also so grateful to be a part of the congregation of 1st Baptist Church Pell City,” said Leigh.

Renee Lilly

It was a warm morning in late autumn, and Renee Lilly was spending it at one of her favorite locales.

"I love Lakeside Park," she said while walking along the shoreline. "There is something about being by the water that tends to induce a sense of calm, peacefulness and well-being. It makes me feel happy and relaxed. You know, research shows that being near a body of water helps creativity and even makes you sleep easier."

As the owner of Lilly Designs Inc., creativity is important to her, and she draws inspiration from nature, in which she enjoys immersing herself, especially when it's near the water.

Her ideal day on Logan Martin: "I enjoy going kayaking or cruising in our Boston Whaler close to the shore and in and out of the sloughs. It's quiet, and you get to enjoy the nature up close. Most of us don't take the time to just sit and enjoy nature. That's why I love coming here to the park of visiting the Community Garden. They're beautiful places to enjoy nature."

What is the Community Garden? "It's a 501c3 created in 2014-15, and I am one of the founding members. A handful of people got together and decided Pell City could benefit from a community garden, and it was developed on the property at St. Simon Peter Episcopal Church. It has been one of the most gratifying experiences. We work very hard every year to plant and harvest healthy vegetables to feed the hungry. Most of our harvest goes to local food pantries and seniors."

What she enjoys most about her work as an interior designer: "Helping my clients to achieve their vision by designing, sourcing products and materials and working with them through the process of building or remodeling their home. We all have different talents, and I enjoy using mine to help people make their homes beautiful."

Its most challenging aspect: "As a designer, I have to work with many tradespeople and vendors, architects, contractors, and manufacturers to get to the end result of a new build or remodel project. It is so important to define a clear scope of work and have a good team in place for the project to be successful. The fact is that there are so many pieces and parts to a design project and many hours that go into creating beautiful interiors. I love what I do and I have been doing it for many years and I learn something new on every project."

How important is color to a designer? "Color is very important. I cannot imagine living in a black and white world. We have been seeing very little color in many areas of design. In the past few years, everything went grey. Now we are starting to see color coming back. I'm excited!"

The effect of color: "Colors can have a very strong effect on us. For example, they say you should never use red paint in a bedroom. Red promotes energy, and we want more calming colors in the bedrooms to promote relaxation."

The best advice she ever received: "That God gave me one mouth and two ears. We should listen twice as much as we speak."

How she describes herself: "Easy and laid back. Fun and adventurous. Definitely a lover, not a fighter."

Her personal style: "A combination of classic, trendy, and bohemian. And I love to go barefoot. There is a term called earthing. It involves heading outside barefoot and letting your skin connect with the earth beneath you. It enables you to reconnect with Mother Nature in the simplest way."

Three things she can't live without: "Clean refreshing water, fresh air, and healthy food."

Something an acquaintance might be surprised to know about her: "I was brave enough to marry a Texan!"

The food you could eat every day: "Greens."

15-acre property offers country living in close proximity to the city and the lake

Written by VALLEAN JACKSON
Photographed by BOB CRISP

Prospective home buyers looking for a spacious house in a secluded lakeside area setting will want to see 5705 Mays Bend Road in Pell City.

The Ranch-style single-family home was constructed in 1980 and is situated on 15 acres. It has four bedrooms, three full bathrooms, and a half bath within its 4,045-square-foot interior.

Upon entering the home, a foyer area with tiled flooring leads into a spacious living room with wood floors, a high ceiling with a ceiling fan, large windows, and a large floor-to-ceiling brick fireplace.

The kitchen has tiled floors, wood cabinets, white tiled countertops with matching backsplash, and a U-shaped countertop with a small island attached. The kitchen appliances include a white refrigerator, white double oven, built-in stainless steel dishwasher, and built-in electric stove top.

A distinctive feature about this home is the large sun-room with Pella windows that offer views of the yard.

Exterior amenities include an inground pool, large parking area great for a boat or RV, and plenty of acreage that is perfect for family functions or even starting a farm.

The property lists at $525,000. For more information, call Maria Price of RE/MAX Southern Homes 205-821-4921.

'I love seeing how God moves in situations,' lakeside real estate agent says

Written by VALLEAN JACKSON

Elana Weems understands being both a home owner and a seller.

"For the last 10 years, I worked in the fitness industry," the ERA King agent says. "I had a small business called Beyond Fitness that was like a boot camp, and I also coached at gyms in the area, but when COVID hit, things changed. Everything simply happens for a reason.

"A little before the pandemic, my husband and I were in the process of buying a home, and I loved the process. At the outbreak of the pandemic, I decided to quit the fitness industry and go into real estate full time. Ever since making the decision, all I can think is, 'Why did I did not do this earlier?'"

Now that she has a year of experience, Weems says she is hungry to gain clients, build relationships, and show her love of real estate through the quality of her work. She believes that her patience, can-do attitude, and desire to deliver her best is what makes her stand out. "I am willing to work hard and deliver a good experience," she says.

"One thing that I love about real estate, outside of the flexibility and the chance of meeting new people, is seeing how God moves in situations. If I could say what has been my favorite selling experience, I could not pick just one. However, there have been times when a client started to lose hope, and it was like things all of a sudden opened up out of nowhere, as if the opportunity had been there waiting for them along but just needed us to discover it. So overall, seeing God work through real estate is what I love most."

Asked what advice she would give to prospective home buyers, she says to get pre-approved, make sure your finances are in order, be prepared to move quickly, consider possible repairs in the case something goes wrong, get a home inspection, and, lastly, do not settle for just any house.

Weems is a native of Indianapolis but moved to Alabama after meeting her now-husband on the sandy shores of Orange Beach. They currently reside on Logan Martin Lake with their 11-year-old son. When she is not showing or selling homes she enjoys lake life, fitness, volunteering at Children's Place, and spending time at the soccer field with her son.
