Sigh of relief

Jacksonville senior overcomes more than classwork to get diploma

BY BRIAN ANDERSON

banderson@annistonstar.com

JACKSONVILLE — For many who've been through what Pooja Revanna has been through, walking across the stage to grab a high school diploma might be considered a success story. But Revanna hopes graduation from Jacksonville High School is just the first chapter in her tale.

For many close to Revanna, graduation wasn't something they were sure they'd see the Jacksonville senior complete. Although a top-10 student, now heavily involved in school government and the Spanish club and Key Club, for two years her teachers and friends didn't see her in the halls of Jacksonville High. Instead, Revanna was a regular at Birmingham Children's Hospital, where she spent the better part of her freshman and sophomore years with leukemia.

But graduation won't be the end of Revanna's story. In the fall, she will attend the University of South Alabama, and has already been admitted to attend the medical school there after her undergraduate studies. Revanna, who has dreamed of being a doctor her whole life, said it's a sigh of a relief to know she's already been accepted by her top choice for continuing her studies, but for friends, family and her teachers, just getting to where she is now is a sigh of a relief.

It was less than four years ago when doctors told Revanna she had a form of acute leukemia that would keep her completely out of school for two years as she went in and out of Children's Hospital for treatment. Revanna said when doctors told her the news, she said she was initially relieved, finally getting a diagnosis for a months-long sickness. The look on the faces of her parents, Muddu and Brunda, when presented the same news, however, made her realize things were a little more serious.

"I guess I didn't know what leukemia was," Revanna said. "I think I thought it was separate from cancer." She quickly learned how serious the diagnosis was. Revanna said much of the last two years now seems like a blur, but she does recall late night trips to the emergency room, doctors explaining to her she was a high-risk patient, and one time when she completely lost a pulse.

But during the time she was physically away from Jacksonville High, her teachers made sure Revanna wasn't away from her work. Through online studies and home visits, Revanna never let her classwork slip. She said she was determined to get back to school, no matter what.

"I never wanted to think about where I was," Revanna said. "I always thought 'I've got to stay caught up so I can go back to school, so I can graduate, and go to college.' I wanted things to be as normal as they could considering the circumstances."

Normal wasn't just a tough concept for Revanna to reach, it was difficult for those helping her too. Marcia Stallings, a guidance counselor at Jacksonville High, said that while the school supported Revanna any way it could, the process could be emotionally draining. That's why Revanna's graduation is especially uplifting, she said.

"It is extremely difficult," said Stallings. "You see the toll it takes on friends and family. It's just terrifying. You just hope and pray."

While Revanna was caught up academically when she returned to school her junior year, Revanna said that socially, she wasn't so quick to adjust.

"I didn't realize how much had changed in two years," Revanna said. "My friends were all two years older, more mature, I felt like I kind of missed out."

To make up for lost time, Revanna threw herself into as many activities as she could. She learned she had a passion for acting, joining the drama club. She got involved as her class' secretary and became vice president of the Key Club.

"I was never someone who wanted to sit still," Revanna said. "Even if I'm watching a movie, I have to be knitting or something too."

No one has supported Revanna's journey to become a doctor more than her parents. Revanna's father, Muddu, said Pooja's acceptance to medical school goes beyond good grades and extracurricular involvement. It's a demonstration of how much she overcame while experiencing first-hand what pain and uncertainty cancer can bring.

"All my life my father has been my role model, but I think after all this, she has taken over," Muddu said. "Everything that is on her plate, she has achieved that."

Revanna said she always wanted to be a doctor, but her story has led her to pursue a career as a pediatric oncologist, a cancer specialist for children.

"I had so many wonderful doctors who helped me," Revanna said. "I know now what it's like for them to go through this, so I know how to help them, I know what to tell them."

Pooja Revanna works on a project with Jacksonville agri-science teacher Harold Lipscomb. Upon returning to school from leukemia treatments, Revanna threw herself into as many activities as she could. Good grades, extracurricular involvement, and determination helped her get accepted to medical school.
