EDITOR'S NOTE

Thank you for another year of Lakeside Living

When it comes time every year to work on the April issue of Lakeside Living, I am always reminded of the late Jerry Woods, who was a great friend to the entire Logan Martin Lake community.

I still remember the first time I visited Jerry in his office at Woods Surfside Marina.

"Ever seen one of these before?" he asked, reaching into his desk drawer and handing me what he'd extracted from it.

I hadn't, and I told him so. I'd known such a thing had existed, of course, but, not unlike a bibliophile unexpectedly presented with a copy of The Codex Sinaiticus, I had never expected to see one.

What Jerry had placed in my hand was a copy of Lakeside Living on quarterfold newsprint, cover dated May 2006.

The cover sported a photo of a happy youngster wearing a life jacket, ready to cast his line into the water. Inside were articles about how much Lincoln and Riverside were growing, facts about Logan Martin Dam, how scarce undeveloped waterfront property was becoming, how to join the Logan Martin Lake Protection Association, a social group called the Lakeside Ladies Club, and safety tips from the marine police.

Lakeside Living was identified on the cover as A Daily Home Guide to Celebrating Life on Logan Martin Lake. By 2006, the publication (a five-times a year seasonal product) had already been around for 12 years, since its launch in 1994.

It wouldn't last as such another year.

That's because the following April – 18 years ago – Lakeside Living abandoned its newsprint format and became a full-blown, year-round glossy magazine. It is the milestone of that transition that we celebrate in this issue. Thank you for celebrating with us, because without you, we wouldn't have a milestone to celebrate.

It is your loyal and regular readership that has allowed Lakeside Living to exist for more than 30 years. At a time when many print publications are struggling to survive, Lakeside Living is thriving. That's also thanks to our loyal and regular advertisers, whose support makes it possible for us to make each issue available to you.

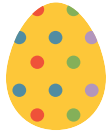

Please consider this issue our gift to you. On behalf of Consolidated Publishing and our entire staff, thank you for allowing Lakeside Living – Logan Martin Lake's original and premier lifestyle publication – to be a part of your lives and adorn your coffee tables for the past three decades. Here's to many more years of seeing you around the lake.

TAKING A SECOND LOOK AT Hartman Castle

Old world romanticism meets modern amenities on Logan Martin Lake

(Editor's Note: This feature was originally published in the February issue of Lakeside Living, and we are representing it here in recognition of Hartman Castle's status as a unique property on the Logan Martin shoreline and as a tourist attraction that is certain to draw droves of AirBNB travelers to the lake this season.)

If you didn't see it with your own eyes, you probably wouldn't believe it.

After snaking your way through the narrow roads of Alpine Bay, you'll eventually encounter it, like some sort of mid-70s Sid and Marty Krofft meets Monty Python fever dream: a castle.

That's right. A castle.

Hartman Castle, to be precise – an endearingly bizarre amalgam of Bavarian, English, and even Asian architecture all rolled into one and tucked away among the modern homes in this otherwise normal waterfront neighborhood.

The castle was built by Donald Hartman, a native of Toledo, Ohio, who settled in Talladega County after serving as an Army communications specialist while stationed in Hawaii and Birmingham. Well-educated with multiple degrees, Hartman was a beloved Spanish teacher at Berry High School for many years and was respected as a leader in foreign language education. He began working on the castle in the mid-1970s as a gift to his wife, Royldene, who always wanted to live in a castle.

After Royldene died in the early 2000s, Hartman lost

big advantage.”

Shultz bought Hartman Castle and eventually converted it into a unique Airbnb experience, transporting visitors back in time. But at the time Shultz took ownership of the castle, it appeared to be frozen in time.

“It looked like 20 years ago someone just walked out without touching anything and locked the doors,” he said. “The fridge had food in it, there were magazines next to the couches and the bed, some of which were made and some were like someone just got out of it a few minutes ago. It was a little eerie.”

Today, Hartman Castle has been restored to its former glory and updated with new features. The German-style castle finials (painted in eye-popping blue and gold), the handcrafted stone wall surrounding much interest in the project, living semi-reclusively in a house next door as the castle fell into disrepair. After Hartman died in 2022, the house was put up for auction online, catching the eye of Blake Shultz, a Realtor and home builder from Hoover.

By the time Shultz saw the property, it had sat abandoned for almost two decades, and the vegetation was so overgrown it was almost impossible to see the house from the road. Additionally, most of the bidders hadn’t seen the property, and the auction company’s listing promoted the castle for the property instead of the structure. Shultz, on the other hand, thought Hartman Castle was a diamond in the rough.

“It was interesting,” he said. “The way they worded it, basically it was posed as a teardown. I don’t think any other serious bidders got to see the inside, so everyone else that we were bidding against online, all the knowledge they had was it was a teardown.

“They just saw the value in the land, which has a pretty hard cap on what it could be worth as just raw land. So we got to take advantage of the auctioneer advertising it, in my opinion, incorrectly, which gave us a pretty of the property, and a mechanically operated drawbridge at the castle’s front entrance add a healthy dose of medieval-inspired whimsy to the Logan Martin community.

Guests are greeted by a life-size suit of armor the moment they step inside the castle. Throughout the rest of the multi-level structure, the eyes are drawn to artwork, decorative touches, and knickknacks the Hartmans accumulated over the years on their many travels overseas. Around the castle, guests will find German beer steins, vases from Asia, and coats of arms from England – a testament to the Hartmans' eclectic taste and keen interest in other cultures. "They traveled the world together and took influences from all over the globe, so there are a lot of conflicting styles," Shultz says.

Among the enhancements Shultz made to Hartman Castle include adding pickleball courts and a miniature golf course and converting a space on the bottom floor into a game room. There guests can play a vintage pinball machine or video game or lift a pint around the card table during a game of Queen Nazarene (an Old English card game dating to the 1670s).

Less than two years since opening Hartman Castle to the public, Shultz says the interest and response has been amazing. People from more than 20 states have stayed at the castle, and their reviews have been overwhelmingly favorable.

"Everyone's loved it," Schultz said. "We've gotten all five-star reviews, and, amazingly, we've gotten into the superhost status on Airbnb. Everything's been super positive."

How to catch largemouth and spotted bass in early spring

Flowers are blooming, the sun is shining, and warming temperatures are bringing big bass to the shallows.

April is a very exciting month to be on the water chasing elusive largemouth and spotted bass. Known for their hard-fighting nature and their huge bucket-mouth appearance, the largemouth bass is arguably the most sought-after game fish in North America. The Coosa River spotted bass, however, is a little different fish. Stocky and very aggressive, the Coosa River spot is known for its hard fighting/aggressive nature. April is the best month to showcase spawning bass for both species.

Largemouth bass will tend to seek spawning areas in bays, small cuts, pockets, and anywhere where the water is stable and warm. You'll often find largemouth bass in creek pockets where the sun is hitting banks for a majority of the day. I love to target isolated back bay areas, places where the sun will radiate the shallow waters and will be unaffected by wind.

Once you target a largemouth bass spawning, you'll have to see how the fish is acting on the bed. Some largemouth are easier to catch than others, as each individual fish has its own mood. My bait of choice for largemouth on the beds are craws and lizards. These two baits can usually get a spawning bass to fire on the bait.

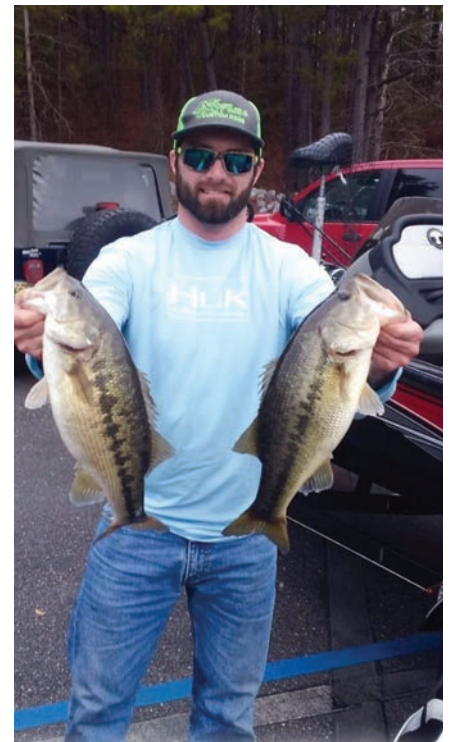

The Coosa River spotted bass is different in its spawning nature. They can be found on hard rock underwater roadbeds, shell rock shelves, sea walls, and gravel humps/points. I have even seen spots bedding in the same habitats at largemouth bass.

My favorite targets for spawning bass on the Coosa River are sea walls. Logan Martin is home to thousands of sea walls, and these big spawning spots will use the hard bottom sea walls to spawn. Carolina Rigs and Shakey Heads are my favorite lures this time of year. I pair them with natural-colored worms or craws. These spots are typically more aggressive than their relatives, the largemouth. Catching and targeting them is often easier. Focus on sea walls and hard bottom structures in main river pockets and bays. Spots like to stay close to current year around. They will even spawn in small slack water spots in the current on the main river.

As always, contact me for all of your fishing related needs and questions at csk0010@auburn.edu

SUDDENLY SUSAN

At the Talladega Mardi Gras Gala

Written and photographed by SUSAN COOK

As I stepped into the International Motorsports Hall of Fame Dome, wearing a black velvet dress with a slit that would rival the Hollywood red carpet and enough sparkling jewelry to sear an unsuspecting retina, I needn't have worried about being overdressed.

With Mardi Gras beads draped around every neck, sequins shimmering under the lights, and music reverberating around the large room, it was clear that this was an event to see and be seen. The convention hall atmosphere quickly faded away as I felt myself being transported from Talladega to the heart of the New Orleans French Quarter. The 31st annual Mardi Gras Gala, benefiting the historic Ritz Theatre, had once again lived up to its reputation as the biggest Mardi Gras party north of Mobile.

While the event may have officially begun at 6 pm, the festivities truly kicked off around 6:45, with Scott Deering and the Usual Suspects band setting the tone for the evening.

Now is the time to schedule installation on a new Deck, Boathouse, RipRap, Seawalls.

Tonight was not a night to be diet-conscious. There seemed to be an unspoken agreement to leave thoughts of restraint and reflection to Ash Wednesday.

Tonight, we dine.

Spirits were flowing just as freely as the conversations, with guests raising their glasses in celebration as they moved between the dance floor and the elegant dining tables draped in classic black cloths, each adorned with festive, Mardi Gras-inspired centerpieces ranging from classic colorful masks to the iconic Fleur-de-lis draped in purple and green beads. As the crowd grew larger and guests found their tables, there seemed to be no strangers here, with groups intermingling and waving and exchanging compliments on each other's fashion choices of the evening.

But beyond the pulsing music and the allure of the food and drink, the Mardi Gras Gala offered plenty of ways to engage in a little revelry for a good cause — as Lauren Deal, Executive Director of The Ritz Theatre announced at the beginning of the evening, all of the proceeds of the event directly support the programs of The Ritz Theatre, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, located in the heart of Talladega's historic downtown square. The Ritz concept was established years ago with a primary goal: to bring arts and culture to the youth of Talladega and the surrounding areas. This goal continues to be the driving force behind their mission, and events like the Mardi Gras Gala help to fuel that dream.

The silent auction boasted an impressive array of items, from dazzling jewelry donated by Griffins Jewelers to handcrafted household pieces, many emphasizing lake life culture. Also not to be missed on the auction block were exclusive signed sports memorabilia and striking artwork by local artists.

Adding an element of excitement, a select group of four artists worked tirelessly throughout the event, creating their own magic in real time with the wave of their paint brushes. What began as four blank canvases transformed before our eyes into completed works of art, each to be auctioned off before the night was through.

For those with an adventurous streak, the vacation packages for sale were nothing short of dreamy—luxurious getaways to Italy's Amalfi Coast, the timeless romance of Paris, and the ancient beauty of Greece. Another sip of bourbon, and I just might have left with that 7-day trip to Italy.

The raffles added an extra layer of anticipation, particularly "The Wine Pull." A table lined with bottles wrapped in red and silver foil teased a hidden surprise—each bottle valued anywhere from $20 to $100. For a mere $20 ticket, guests took a chance, gambling on the hope of uncorking a hidden vino gem.

As the night shimmered on, the band kept the crowd moving with a setlist that effortlessly blended classics like "Lil' Sister," "Sitting on the Dock of the Bay," and "Drift Away" with country favorites that had cowboy boots tapping across the floor. Though Mardi Gras was the theme, a few guests brought their own Alabama twist, pairing their sequins and beads with cowboy hats and boots, bourbon in hand. "Les Bon Temps Rouler" was more than just a saying—it was a way of life that night.

Live art was featured during the gala.

A wine pull was among the fun activities to raise funds for The Ritz.

With every sip, every dance, and every generous bid, the Ritz Theatre moved one step closer to preserving its storied legacy. As I took one last glance around the glistening ballroom, it was clear that while we all may have been miles away from Bourbon Street, the spirit of the Big Easy was alive and well on that windy Saturday night in Talladega.

SEEING THE LAKE WITH SARAH ELIZABETH

AT THE GREAT GROWN-UP SPELLING BEE

Written by DR. SARAH ELIZABETH MOREMAN
Photography by LAURA NATION AND SARAH E. MOREMAN

Leaning over my to-do list for Auburn, where I will be working the next few days, I let out a sigh and glance at the clock on the stovetop. Six o'clock. I stuff my notebook and other essentials into my tote bag. It is time to hit the road, but first, a stop on the way to Auburn. A grown-up spelling bee.

As the asphalt of Interstate 20 hums beneath my tires while I watch the twilight deepen into dark hues, my mind drifts back to my last spelling bee: fifth grade, J. F. Drake Middle School, Ms. Green's classroom. One by one, my classmates sat down, tripped up by their assigned words, until only Jimmy and I remained. Round after round, I spelled each word by seeing it in my mind's eye, my hands clasped behind my back, fingers twitching as if tracing the letters in the air. I did not want anyone to think I knew sign language; I did not, not really. Simply the alphabet.

Then, I decided to keep my hands still. That was my mistake.

"Shepherd," Ms. Green announced.

I took a breath and spelled it out loud.

I nodded, turned to Jimmy, and extended my hand. "Congratulations."

Ms. Green gasped in astonishment, her eyes wide. She had often voiced concerns about our class – how we picked on each other, how we did not get along. She reached out as if to hug all of us, her smile growing bigger and bigger. Then she clapped her hands together, beaming.

"That's how we do it!" she cheered. "Thank you for showing us great showmanship."

Bringing my mind back to the present, I spot the exit sign signaling my turn off the interstate. It is dark, and I have never been to the Pell City Center for Education and Performing Arts (CEPA) before. In the large hall lobby, the energy is warm and inviting. The hum of conversation blends with the occasional burst of laughter as attendees gather near the registration table. The space is bright.

Volunteers smile as they greet guests, handing out tickets and explaining the evening's events. A woman gestures for me to come over, offering a ticket while detailing how the raffle prizes will be announced before the event and during intermission. I thank her with a nod, then let my gaze sweep across the growing crowd.

To my pleasant surprise, I am enveloped in a hug by a former colleague, Steve Hannum. We used to work together at The Literacy Council of Central Alabama, where I briefly served as the director of development and communications. Steve continues to serve as the director of literacy initiatives. Glancing down at the program, I note on the front that this event is organized by the St. Clair Chapter of The Literacy Council of Central Alabama. I look back up and smile at Steve, hugging him once more before slipping into the auditorium to find a good seat and take in the full experience.

Easing into a seat, I settle in with my notepad and pen at the ready. I acknowledge my seating neighbors before turning my attention to the participants on the well-lit stage. Even before opening the program, I can tell that the spelling bee is organized into teams of three.

Flipping through the program, I take note of the cleverly themed team names: Alphaholics, Tequila Mockingbirds, Don't Stop Beelievin, Lakeside Hospice Beelievers, "Bee"ch Babes, Buzz Lightyears, Pell City Rotary 3 "Bees", State Farm Dailey Bees, The Worker Bees, The Spelling Bookies, Bagel Bites, Spellcheckers Anonymous, B is for Brittle, Probate Bees, and Killer Bees.

A sound from the podium draws my eyes to CEPA Executive Director Ash Arrington as she begins the ceremonies for The Great Grown-Up Spelling Bee, presented by the Literacy Council of Central Alabama. She gives special recognition to another former colleague of mine, Ron DeThomas, the St. Clair County Literary Coordinator, for his years of planning this event.

St. Clair County Literacy Council Board Chairperson Sonia Dale steps up to the microphone to share the mission of The Literacy Council.

mentioning the common reminder, "Imagine not being able to read," which highlights the importance of The Literacy Council's work. But this time, it resonated with him differently.

"I am so grateful for all of you for being here, supporting them, for supporting what they do. Reading is the gateway to education, and it's something that we care very much about. Everything that you contribute to this organization helps people learn to read in this community. So, a round of applause for all the people up here," she gestures to the teams on stage before continuing, "while people learn to read tonight."

Emcee Jeff Thompson greets the audience and introduces Pell City Mayor Bill Pruitt, who shares a personal story. He reflects on the years he has been involved with the event, Mayor Pruitt recalls reading to his granddaughter the night before. "If I couldn't read," he says, "I would not have had the pleasure of reading to my granddaughter last night." He expresses gratitude to everyone who worked hard to organize the event and to those who participated, acknowledging their courage in putting themselves up for public scrutiny.

Thompson returns to the microphone, introducing Dr. Bryan Johnson as the new word caller for the evening, filling in for longtime caller Walter Kennedy, who could not attend due to a medical procedure.

Dr. Bryan Johnson is the executive director of The Literacy Council. "Thank you. I am going to start with reading the rules. I think you have the rules. You don't look like a group of people who respect rules, though, even the law enforcement team doesn't look like a group that respects rules. But I'll go through those quickly, and then we will get started, if Buzz Lightyear team does not injure me."

Then, he dives into the rules: "Each team should have a captain and one minute to confer before spelling the word. I'll call the words in order, and you can request a definition, part of speech, or sentence. No writing instruments or electronic devices are allowed. If a team misses a word, they're out, and the last two teams will compete in the final round. Judges' decisions are final."

He continues, "But I also want to recognize a few more people tonight. First, our judges. Thank you so much for being here. Tonight, we have with us Dr. James Martin, Superintendent of Pell City Schools, Judge Robert Minor, and City Council Member Jay Jenkins. Let's give them a round of applause." After a few more jokes courtesy of ChatGPT, and while naming all the sponsors—including Alabama Power as the Platinum Sponsor—he invites one of the event judges, Jay Jenkins, to say a few words.

Jenkins thanks the crowd for attending. He highlights the variety of people on stage, appreciating their willingness to be "ridiculed" for a good cause. The word caller returns to the lectern to kick off the spelling bee, giving the first word of the evening, "purpose," to the Buzz Lightyear team. The first round goes smoothly for most of the 15 teams, with such words as "retreat," "fester," "discord," "foundation," "blight," and "inheritance" easily spelled.

But near the end of the round, the B is for Brittle team falls victim, misspelling their word and being escorted off the stage. The second round claims its first casualties soon after, with three teams eliminated for misspelling "impenetrable," "plumage," and "samosas."

The third round grows more intense as the Killer Bees are eliminated for misspelling "sibilant," the Worker Bees fall after misspelling "Ninevah," and the Alphaholics are ousted by "liana." I spot Blair Goodgame on the Alphaholics team, recognizing her as the mermaid queen from Logan Martin's 14th annual LakeFest, which I attended last May specifically to see the Velcro Pygmies. In my opinion, her teammate, Eric Housh, the metallic green-masked captain, was the best personality of the evening. Meanwhile, other teams glide through words like "subaltern," "assuage," "oriole," "sacristy," and "calibrate" with ease.

Several more teams drop like flies (or should I say dead bees?) during round four, and the audience grows uneasy. We speed through Round Five. I watch as ousted teams filter back into the auditorium and the tension mounts on stage between State Farm Dailey Bees, Don't Stop Beelievin', and Probate Bees. The State Farm Dailey Bees are tripped up by the word “trellatious” (and I am not sure if I spell it right in my notes), and it’s down to two.

Don’t Stop Beelievin’ and Probate Bees in Round Six. I lose count of how many words are called out. Susan Howell is at the microphone on behalf of her Don’t Stop Beelievin’ teammates LaVette Turner and Tiffany Holder, while Mary Wallace spells for her Probate Bees teammates Amy Free and Danielle Alexander.

The audience fidgets, and I cannot help but feel more antsy as we segue into Round Seven. Neither team captain budes in determination, spelling with precision in response to the rapid-fire calls of words such as “auriculum,, “auricular,, “paranoia,” “parsonages,” and “parsimonious.”

I grow antsier as I check the time on my phone. Before I can process what has happened, murmurs ripple through the audience, and I wait to see who wins. It is the Don’t Stop Beelievin’ team, holding the red and gold trophies that shine under the stage lights above.

I silently mouth “wow.” I glance over to see Steve and Ron, then walk over to give them hugs before heading out into the pleasantly cool night air. I make my way to my vehicle and continue my trip to my hometown of Auburn.

MARDI GRAS PARADE

Written by LACI BRASWELL
Staff and Submitted Photos

The City of Talladega's historic downtown square transformed into "the biggest party north of Mobile" during its annual Mardi Gras parade.

As a native Talladegan, it's one of my favorite community events, and I don't miss it if I can help it. I even participated about 20 years ago as a member of the Talladega High School Jazz Band. Since then, it has continued to grow and turn into an all day event, spotlighting all things Mardi Gras, Cajun cuisine and music included.

What began as a cold February morning turned into a celebratory occasion for me, and not just because of the parade. The date (February 22) is also my late Aunt Dottie's birthday. She loved New Orleans and celebrated Mardi Gras, attending many parades and galas in Talladega.

Some of my best memories are of us in New Orleans, shopping at the French Market or looking at the artwork hanging along the iron fences of Jackson Square.

The parade landing on her birthday couldn't have been more fitting, really, and it was the perfect opportunity for me to turn what could have been a day of mourning into a day of celebrating not only her life but the people who make up my community.

I decided to go all out for the occasion, wearing purple and green -- even a mask.

The parade route was the same as previous years, starting at Zora Ellis Junior High School and eventually circling back to The Square.

To be able to take everything in, I decided to stand at the heart of The Square, the Talladega County Courthouse, across from the historic Ritz Theatre. Its parade committee spearheaded the event under the direction of Executive Director Lauren Deal.

Once I found my spot, I couldn't help but notice the smell of Cajun food filling the air. Immediately following the parade, the city would be holding its Party Gras, with food trucks and fellowship on the courthouse lawn. I must admit, it was hard not to focus on the food, but just as my stomach began to growl, the sound of sirens blared. The parade was starting.

First up was the grand marshal, Valerie Burrage, executive director of the United Way of North Talladega County. She is also the 2024 Talladega Citizen of the Year. Under her leadership, those who are in need of a helping hand feel less alone and have an improved quality of life through volunteer community bed builds, food drives and much more. A better person to represent our city couldn't have been chosen, I thought as she waved and threw me a handful of beads.

Several other community leaders, small business owners, and more were also well represented at the parade, riding decorative floats of purple, gold, and green.

One of my favorite moments was the performance of the Talladega College Marching Band. As they marched around the square, the crowd immediately took notice with smiles, some even dancing along.

Dozens of Shriner Comedy Units from Alabama and Georgia also participated this year. They are always another crowd pleaser and another personal favorite.

Ascension Leadership Academy's float.

Shirley Hamilton, Ms. Senior Talladega, participated in the parade.

As the parade came to a close, kids and adults both frantically gathered the remaining beads and Moon Pies that somehow were left behind. I had more parade prizes than I could carry or stuff into my pockets. I decided to make a pit stop to my car before heading back to Party Gras.

My collection included dozens of beads, moonpies and even a couple rubber ducks.

Making my way back to The Square, my eyes and rumbling stomach were set on Momo's Cajun food truck, from Alabaster.

Their menu had all the New Orleans staples: seafood gumbo, red beans and rice, jambalaya, along with other crowd pleasers like bacon cheeseburgers and loaded fries.

The classic jambalaya had my attention, along with something I haven't tried before, Boudin Balls, which were fried with rice, pork and a kick of Cajun spices. They were served with a remoulade sauce. They were delicious and tasted like a New Orleans style hush puppy or eggroll.

The jambalaya was also satisfying and made me feel like I was back on vacation in New Orleans eating with my family at one of our usual stops like Pat O'Brein's. If you ever see them around at a future event, definitely give them a try!

SPRING RETURNS TO LOGAN MARTIN LAKE, AND SO DO THE BLOOMS

THE BEAUTY OF EARLY SPRING FLOWERS INSPIRES HOPE AND REFLECTION

Written by SUSAN COOK
Photographed by TUCKER WEBB

My daffodils bloomed the day before the storms were set to rage through the state on Saturday, March 15. Their happy yellow faces tilted toward me, nodding in silent greeting as they swayed on slender green stems, keeping time with the gentle breeze. It was as if they knew their time was fleeting and wanted to make the most of this bright, golden moment before the skies darkened. Or maybe that was just me, feeling a sense of foreboding, and reading way too much into the moment.

Still, I couldn't shake the thought. Flowers, after all, are delicate things, and storms are not, especially spring storms in Alabama. The forecast called for fierce winds, the kind that could rip shingles off rooftops, send tree limbs crashing to the ground, or much worse. I pictured my flowers caught in the chaos—torn from the soil, their fragile petals tossed into the air like bits of yellow confetti. They had only just arrived, and already, they were at the mercy of forces far greater than themselves.

And so are we, was the thought that followed, even though it was one I preferred not to dwell on for too long.

I thought back to when I planted the flowers the year before—how hopeful and determined I had felt at the start. What began as a cheerful morning of gardening quickly became a test of endurance. My back ached, my hands cramped, and sweat traced hot paths down my spine. I had only planted two, yet four more waited, their bulbs waiting patiently like small, stubborn promises. I wiped my forehead and sank the trowel into the earth once more, wondering: Why am I doing this again?

Planting anything—whether an entire garden or just a few tulips—is an act of faith. It's a commitment to the unseen, to something that takes root in darkness before it ever reaches for the light. It's hard work, sometimes thankless, and often full of uncertainty. You can dig, water, and tend as carefully as possible, but there are no guarantees. A cold snap might come too late in the season.

A dry spell might stretch on too long. Pests, disease, and plain bad luck could undo all your efforts in an instant.

So why do we do it?

I used to feel a twinge of guilt when I picked flowers, knowing I was cutting short their already limited lifespan. Yet I couldn't resist the way they brightened the room, how they transformed an ordinary space into something alive and lovely. Their color-drenched petals, soft as velvet beneath my fingertips, released a fragrance so delicate it felt like a whisper on my nose. And when they began to wilt, their beauty slipping away petal by petal, I mourned them—but only for a moment. Because that is life, after all. A cycle of blooming and fading, of growing and letting go.

As I turned back to watching my daffodils, their golden faces turned toward a sun soon to be hidden behind storm clouds, I couldn't help but worry. Would they be uprooted, their stems snapped, their petals scattered alongside roof shingles in the coming storm? Maybe. Probably. But for now, they stood, bright and bold, unbothered by what the future might bring.

And perhaps that was the lesson they had to offer—the reason we plant flowers at all. Not for permanence, not for control, but for the fleeting joy they bring. For the reminder that beauty exists even in the face of uncertainty. For the hope that, no matter what happens, we can always plant again.

And when the time is right, the blooms will return.

MEET ME BY THE LAKE

Walking along the shoreline at Logan Martin Lake Park, Lauren Deal was discussing what she enjoys about spring.

Lauren Deal

Written and photographed by
BUDDY ROBERTS

“One of the things I look forward to most is the kickoff of our community festivals and fundraisers,” she said. “It’s a vibrant time for connecting with the community, supporting important causes, and enjoying the excitement these events bring.”

As the executive director of Talladega’s Historic Ritz Theatre, Lauren was acutely involved in March with organizing one of the lakeside community’s most popular fundraising festivals, the Mardi Gras Gala, which benefits the theater and is billed as “Alabama’s biggest Mardi Gras party north of Mobile.”

“This year’s gala was an overwhelming success, exceeding expectations in terms of both attendance and community participation,” she said. “The event successfully brought together a diverse group of patrons, highlighting the dynamic spirit of Talladega and its surrounding areas, all while providing an evening filled with entertainment, fine dining, and celebration. Not only did the Gala achieve its fundraising goals, but it also fostered a deeper sense of community involvement, with both individuals and local businesses contributing to the Historic Ritz Theatre’s mission. The funds raised will be instrumental in supporting the theatre’s continued educational programming, ensuring it can keep offering exceptional cultural experiences and enriching opportunities for the community.”

Lauren continued to discuss the Ritz

as she strolled through the green grass a few feet away from the water, going on to describe what she enjoys about time at the lake.

The importance of the Ritz Theatre to Talladega community:

“It is a cornerstone of the Talladega community, serving as a hub for arts, culture, and economic growth. It provides access to high-quality performances, educational programs like the Missoula Children’s Theatre, and partnerships with local organizations. The theatre also plays a crucial role in tourism by attracting visitors for live performances, festivals, and historic tours, which support local businesses and downtown revitalization efforts. The Ritz fosters creativity and confidence by offering young performers hands-on experience in professional-level productions, inspiring the next generation of artists and leaders. The Ritz is more than just a performance venue. It is a vibrant gathering place that strengthens community bonds."

What it means to her to serve as its executive director: "It is both a profound privilege and a tremendous responsibility. The Ritz stands as a living testament to Talladega's rich history, cultural heritage, and enduring resilience. As a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, the theatre operates with a mission-driven focus, relying on philanthropic support, grants, and community partnerships to sustain its artistic and educational programming. The most profound reward lies in witnessing the Ritz serve as a unifying force—bringing people together, enriching lives, and contributing immeasurably to the cultural and economic vitality of Talladega."

Time at the lake: "Whether I'm out on a boat or just relaxing by the water, it's the perfect way to unwind and fully relax. The tranquility and natural beauty of the lake provide a peaceful escape from the day-to-day. There's something so calming about being near the water, whether it's the gentle waves on a boat or simply soaking up the sun by the pool."

Her favorite water-related activity: "A day of boating with friends. There's something incredibly enjoyable about spending time on the water, whether it's for a leisurely cruise, fishing, or simply relaxing under the sun. I also appreciate other water activities such as fishing, swimming and kayaking, which offer a great way to stay active while still enjoying the natural surroundings. Each of these activities allows me to fully immerse myself in the tranquil beauty of the water, creating lasting memories with friends and loved ones."

Her ideal day on the water: "It would be spent aboard a pontoon boat with friends, setting sail early in the morning and enjoying the serenity of the water until dusk. As the designated provider of boat snacks, I take pleasure in preparing a selection of sliders, ensuring that everyone has something to nibble on as we drift through the day. The music we play is a diverse compilation, ranging from country tunes to classic rock, with an assortment of popular hits that everyone enjoys singing along to, creating an atmosphere of camaraderie and joy. As the day winds down, we usually dock at a charming waterfront restaurant for a leisurely dinner, savoring both the food and the stunning view as the sun sets."

Something an acquaintance might be surprised to know about her: "That I am a die-hard sports fan with a deep passion for all kinds of sports. I thoroughly enjoy watching teams come together and work towards a common goal, appreciating the strategy, teamwork, and perseverance involved. There's something incredibly inspiring about the way athletes collaborate and push each other to succeed, and I find that dynamic both exciting and motivating."

Three things she can't live without: "Family, friends, and football. My family provides unwavering support and love, offering a foundation that keeps me grounded. Friends

LAKESIDE FLORA & FAUNA

FINDING WISDOM, FOCUS, AND MEANING in the flight of the hawk

Written by SARAH ELIZABETH MOREMAN

Photographed by TIM BADGWELL

The bridal shower will begin soon, so I step out onto the balcony for a moment. We are on the top floor of a condominium overlooking the lake. The sky is a brilliant blue after a long weekend of torrential lightning and thunderstorms, with clouds at their purest white, full and fluffy. Even the sun seems perfect. In the distance, a few hawks soar high before circling and gliding over the treetops.

Since they are too far for me to distinguish between a Cooper's Hawk and a Red-Shouldered Hawk, with their similar reddish coloring and features, I focus instead on their nature. I admire the grace of their flight, their impressive wingspans. As I watch them soar higher, a scriptural verse comes to mind: Does the hawk take flight by your wisdom and spread its wings toward the south? (Job 39:26).

Tilting my head as if seeking more clarity on the verse, I reflect on the fact that I have reached the age where I am now sharing hard-earned wisdom from both harsh experiences and the growing joys of contentment. A wedding is coming up the first weekend of April, and it is my goddaughter's. She has chosen to have it at the lake. I can already envision the water shimmering in the background, acting as a natural decoration, with the gentle breeze enhancing the sunlight framing the ceremony.

Yet the ceremony is only the beginning of a shared life. I think about what I wrote earlier in a card, now tucked inside the green-accented, beautifully textured gift bag that holds a simple, elegant crystal vase. Careful not to let my prolific writing take over, I kept the note brief. I gifted my goddughter the verse Philippians 2:3-5, along with a prayer that she and her soon-to-be husband always uphold each other in high esteem.

The hawks soaring in the sky remind me of what I wrote, and instinctively, I know that my goddaughter will be protected, watched over from above. I trust that their faith will be safeguarded by divine guidance as long as they hold on to their trust in the Creator, leaning on His wisdom for clarity and spiritual insight.

Still deep in thought, I watch as the hawks stretch their wings before flapping and diving in a seemingly orchestrated choreography. Their aerodynamic dance embodies the power of focus and the importance of spiritual insight, both of which I fervently pray for the soon-to-be wedded couple. Love alone is not enough to sustain a marriage. It requires attentiveness to each other's needs while blending goals into a shared life, taking flight by godly wisdom, and spreading wings toward warmth, unconditional forgiveness, hope, and love.

Love is in the flying, always intentional, always dynamic, never motionless. Each rising sun must be met with the intention to seek understanding rather than to be understood. I pray not only for this couple but for all couples to recognize that love is both work and yet not work. It is about discerning and applying wisdom to honor one another, not only in love but in respect and forgiveness.

Hearing more voices behind me, I turn away from watching the hawks and from my thoughts as I greet those who have arrived. I hurry over to retrieve the wrapped gifts from the guests and place them next to the plush chair designated as the throne for the bride-to-be. Smiles and hugs are exchanged, and words of greeting flutter throughout the sunlit penthouse suite, filled with family and bridesmaids. Gradually, we hostesses attend to the guests, gathering in a circle before the lead hostess speaks a few words, and we close our eyes in prayer. I keep my eyes open, listening through lip reading. As the lead hostess prays aloud, I feel the hawk-embodied strength in her scripture-lined words.

The prayer ends, and we begin sampling the charcuterie feast while continuing our respective conversations. Once we have our fill of chicken salad, pimento cheese sandwiches, and various charcuterie offerings with sweet tea or water, my goddaughter settles into her seat to begin opening her gifts. Seeing the glow radiating from her smiling face, I cannot help but feel prouder than ever as a godmother. As she unwraps each present, she shares a bit about her connection with the giver. When she reaches mine, she looks straight into my eyes before glancing around the sunlit top-floor event room, its windows framing the stunning lake views. She thoughtfully says, "This is Miss Sarah, my mom's close friend and my godmother. She has been there for so many moments in my life. She loves deeply and works hard." She continues speaking, but her words blur as tears well in my eyes.

She reaches into the gift bag and smiles as she holds up the vase. Her face glows even brighter as she mentions that she has been keeping flowers in pitchers and is happy to have the vase. I grin, knowing that her fiancée has been courting her aplenty with beautiful flowers. While inwardly sending another prayer for my goddaughter to always be showered with flowers by her soon-to-be husband, I also think of my own mother, who always welcomed my visits, no matter how frequent, with a vase of seasonal flowers on the nightstand in my bedroom. I know my friend will do something similar to welcome her daughter's visits. The vase, like the hawks soaring high over the lake outside, symbolizes the care in receiving meaningful gifts of wisdom and shared insight from the elders bestowing such gifts.

As she continues opening her gifts, she speaks about each connection with such high regard, solidifying my contentment that her wisdom will only continue to grow as long as she maintains her hawklike focus on what truly matters and remembers to call out for God's wisdom and guidance, a far better approach than relying on hindsight. to stand in a brightly sunlit spot at the forest edge, within the shadows filled with foliage. While letting my hair dry in the sun, I absorb its goldenness as the sun touches everywhere that my eyes can see like King Midas.

In all this brilliance of gold and melting ice, the sense of resurrection and hope surges within me as the sun smiles on my upturned face. Letting out a long, satisfied sigh before laughing at myself about having an initial reluctance to go for a run, I open my eyes to a cheery, upbeat chirping sound. I turn to see a flash of the color of highlighter yellow. I watch as the sparrow-sized songbird bounds up and down, joining others out in the weedy open field across the park, sending out musical and plaintive calls. Some are flitting around purple and yellow flowers, probably coneflowers and zinnias. Dandelions are already blooming, and my favorite—the brilliant yellow daffodils—nestle in clusters around the park.

These wild canaries, the goldfinches, have already gone through the molting of their dense, dull yellow-olive colored winter plumage. They have already gone through the awkwardness of patchwork appearance, to merge into lighter plumage of brighter yellow. Their new, breathtaking brilliance of yellowness phenomenally transforms the landscape, similar to the day smothered with gray clouds that threaten rain being punctured with radiant sun rays. The goldfinch embodies grace, hope, and vibrancy. With the goldenness in its plumage, the delicate sharpness in its short, conical bill, and pointedness in its notched tail, the small songbird embodies a resurrected hope.

Having run many good miles to get here in life, I know I have found contentment and joy. And, joy, to me, is the color of hope in yellow. The goldfinch, spiritually well-revered in many cultures, is the savior bird, a symbol of coming back to life, for its diet of thistle seed, thistles having thorns, associated with the crucifixion and crown of thorns. I grew up drawn to anything yellow, the daffodil-dotted days growing brighter, longer, and warmer with sunlit happiness as promised by the dazzling, refreshing appearance of fully molted goldfinches.

With a smile and a joyful surge of invigoration, I turn around, not needing to convince myself to keep running.

Officials break ground at the site of two new Darden Restaurants in Pell City.

TWO NEW FULL-SERVICE DINING RESTAURANTS ARE COMING TO PELL CITY

The Gateway to Logan Martin Lake has taken a big step toward becoming a premier dining destination, as Darden Restaurants broke ground last month on a new Olive Garden and LongHorn Steakhouse.

The project, valued at more than $6 million, is the result of a partnership between Darden Restaurants, I-20 Development, the City of Pell City, and the St. Clair County Commission. The groundbreaking ceremony was held on the development site at the intersection of U.S. Highway 231 and Hazelwood Drive, adjacent to the I-20 West ramp.

"This is a 'we thing,' not a 'me thing,'" said Bill Ellison, president of I-20 Development, who spearheaded the project. "It's been a total team effort, and I want to compliment the city and county for their commitment and cooperation. As long as we can keep these relationships in place, there are limitless possibilities for what comes next."

The new restaurants are projected to generate a combined $10 million in annual sales for Pell City, significantly boosting the local economy while creating many job opportunities for area residents and enriching the city's dining scene with diverse options, attracting visitors from across the region.

Darden Restaurants operates more than 2,100 locations worldwide. In Alabama, the company employs more than 3,300 team members across its 38 existing locations.

"It's a tremendous feeling to know that these businesses that have so many choices on where to locate choose make their investment in our community," said Bill Pruitt, mayor of Pell City. "They recognize that this is a special place to be. We're grateful for the work of Bill Ellison and for the county commission's partnership, and we're honored to welcome Olive Garden and LongHorn into the Pell City family."

According to company officials, the Pell City restaurants will "uphold Darden's high standards, offering the beloved menus and inviting atmospheres that have made Olive Garden and LongHorn Steakhouse favorites. Guests can look forward to indulging in Olive Garden's signature pasta dishes, soups, salads, and breadsticks, or savoring LongHorn Steakhouse's expertly grilled steaks, sides, and appetizers." Both locations will also feature full-service bars and desserts.

"This entire project is exciting," St. Clair County Commission Chairman Stan Batemon said. "Bill Ellison saw a vision over here, and myself and the other commissioners are grateful for his and the city's work in bringing these restaurants to St. Clair County."

Olive Garden offers a dining experience centered around classic Italian-American cuisine and is known for such signature dishes as unlimited soup, salad, and breadsticks, as well as pasta, chicken, and seafood entrees. LongHorn Steakhouse offers a diverse menu featuring chicken, seafood, and ribs in an atmosphere inspired by the rugged spirit of the American West. Both restaurants are expected to open in 2026.

2806 Dr. John Haynes Drive, Suite 101
Pell City, AL 35125
205.235.8300

in Talladega.

One of the most notable features of the home is that it sits on two acres of land. It was built in 1969 but has been remodeled with updates to both the exterior and interior. It has three bedrooms and two full bathrooms within its 2,200-square-foot interior.

The home has mostly hardwood flooring throughout, barn sliding doors, exposed wooden beams, large windows welcoming plenty of natural light, unique ceiling fixtures, ceiling fans, and a brick fireplace in the family room.

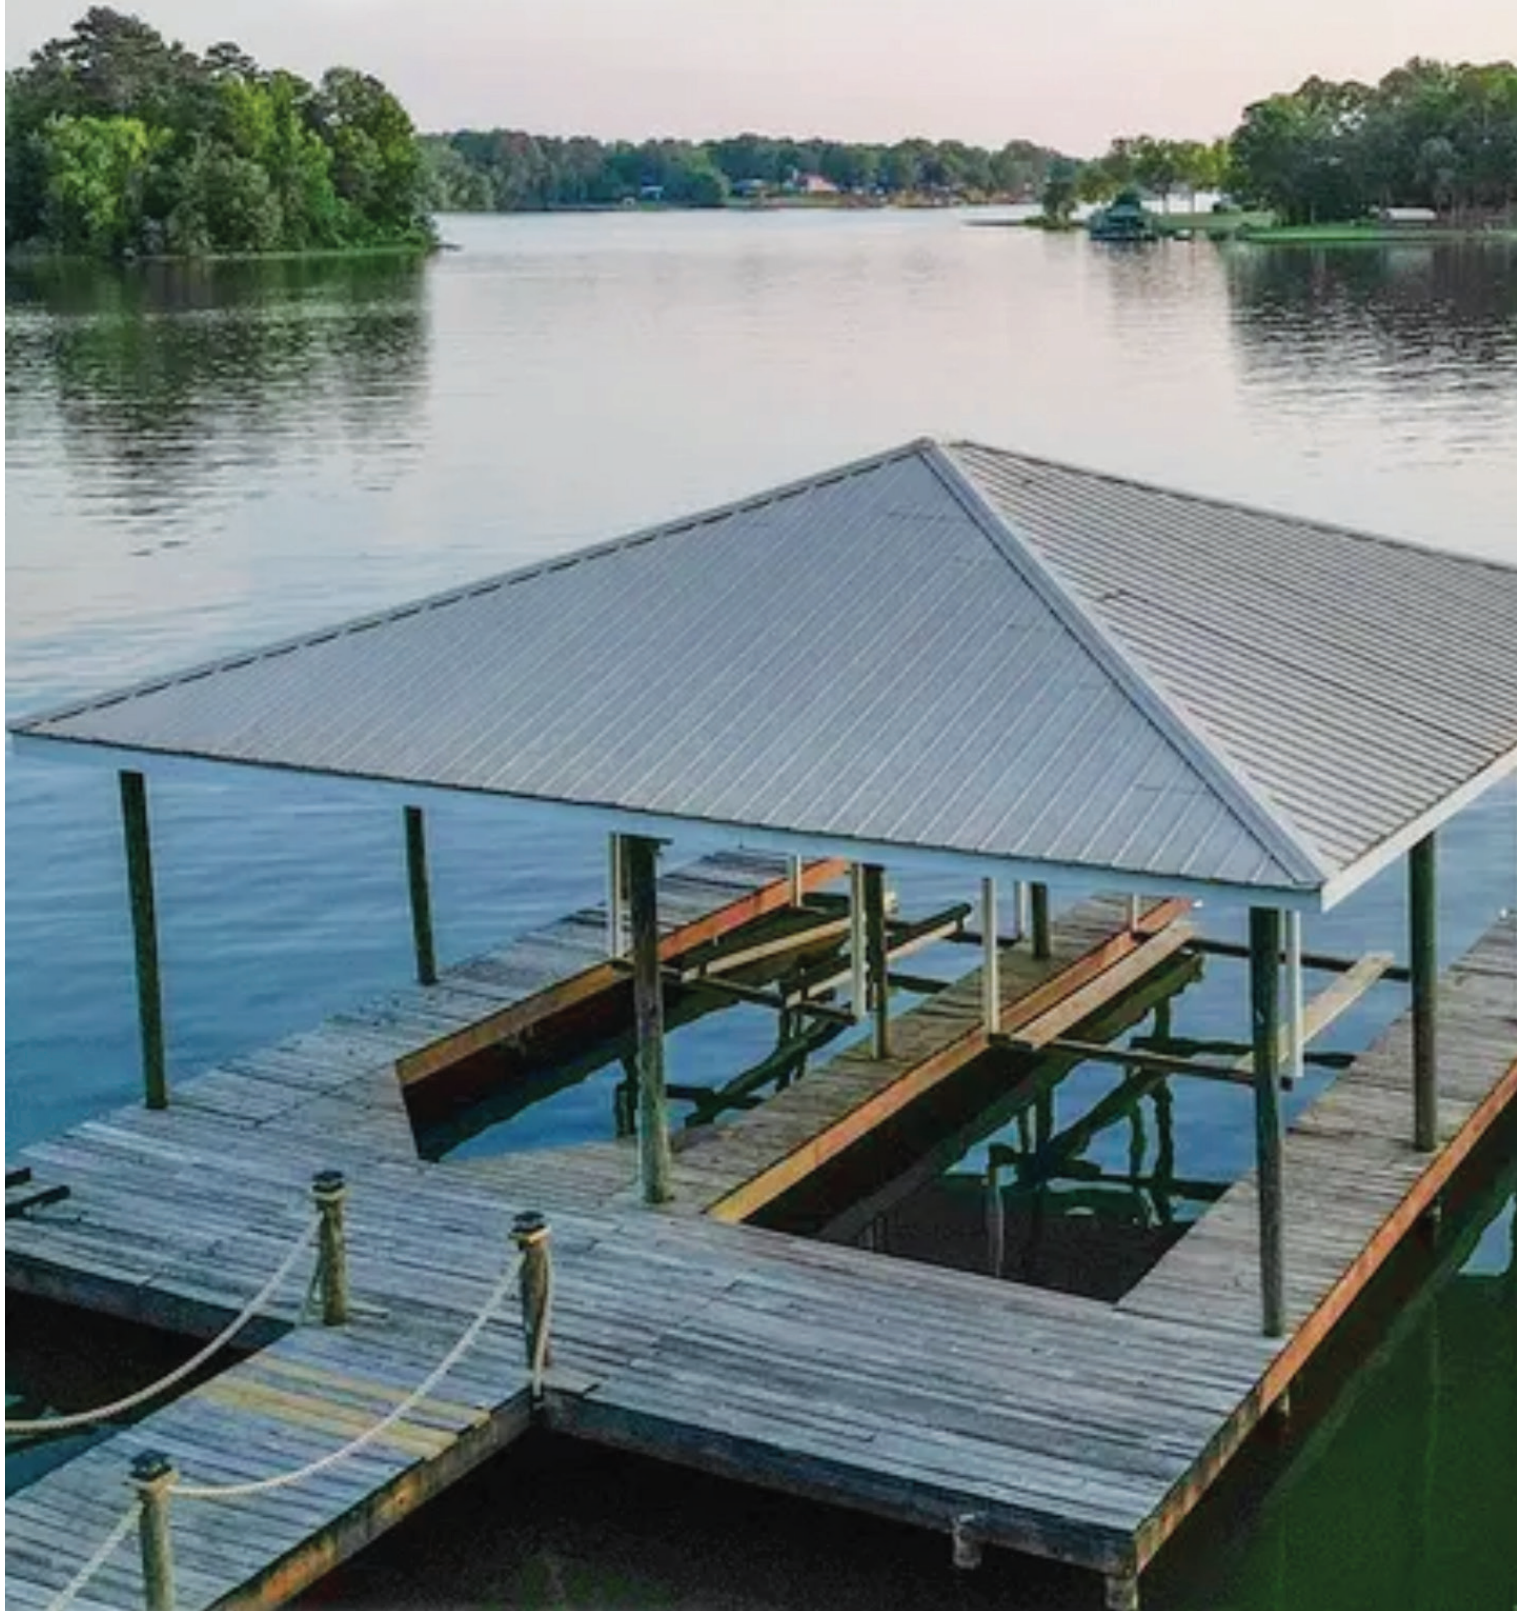

The kitchen is spacious and the perfect place for family meals and creating memories. It has a tiled backsplash, a plethora of white cabinets offering plenty of storage, quartz countertops, recessed lighting, stainless steel appliances, breakfast bar, and a small island.

The exterior features of the home are equally impressive, offering everything a lake lover enjoys. The property includes a boat house, a personal watercraft lift, two electric boat lifts, a one-car garage with storage, an additional three-car garage, a tiled patio, and an enormous backyard.

The property lists at $463,800. For more information, call Donna Breland of Signature Realty at 205-910-8300.

LAKE SIDE REALTOR FINDS JOY

IN HELPING OTHERS

Written by VALLEAN JACKSON

Julie Luker is living out her childhood dream, and she couldn't be happier.

"When I was a young girl, I always had an interest in real estate," she says. "I started looking at house plan books, and it was just one of those things that has always caught my interest. However, I ended up going in a different direction before finding my way to real estate. I had a salon in Pell City for about 35 years, but with the encouragement from some clients and the desire to shift gears in my career, I was able to finally fulfill a passion that has always been near and dear to my heart."

The Keller Williams Realtor now has 15 years of experience in real estate and is fourth in the company's Southeastern region for sales. She believes that she was on the road to real estate without even knowing it while operating her salon, often finding herself helping people connect to houses, one another, and Realtors.

"The foundation of my hair business helped me get my start and have a following in my real estate business," she said. "I strongly believe that my purpose in life is to help people connect the dots. If a client was selling something, I connected them to the people who would be interested. When people needed a house, I connected them to Realtors who could help, and I get to do the same thing now. I truly find joy in helping people."

There's even another similarity to her previous career.

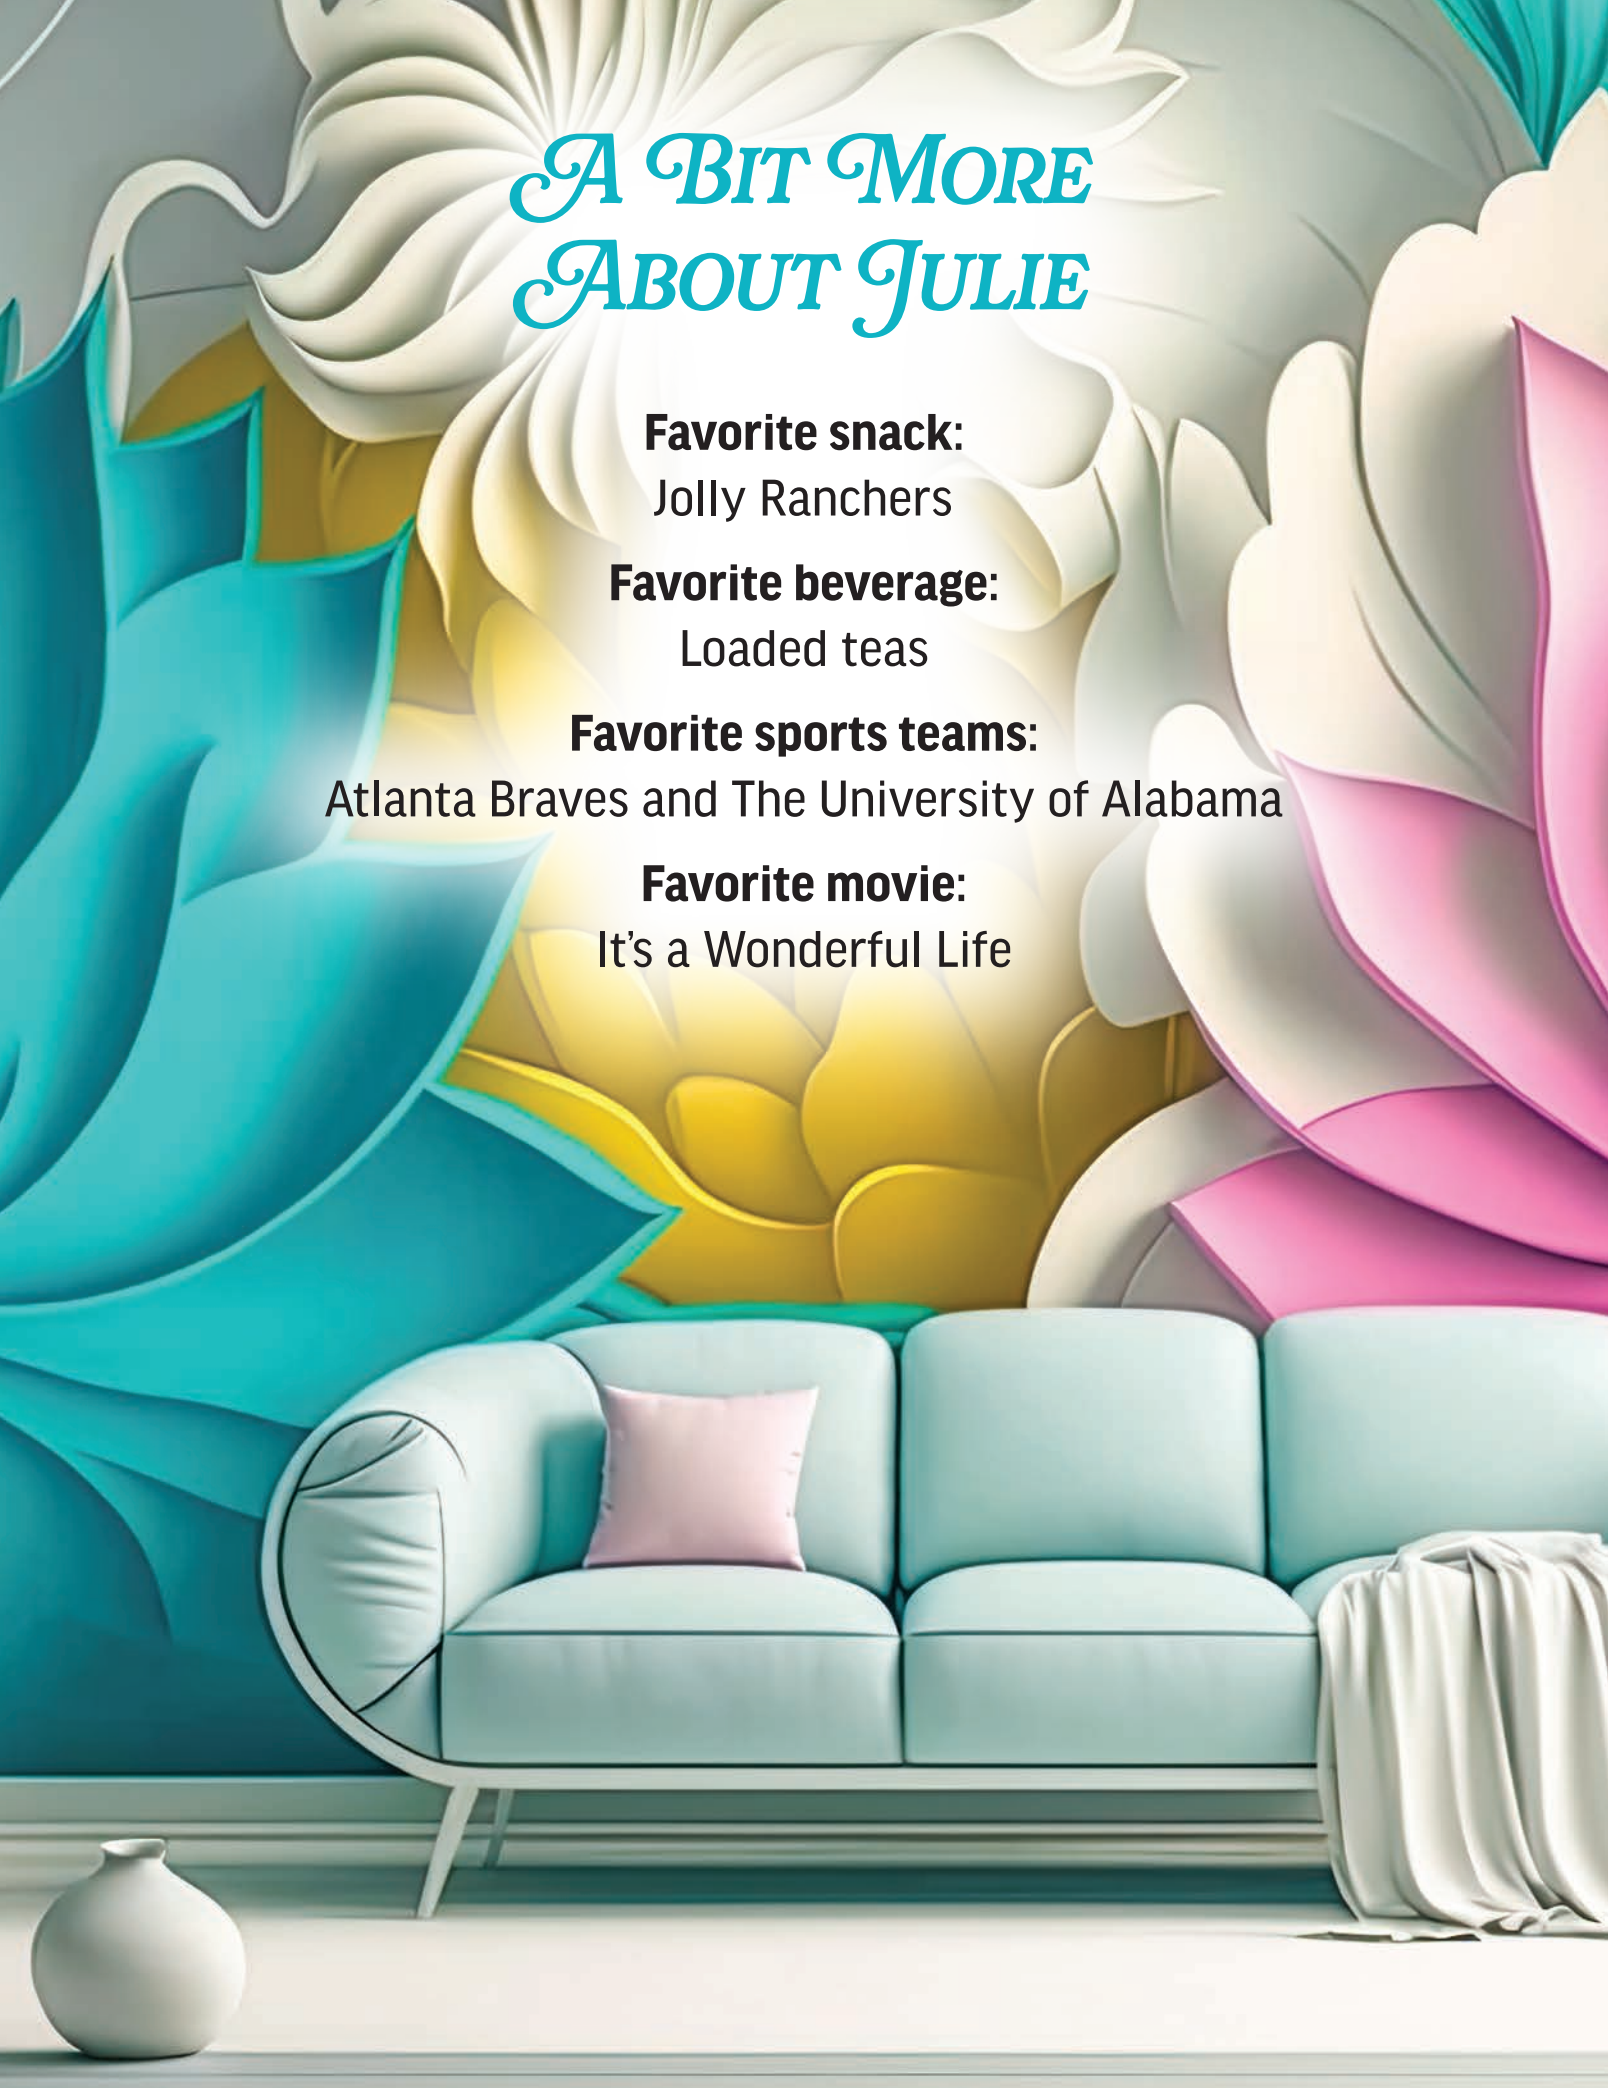

"As a listing agent, it's like the skill of being a hairdresser – it has to come naturally. Real estate has to come naturally for somebody. You've got to have the people skills and passion to be successful. You've got to learn and know that every day there's something else to learn, and every deal is different. I just love seeing people's dreams come true and helping them get to the finish line."

When asked what home ownership means to her, she says that she always tells clients that when they thank her, it's not about her but them, "because they've earned the moment. I'm just in place to help and be a guide. Buyers earn their own reward for being able to purchase a home. They've done their work, they've saved, and they've kept their credit up."

Luker's advice to current home owners is "if you have a low rate, think hard before you sell. Maintain your home, and don't let it lose value. If it needs a roof, save, save, save, and get a new roof. If it needs HVAC, save, save, save. Maintaining your home is like how you maintain your car."

A native of Pell City, when she's not working, Luker enjoys spending time with family, traveling, and being out on the lake.
