

Be Part of Research That Matters

At Montana State University, we believe research should serve the community. That's why we're inviting you to join our Research Participant Community—a network connecting you to studies that explore health, agriculture, education, technology, and everyday life.

By participating you can help shape discoveries that benefit Montana and beyond. Participation is always optional and some studies may offer compensation. You may not qualify for every study, however, your input helps guide future research.

Sign up today to be part of something bigger!

