

Transportation costs take big chunk from household budgets

Transportation is the second largest expense for most American families behind housing costs. Because of the long distances to many services, Montanans, particularly those in rural communities, spend even more on getting from place to place. In some counties, transportation outranks housing as the biggest chunk of family budgets, according to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

View this story online to see information for every Montana county and a map of the state's public transit operators.

Household characteristics in Yellowstone County

People in home	People working	Median income	Basic description
----------------	----------------	---------------	-------------------

1 1 $11,720 Person at National Poverty Line

1 1 $25,208 Working Individual

3 1 $25,208 Single Parent Family

2 0 $40,332 Retired Couple

3 1 $40,332 Moderate income family

4 2 $50,415 Family earning regional median

1 1 $68,060 Single Professional

4 2 $75,623 Dual professional family

Costs as percentage of annual income

■ Transportation □ Housing

