North Dakota's oil production

The state's oil reserves were first tapped in 1951, and steadily produced — until the explosion in activity in the 2000s that truly remade the state.

Source: North Dakota Department of Mineral Resources
Chart by Sam Easter