A group of construction workers in safety gear (hard hats, high-visibility vests) are working on a city street. They are installing concrete curbs along the edge of a road. One worker in the foreground is using a long metal tool to guide the placement of a concrete curb. Another worker is using a shovel. The background shows a building with large windows and a sign that says "CITY OF DENVER". There are orange traffic cones and yellow caution tape on the scene.

She is seated outdoors in a grassy area with various colorful flowers (yellow, orange, pink, white) in the foreground. In the background, there is a wooden fence, a blue inflatable object, and other people, suggesting a graduation ceremony or a celebratory gathering.

Local resident arrested in child sexual abuse investigation

JEREMY C. RUARK
Cottage Grove Sentinel

A local man faces multiple charges following his arrest during a child sex abuse investigation.

On June 19, at approximately 12:30 p.m. a Cottage Grove Police detective and police officers arrested 61-year-old Cory M. Aslin at his residence in Cottage Grove.

“The arrest is the result of an ongoing investigation into allegations that Aslin possessed sexually explicit images of children during which a search warrant had previously been executed at his residence,” Cottage Grove

Police Chief Cory Chase said.

Aslin faces the following charges:

- Encouraging Child Sex Abuse in the First Degree – 88 Counts
- Encouraging Child Sex Abuse in the Second Degree – 88 Counts
- Possession of materials depicting sexually explicit conduct of a child in first degree – 88 Counts

The Lane County Sheriff’s Office and the FBI assisted Cottage Grove Police in the investigation.

“The arrest is part of a partnership between local, state, and federal law enforcement agencies to combat child exploitation and protect the children in our community,” Chase said. “Thank you to the agencies who participate in the Lane County ICAC Task Force and work together to make our community safer.”

The investigation is ongoing and no further details are available at this time, Chase added.

If anyone has any information regarding this investigation, they are asked to contact the Cottage Grove Police Department at 541-942-9145 and reference case # 2025-0253.

ODF taking to the sky for forest health review

JEREMY C. RUARK
Cottage Grove Sentinel

If you look up this month and see a slow-flying plane crisscrossing the skies over Oregon it’s likely just researchers looking for signs of damage in Oregon forests from insect pests and other threats.

The Pacific Northwest Aerial Detection Survey of Oregon’s forests has been conducted by the Oregon Department of Forestry (ODF) and the USDA Forest Service (USDAFS) since the 1940s, except during the 2020 pandemic. It is the longest continuous annual survey of its kind in the United States.

To complete the survey, airborne researchers take off in fixed-wing aircraft with one on each side of the plane. They use laptops to record where trees appear to be in trouble. Survey flights typically fly between 1,500 to 2,500 feet above ground level, following a systematic grid four miles apart and traveling at 90 to 140 miles an hour, according to ODF Forest Entomologist Christine Buhl.

“Oregon has about 30 million acres of forest so flying in a grid pattern over it allows us to find problems even in remote areas hard to reach by vehicle or on foot,” Buhl said. “For several years this survey has identified a trend in increasing tree deaths as a result of drought stress and subsequent opportunistic beetle attack, which finishes off these stressed trees.”

Trees that are most stressed are those that are less drought-tolerant or have spread into fringe habitat and don’t have time to adapt to the rapidly changing conditions, according to Buhl.

“Beetles might be the immediate cause of a tree’s death but the underlying cause is often drought,” she added.

Other causes of trees being injured or killed can also be viewed from the air, such as damage from storms and wildfires.

Last year’s report showed drought, insect pests, and tree diseases continue to be the biggest threats to the state’s trees. That report is available at <https://www.oregon.gov/odf/forestbenefits/>

Observers with the Oregon Department of Forestry are flying over Oregon's forests this summer in collaboration with the U.S. Forest Service to gauge the health of the state's trees.

“Best management practices are to plant the right tree species and seed zone in the right place for projected climate and keep stocking density to a level that can be supported during drought,” Buhl said.

Due to persistent dry conditions, she said she expects the 2025 survey to see more of the same trends in higher tree deaths in Oregon’s driest areas, such as in southwest Oregon and east of the Cascades.

Buhl emphasized the importance of on-the-ground collaborators to help round out the full picture of forest health in Oregon.

“In addition to information ODF and the USDA Forest Service gather, we rely on Oregon State University Forestry Extension staff from across the state, and collaborate with other natural resource agencies, universities, public and private forest landowners, and members of the public to gather information on the ground,” she said.

Cottage Grove Humane Society receives $5,000

T-Mobile has awarded $5,000 to the Cottage Grove Humane Society as one of the company’s latest 25 Hometown Grant recipients.

“The $5,000 grant will go toward renovating the Humane Society of Cottage Groves This and That Thrift Shop, updating electrical panels and wiring to reduce potential fire hazards and continue to be a source of vital funding for all our animal welfare programs,” the Humane Society officials said.

The organization was selected from nearly 1,000 applicants, according to a release from T-Mobile. Across Oregon, T-Mobile has now provided more than $550,000 to 14 cities through the initiative, including Cottage Grove.

“The Humane Society of Cottage Grove serves as an invaluable resource for both the community and animals in our region,” Local veterinarian Dr. Carolyn Damewood who works with the Humane Society said. “They have successfully financed hundreds of spays and neuters for our local dogs and cats through grants, low-income programs, and coupons. Additionally, they assist low-income pet owners in both crisis situations and routine care.”

Each quarter, T-Mobile awards 25 Hometown Grants to small towns with populations of 50,000 or less. To

Who cares about public notices?

YOU SHOULD

You have the right to know what’s happening in your community.

Public notices – information local governments are obligated to provide citizens – are required to be published in local newspapers to provide a public record that’s accessible to everyone.

Public notices keep you informed about your government.

But, Oregon legislators are trying to keep public notices from appearing in local newspapers. This severely impacts government transparency and, in turn, limits the public’s right to hold them accountable for their actions.

Let your state legislators know that you value being able to access notices in your newspaper and that they are worth the investment.

Protect public notices in newspapers and protect your right to know.

Sandra Smith

Nov. 25, 1967 - June 15, 2025

Sandra Lee Smith passed away Sunday morning, June 15. She is survived by her loving husband, Charles, and her child Luc Carlyle, as well as stepsisters and brothers, and many nieces, nephews, and cousins. Her family and friends will miss her kind and gentle nature. A celebration of Sandra's life was held on Tuesday, June 24 at the Cottage Grove Elks Lodge, 755 North River Road.

In 1975, Jerry and Barbara Howell moved to Cottage Grove and began a logging business while raising their six children.

When their business slowed in 1990, and with her success in raising her own children, she applied for the open administrative position.

"The school has needed much renovation and restructuring over the years," Howell said. "We've done so much over the course of 35 years with the help of many boards, and staff and community members."

Currently GDC has a staff of 12 to serve 50 preschoolers and 30 after-schoolers.

When asked why she stayed so long she said, "When you go to work and you are greeted by children that run up to you and hug you, whether they are three-year-olds or 10-year-olds, how can you call that work? The saying is true, 'If you find something you love to do you will never work a day in your life.'"

FAVORITE MEMORIES

She said her favorite memories are the families they have served, the board members who volunteered countless hours, and the numerous agencies that have worked in tandem to provide a safe and loving educational environment for so many years.

Howell thanked those gathered for the ceremony and the broader community for its long-time support and generosity. She acknowledged the center's valuable partnership with the South Lane School District to transition pre-kinder kids to kindergarten and providing transportation for students in GDC's afterschool program. She said the City of Cottage Grove administrators and the fire and police departments have also been very supportive.

"Whether it was for a field trip or an emergency, I always felt that if I needed them they would prioritize Great Days

Howell was praised for all the transportation upgrades made in the last three plus decades. When she began her job in 1990, the center used a Volkswagon van to transport the children. The first upgrade was to a 15-passenger van. Later, she found a great deal on the internet for a small bus and flew to Michigan to drive it back.

GDC's location at the eastern base of Mt. David makes it prone to flood damage. Howell's last major project was to clean up and restore the building after it was extensively flooded in the heavy rainstorms last March.

The building was built in 1950 as a Seventh-day Adventist school. In 1974, it was purchased by a nonprofit organization that operated as a childcare cooperative governed by parents and community members. It was noted in the ceremony that some in that day referred to the learning center as "the hippy school". The governance model continues to this day.

RECOUNT

Stay involved and ask questions. I want to thank everyone for the opportunity and the support I received during this whole process."

POSITION 7 RACE

According to the Oregon Secretary of State's website, that includes the results from all counties, the Position 7 race is so close it statutorily triggers an automatic recount after the final certified results are reported. As of June 16, Parsons was ahead of Gowing by just three votes to serve the final two years of a four-year term.

Incumbent Jeff Gowing, a former Cottage Grove Mayor and retired Weyerhaeuser millwright, was appointed by the school board in February 2024 to fill a vacancy and he wants to complete the remaining two years of Position 7's four-year term. His challenger, Bill Parsons, is a businessman and retired South Lane County firefighter. Both candidates were classmates at Cottage Grove High School in the late 1970s.

Gowing said, "I never expected this race to be so unclear about who won. There were a lot of people pulling for me, knocking on doors and pounding the pavement. A lot of them I never met, however, they supported me, and I can't thank them enough. It's nice to feel that small town support. I'm a native Grover and I'm not going anywhere."

He said regardless of the final outcome, he remains committed to supporting the district.

"I've already started working with principals on helping kids get the mentors and job shadows they will need to move forward. I don't need the position to make a difference in these kids' lives; for me, it's all about caring for the community.

Challenger Bill Parsons said his first attempt to seek an elected position was an eye-opening experience. He was surprised by how unaware the public is about the school district's problems. He said it was disappointing to see how few people actually voted, but the people who did vote were very passionate about who they were voting for.

His said the district needs to focus on getting back to the basics, improving test scores and expanding vocational opportunities. He hopes the outcome of the recount will give him the opportunity to do that.

Parsons noted the state of Oregon ranks near the bottom of nationwide test scores and South Lane School District is failing in many areas to meet state levels. He believes the focus needs to be on better graduation rates and improving student attendance.

"We also need to look at how to create better work environments for our staff so that they feel our school district is a fulfilling place to work," he added. "I'm looking forward to the opportunity of working with our new superintendent. He's going to be a great asset to the school district."

When asked if he plans to remain involved in school district matters if the recount goes in Gowing's favor, Parsons said,

"I will be available if opportunities are presented to help the district reach its goals. Our kids are our future, and I'm committed to helping in any way I can."

NEXT STEPS

A Lane County Elections spokesperson replied to the Sentinel's June 16 email inquiry on the next steps in the process to determine the winner in that race.

The unidentified spokesperson said, "Final certified results are posted to our website today. We are in the process of scheduling automatic recounts that are required by ties or margins lower than one-fifth of one percent per ORS 258.280. Currently, Position 7 for South Lane School District is within the statutory margin for an automatic recount, but Position 5 is not. Recounts are scheduled after certification of results, so none have been conducted yet. We will notify the district, the candidates, and the Secretary of State once we have the recount counting boards scheduled, as well as posting (the updated) information on our website."

As of press time, the recount was pending. Follow developments online at cgsentinel.com and in the Wednesday print editions of The Sentinel.

BACKGROUND

As previously reported in the Sentinel's May 28 issue, there were four open seats on the school board in the May 20 election.

Retired schoolteacher Diane Hicks sailed past political newcomer to Cottage Grove, Rayla Campbell, with 720 votes to win the Position 2 seat. Businessman Chris Holloman defeated Sherry Duerst-Higgins by 229 votes. She served more than three decades in the Position 4 seat on the board of directors.

Local races for school boards and service districts typically have lower turnout compared to general elections. The Secretary of State's office reported the May 20 election had one of the lowest turnouts for a special district election with only 23.82-percent of registered voters participating.

Turnout figures vary by county, with some areas having higher or lower participation rates. Lane County's voter turnout percentage was approximately 21.58-percent of its 279,566 registered voters.

Editor's Note: A small portion of the South Lane School district extends into Douglas County to serve the Wards Butte area. The results posted last week reported only the Lane County election results.

A note from your neighbor

This is a note from your neighbor, a liberal.

What's a liberal, you may ask? Hint: it's not what you see on FOX News. We love football, cookouts, country music and the Second Amendment. We like muscle cars from 1967-1971 and we love manual transmissions. We love America and the freedoms we've been granted by those who've fought and died for our country. We believe hard work is the backbone of the American economy.

So that's what we like, what we stand for. What we don't like are draft dodging sexual predators with more than 30 felony convictions for election fraud. I think we can agree nobody likes those things, right?

What we don't like are elite East Coast billionaires who've inherited their money and act like they've earned it. What we don't like are men who brag about wanting to marry their own daughters, men who think military personnel are suckers and losers, men who steal from the poor and give to the rich. I think we can agree nobody likes those things, right? We think the 'woke' movement is divisive and we think personal pronouns are just that, personal.

To conclude, if you like watching football while drinking the cold beer you picked up with your 1970 Dodge Challenger, guess what? You're a liberal. If you believe the federal government shouldn't be allowed to operate with impunity, guess what? You're a liberal. Turn off the misinformation channel - the channel that was fined over 700 million dollars for spreading misinformation - and get to know us. We're just like you.

Plan as if lives depend on it

As a rapidly spreading wildfire on the northern edge of Oregon forces evacuations, now is the time for those in surrounding areas to assemble emergency kits and prepare evacuation plans.

Pack a bag for yourself and one for your animal companions containing at least one week's worth of food, bottled water, and medication. Include medical records, bowls, comfort items, and litter box supplies for cats. Make sure all animals are microchipped and wearing ID tags with current contact information.

If evacuation becomes necessary, always take animals with you. Frightened animals may bolt, so keep dogs on a harness and leash and transport cats and other small animals in secure carriers. Research animal-friendly destinations—campgrounds can be a good option, and hotels often relax “no animals” policies during disasters.

If authorities force you to evacuate without your animals, never leave them tied up or confined. Fire can turn deadly in seconds. Cut fences and open stalls to give animals at least a chance to escape.

Plan as if lives depend on it. They just might.

The Bottle Bill: An Oregon gem

SUSAN COLLINS
Oregon Capital Chronicle

Oregon's bottle bill, established in 1971 as the first in the U.S and the second worldwide, leads the nation with an 87% beverage container redemption rate (2023 data) and a preliminary redemption rate of 90% for 2024, far surpassing the beverage container recycling rate of 26% in non-bottle bill states.

Although the Legislature has approved changes allowing retailers to refuse nighttime beverage container redemption based on reports of increased homelessness and drug activity during those hours, the facts still tell a clear story of an incredibly successful deposit return program.

When people who purchase beverages choose not to redeem their containers, those containers become available for someone else to redeem. Programs like Oregon's, with a robust bottle and can deposit return infrastructure, can serve as a lifeline for low-income individuals, providing supplementary income that can help keep them off the streets.

Research from Occidental College economics professor Bevin Ashenmiller in California indicates that container redemption contributes a significant percentage to the livelihood of the lowest-income households, and can make the difference between being able to pay rent or not.

In addition, thanks to the bottle and can deposit return system in Oregon, nonprofit organizations like Ground Score Association in Portland and Everyone Village in Eugene are providing employment and workforce training, which is helping to keep people out of homelessness and less dependent on government services.

These programs are made possible due to the organizations' ongoing partnerships with the Oregon Beverage Recycling Cooperative (OBRC), the statewide not-for-profit industry stewardship organization responsible for administering Oregon's bottle bill. Overall, philanthropic programming via the bottle bill has raised more than $33 million for nonprofits across Oregon since 2009.

Elaine S. Povich / Stateline

Stephen Rines, manager of the West Bath Redemption Center in West Bath, Maine, examines a wine bottle before determining which sorting bin it belongs in. States are under pressure to increase their support of the redemption system to help struggling redemption centers stay in business and continue the popular recycling programs.

Oregon's beverage container return volume has doubled in the last 14 years. The state's bottle bill is widely regarded as the best in the U.S. because of its broad coverage of beverage types, a mix of convenient return options across the state, and centralized coordination by the OBRC to ensure a seamless user experience.

Yet some critics are positing that curbside recycling can replace the bottle bill with similarly high recycling rates. The facts tell a different story.

While curbside plays a role in beverage container recycling, many consumers believe that whatever they put in their curbside bins gets recycled, which is not the case. Newly available data show that in Oregon's curbside programs, 41% of deposit plastic bottles are improperly sorted, and 53% of aluminum beverage cans end up in the wrong bale, meaning they may never get recycled. It is telling that in California (also a bottle bill state), when approximately half of the deposit return redemption centers closed between 2013 and 2022, the redemption rate dropped by 15% – but curbside recycling did not come close to making up the difference, even with widespread blue bin availability in many areas.

Bottle bills also reduce the number of littered beverage containers. A 2020 Keep America Beautiful study found that bottle bill states have half as much soft drink and beer container litter per capita compared to states without such programs. To further reduce litter, the OBRC partners with the nonprofit SOLVE for cleanup events statewide. Individuals who collect littered containers for income also contribute to waste reduction.

Oregon's system is built on the principle of continuous improvement. For example, SB 992 includes a provision that will enable expansion of the People's Depot, which could shift individual container returns away from downtown retail stores to The People's Depot and more volume into the Green and Blue Bag program.

As beverage consumption continues to rise, we encourage residents to review the facts demonstrating the bottle bill's success as an environmental, social and economic asset. It is important for Oregonians to consider whether they are willing to give up a program that promotes recycling, reduces waste, provides financial opportunities for those in need and directly employs hundreds of Oregonians – all while maintaining the nation's highest beverage container redemption rate.

Susan Collins is president of the nonprofit Container Recycling Institute, which produces original research, objective analysis, responsible advocacy and wide-ranging education on beverage container recycling.

Leisure, hospitality led Oregon job gains in May

JEREMY C. RUARK
Cottage Grove Sentinel

Oregon's seasonally adjusted nonfarm payroll employment declined in May by 1,400 jobs, following a revised gain of 1,000 jobs in April, according to the Oregon Employment Department.

Oregon's unemployment rate was 4.8% in May and 4.7% in April, after rising gradually over the past year from 4.1% in May 2024. The state's 4.8% unemployment rate was 1.2 percentage points higher than the recent low of 3.6% during spring 2023.

GAINS AND LOSSES

May's gains were largest in leisure and hospitality (+1,300 jobs); transportation, warehousing, and utilities (+1,200); and health care and social assistance (+900). Declines were largest in construction (-1,700 jobs); manufacturing (-1,200); and professional and business services (-900).

Leisure and hospitality has grown rapidly this year, adding 1,300 jobs in May and 6,000 jobs so far this year, following slight declines over the prior two years. In the past 12 months, three component industries grew rapidly: amusement, gambling, and recreation (+1,700 jobs, or 8.5%); limited-service restaurants and other eating places (+3,600 jobs, or 4.8%); and accommodation (+1,100 jobs, or 4.5%).

Construction employment dropped by 1,700 jobs in May, to a total of 112,300 jobs, continuing a downward trend. Since reaching a peak of 119,000 jobs in June 2023, construction has shed 6,700 jobs, or -5.6%.

Manufacturing cut 1,200 jobs in May, continuing its decline of the past two years. Since May 2024, manufacturing has lost 6,100 jobs, or -3.3%. In that time, the component industries cutting the most jobs were semiconductor and other electronic component manufacturing (-2,900 jobs, or -8.7%); transportation equipment manufacturing (-500 jobs, or -4.5%); and fruit and vegetable preserving and specialty food manufacturing (-400 jobs, or -4.4%).

The U.S. unemployment rate was 4.2% in both April and May.

‘Methodical’ search leads to submerged vehicle

One person is safe after a vehicle goes into Cottage Grove Lake.

Details of the June 13 event have emerged in a release from the Lane County Sheriff’s Office (LCSO).

LCSO deputies responded to a report of what sounded like a vehicle crashing into Cottage Grove Lake along London Road, south of Cottage Grove.

As deputies arrived on the scene at approximately 10 p.m. June 13, they were unable to find a vehicle, but found signs of a crash, according to the release.

The LCSO Search & Rescue Dive Team responded and began searching the murky water in the dark. After an hour of methodical searching, they located the vehicle fully submerged but unoccupied.

“The divers continued their search, and thankfully located the driver on shore, unconscious but otherwise unscathed,” the release states. “Deputies determined the driver had fallen asleep, resulting in the crash”

The driver, who was not immediately identified, was returned home, and the dive team assisted with the removal of the vehicle from the water by a tow company.

Nearly every week, the LCSO Search & Rescue volunteers assist our residents and visitors in all types of environments.
