ABC weekday staple 'General Hospital' turns 60

Very few television programs last for 60 years, especially in the current media climate.

That makes it a big deal, indeed, that the ABC drama "General Hospital" – which has won the Daytime Emmy Award for outstanding drama series 14 times, a record – is marking its six-decade milestone with special moments before and after the actual anniversary: April 1, which falls on a Saturday this year. Still, the Monday-through-Friday episodes surrounding that date will honor legendary characters and stories (including a tribute to late co-star Sonya Eddy), and bring back the popular Nurses Ball being staged for the first time in three years.

Created by Frank and Doris Hursley, the saga of the residents of the fictional Port Charles (now guided by executive producer Frank Valentini) has transformed since its 1963 debut, reaching one of its peaks with the 1981 wedding of Luke and Laura Spencer (played by Anthony Geary and continuing cast member Genie Francis) ... to date, the highest-rated dramatic hour in daytime-TV history. However, for whatever romance or espionage has been factored in, the center of the show always has been the title medical facility.

One of the longtime characters reflecting that is Nurse Elizabeth Webber, portrayed by Rebecca Herbst, who's marking her own "General Hospital" milestone by celebrating her 25th anniversary with the series. The part was created for her, and with her alter ego having gone through affairs and kidnappings and pregnancies over a quarter-century, the three-time Daytime Emmy nominee appreciates that she remains prominent on the show.

"It certainly does not feel like it's been 25 years," the pleasant Herbst reflects. "We have so many cast members, I do not envy the writers with their job of keeping everybody on the canvas in these complex stories. It really is amazing to me."

Herbst confirms that the mood on the "General Hospital" set has been quite spirited lately. "I feel like we look at each other and just chuckle in a way," she muses, "because this show has been around for 60 years. We're not surprised, because it's been a popular show forever and our writers have done a really great job of keeping up with the times. We're just incredibly grateful that we're still here!"

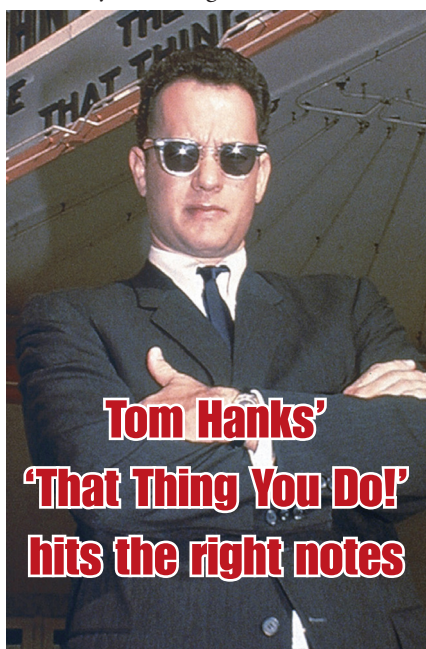

Married to former "General Hospital" co-star Michael Saucedo, with whom she has three children, Herbst almost left the show in 2011 due to a storyline shift. Fans spoke up against that – loudly – and effectively saved her job.

Expressing her ongoing thanks for that, Herbst says that lately, the initially rebellious Elizabeth is "not too far off from who she was when she came to Port Charles. It's really nice that I've been able to add so many layers to the character over the years."

movie review

Thanks to a music group named The Wonders, which didn't actually exist, the fans of "That Thing You Do!" are many on its 27th anniversary.

Written by co-star Tom Hanks, who also made his directing debut on the film, the 1996 musical-comedy – currently streaming on Hulu – charts the rapid rise and equally fast fall of a small-town 1960s band that hits it big after the suddenly necessary replacement of its drummer, played by Tom Everett Scott. He sets a new beat for the group, literally, and their locally popular single (which shares the movie's title) zooms up the charts as a result.

That's thanks to a savvy talent agent (Hanks) who steers The Wonders on a path that many actual music acts of the era followed ... appearing on a concert tour, in a "Beach Party"-type movie, and on an "Ed Sullivan Show"-type variety series. Hanks clearly has a deep affinity for that era, since all of those events are depicted with loving authenticity that's warmly nostalgic at the same time it's knowingly amusing.

The other Wonders are represented superbly by the rest of the main cast: Steve Zahn as the wry guitar player who maintains a healthy skepticism about what's happening to all of them; Ethan Embry as the naive bass player who's happy to go along simply for wherever the ride takes them; and Johnathon Schaech as the moody, hyper-serious songwriter and singer and guitarist. Liv Tyler is charming as the latter's girlfriend, who travels with the band as the members' "wardrobe mistress," though she's principally their prime cheerleader.

BY JAY BOBBIN

Much of the music (cleverly evoking familiar '60s hits) for "That Thing You Do!" was composed by Adam Schlesinger, the later "Crazy Ex-Girlfriend" maestro who very sadly became an early casualty of the coronavirus pandemic. Hanks also had a big hand on composing the soundtrack, which ranges from bouncy tunes to sentimental ballads, and even to the theme of the aforementioned TV variety show that enjoyably features Hanks' "Bosom Buddies" partner Peter Scolar as host "Troy Chesterfield." (Also notable on that fake show: a pre-stardom Bryan Cranston, intentionally stiff as strange-to-celebrity astronaut Gus Grissom.)

The wonderful irony of "That Thing You Do!" is that by being set in a certain time, it's timeless. A viewer will find even more to love by recognizing its pop-culture elements of the period (extending to a clip from the marionette-starring adventure series "Fireball XL5"), but even if audience members lack that knowledge, multiple-threat talent Hanks created a piece of entertainment that will continue to enchant generations.
