What's the Relationship Between Chocolate and Valentine's Day?

It's hard to imagine Valentine's Day without chocolate, and that association can be traced to a name that is very familiar to people who enjoy sweets on February 14. According to History.com, Richard Cadbury utilized advancements at his family's chocolate factory in England to produce new varieties of what was then known as "eating chocolate." Cadbury then began marketing eating chocolates in decorative boxes, and while History.com notes he never patented the heart-shaped box, it's widely believed Cadbury was the first to create one.

Anya Taylor-Joy in
"The Gorge"

It's been almost a decade since Anya Taylor-Joy made her captivating debut in Robert Eggers' "The Witch" at Sundance Film Festival in January 2015, but what a decade it has been. From "Split" (2016), to Netflix's "The Queen's Gambit," to iconic franchises such as Dune, Mad Max and even Super Mario Bros., Taylor-Joy's repertoire averages out at a little more than three on-screen projects per year. Now with the beginning of a new decade, the mesmerizing Argentina-born, U.K.-based actress starts off strong with an Apple TV+ film fresh out of the gate.

"The Gorge," a dark, action-packed thriller from "Doctor Strange" (2016) director Scott Derrickson, premieres globally Friday, Feb. 14, on Apple TV+.

In "The Gorge," Taylor-Joy stars as Drasa, a "highly trained operative" who has been assigned to guard the East Tower overlooking a mysterious, misty gorge in a remote location outside the contact of regular society. Luckily for Drasa (and Taylor-Joy herself), she has a companion — even if she isn't supposed to engage with him.

"War Dogs" (2016) and "Top Gun: Maverick" (2022) actor Miles Teller stars as Drasa's West Tower counterpart, Levi, through whose eyes audiences are introduced to the mission in question and, subsequently, the film's plot. Once an elite military sniper, Levi is hired by an industry bigwig named Bartholomew (Sigourney Weaver, "Alien," 1979) to help Drasa guard the titular gorge, which the trailer reveals as the mouth of Hell. Stationed on opposite sides of the cavernous trench, Levi and Drasa are ordered to be on alert and make sure nothing from within makes its way to the surface. To avoid distraction, it is also imperative that the agents not engage with one another in any meaningful way. But while this is an action thriller, the Valentine's Day release signals love in the air.

The trailer shows Drasa reaching out to Levi by way of an attention-grabbing gunshot followed by a "Love Actually"-style (2003) cue card reading "What is your name?" from across the misty expanse. What follows is a telescope-supported conversation, some long-distance chess and a tense buildup to the moment it all goes awry as Levi attempts to meet Drasa in person on the gorge's East side.

When it comes to Teller and Taylor-Joy, however, the actors were already well acquainted.

"Miles and I have known each other for a really long time," Taylor-Joy told Collider Editor-in-chief Steve Weintraub at Brazil's CCXP film festival this past December. "I really wanted to work with him. I'm a big fan of him as a person and as an actor, and I knew I'd have fun."

In response to his friend and co-star's statement, Teller anticipated press write-ups by announcing that "Miles echoes that statement" before praising the originality of the film's concept.

Steve McQueen is 'Bullitt' in classic police thriller

"Bullitt" is legendary for its midpoint car chase through the streets of San Francisco, but there's also plenty else to recommend about it.

The Peter Yates-directed 1968 police drama gets another of its frequent Turner Classic Movies showings Wednesday, Feb. 19, as part of a "31 Days of Oscar" tribute to films with Academy Award-winning editing (it won that honor). However, it remains most famous as one of the best examples of title star Steve McQueen's particular brand of screen cool, as he plays the self-styled title cop chosen to protect a witness for an ambitious politician.

Robert Vaughn (who also shared credit with McQueen in 1960's "The Magnificent Seven" and 1974's "The Towering Inferno") is also great as said politician, who's outwardly charming but slyly cold-blooded in seeking to advance his own agenda — so he isn't very pleased when a would-be killer gets to the witness before the latter can testify, leaving both him and one of Bullitt's colleagues in very bad shape.

With tenuous support from their boss (Simon Oakland), Bullitt and his partner (McQueen pal and frequent co-star Don Gordon) seek those responsible ... leading to the car chase referenced earlier, for which auto enthusiast McQueen spent quite a bit of time behind the wheel himself. That's much of why the result is so exciting, since one clearly can see it's actually McQueen doing the driving.

Another terrific chase caps "Bullitt," set near and across the runways of the City by the Bay's airport — and one only can marvel at the shots of McQueen ducking under moving planes, at a time when it had to be done for real without inserting an actor via computer-enhanced imagery. (Almost 30 years later, a similar pursuit between Al Pacino and Robert De Niro in "Heat" served as something of a homage.)

Jacqueline Bisset's role in "Bullitt" is somewhat thankless, as the actress has said herself ... the girlfriend who tries to prompt the cop to rethink his career choice. Two co-stars who fare much better: Robert Duvall as a cab driver who proves helpful to Bullitt in retracing the witness' earlier steps; and Georg Stanford Brown, later a regular on television's "The Rookies" and a director of note, as a doctor whose skills are questioned by Vaughn.
