In a various locations of the ship.

Before long, Kilroy’s mark had been found across the world. In the South Pacific. The men soon discovered that Kilroy had been there, too. He was a great amusement to see the names of a variety of ships written on the hulls of the American carriers. He was a great favorite among the men, and his name soon became a household word.

In 1945 a post-war part of the ship, Kilroy, strolled on Walt Disney’s Wonderful World of Color, telling the story of his adventures. He was a great favorite in the audience, and discovered that American soldiers had already been there. The story of Kilroy was a great favorite among the men, and his name soon became a household word.
