Late-night talk shows have been a staple of television programming for decades, but a new host is about to shake things up with a fresh take on the tried-and-true format.

YouTube phenomenon Lilly Singh ("Fahrenheit 451"). 2018 moves to TV as she hosts "A Little Late With Lilly Singh," premiering Monday, Sept. 16, on NBC. The new show features traditional late-night interviews, of course, but also pre-taped comedy sketches and segments featuring her signature brand of humor.

Singh announced the show on "The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon" back in March, and she was eager to share her ideas for the new late-night program.

"I'm so excited because I truly get to create a show from scratch," Singh said. "I get to make it inclusive, I get to create comedy segments and interview people and really create something that I believe in."

She went on to explain that "A Little Late With Lilly Singh" will be a little like her YouTube channel, IllSuperwoman, which has nearly 15 million subscribers. Featuring a mix of comedy segments, motivational messages and collaborations with some of her favorite friends, her YouTube channel has taken the internet by storm, earning her numerous accolades, including Streamy Awards, two Teen Choice Awards and a People's Choice Award. She also has a vlog channel, created in 2011, where she chronicles her daily activities. In 2017, Forbes ranked Singh 10th on the magazine's list of the world's highest-paid YouTubers and named her the top influencer in the entertainment category.

For YouTube fans who may be concerned that she'll mix her beloved channel now that she's got a primo late-night gig, fear not. In a YouTube video announcing "A Little Late," Singh insisted: "I would not abandon my YouTube family.

The internet may have made her a star, but Singh is also an accomplished entertainer, having appeared on television and in movies, as well as in a number of music videos. She released a visual music piece on YouTube called "Voices" in 2016 and appeared in the music video for Maroon 5's "Girls Like You." Her movie credits include "Dr. Cabbie" (2014), "Ice Age: Collision Course" (2016) and "Bad Moms" (2016). She guest starred as herself in an episode of Disney Channel's "Bizaardvark."

With all of these accomplishments under her belt, it's safe to say that Singh is a modern-day Renaissance woman. What's more amazing is that she's done all of this by the time she turned 30, and she'll continue to break new ground in "A Little Late With Lilly Singh." When her new late-night show premieres, she'll be the first woman to host her own late-night TV show on one of America's "Big 4" networks: NBC, ABC, Fox and CBS. She's also the first openly bisexual woman of color to helm such a show in the U.S.

“A Little Late’s” format may differ from other late-night shows, but that could be a good thing. While a lot of late-night talk shows focus on current events and politics, Singh's show is expected to be more personal, mining her own experiences for comedy, similar to the YouTube content that made her a star.

Dark Phoenix

In 1992, after a mission to save the space shuttle Endeavor, Jean Grey (Turner) has her psychic abilities amplified from what is believed to be a solar flare. With her mental barriers altered by the accident, she relives trauma from her past, including the realization that she was the cause of the fatal car wreck that killed her parents and left her the sole survivor of her family.

While learning to control her pain on the island of Genosha, she encounters Vuk (Chastain), who reveals that the solar flare that altered Jean’s abilities was actually a cosmic force that has possessed her.

Sure? "Sure," what? "Sure" I have a big nose, or "sure" someone will love me someday?

Maybe someday the rest of your face will catch up with your nose, and then someone will love you.

I'm scared, Chuck... what if I grow up, and no one ever loves me? We people with big noses are very insecure...

Do you think I have a big nose, Chuck? Do you think someone will love me someday?

Sure

Hurry up, Face!

What do you have?

Nothing! Get away! It's mine!

Please?

Oh, all right. It's one of these.

An old crayon?

A magic backwards crayon, dummy!

If you write on walls with it, and then go backwards over what you just wrote, it magically erases!

It isn't working.

You have to press harder.

Dad is fat.

Q: Has “Deep State” been canceled? And is Mark Strong no longer involved with the series?
A: “Deep State” has not been canceled, but Mark Strong has. It’s become something of a trend among prestige dramas to write out their seemingly unkillable main characters (see, for example, “True Detective,” “Fargo” and, of course, “Game of Thrones”). Nonetheless, it still came as a surprise to fans when [slight spoiler alert] Mark Strong’s character seemed to have been written off at the end of “Deep State” Season 1. Strong was unquestionably the star of the show, and so many thought that the writers would find a way to bring him back in Season 2. But that season came and went without him.

His spot was filled by another critically beloved character actor, Walton Goggins, who played a very different character but brought the same gravitas and star power that Strong offered.

The second season finished in the summer, but there’s been no word yet on a third. There’s every reason to be hopeful, though. The producers still have time to make the decision before they blow any kind of deadline, and in fact there aren’t any real deadlines, because the show’s British. “Deep State” airs on Epix in North America, but it’s actually produced in Britain, and their networks don’t follow the same strict seasonal schedule that North American ones do (though our premium cable and streaming services are increasingly taking up the European laissez-faire attitude).

Q: I love Chicago P.D. and I’m looking at some of the earliest episodes. The music (by Atli Orvarsson) at the end of the shows is so powerful. Why did they stop using it on the new episodes?
A: Award-winning Icelandic composer Atli Orvarsson’s music was all over “Chicago P.D.,” and indeed all over Dick Wolf’s other two “One Chicago” properties (“Chicago Med” and “Chicago Fire”). At least it was until recently. He’s still being used on “Med,” but he disappeared from the other two in early 2018.

No one’s explicitly said why — composers don’t get the same attention that actors do — but it seems to have been part of a general refresh of the brand that happened last fall.

Reviewing “Chicago P.D.” season premiere at the time, fan site OneChicagoCenter.com said that the episode, “continued the theme that ran through all of ‘One Chicago’ opening night — showing fans that things aren’t the same anymore in the city.”

They were referring there to a number of major plot and character changes, but it’s possible that the producers wanted to more subtly signal those with a change to the music as well.

Generally, when there’s a major change in music on a television show, that’s why. If producers need to signal a shift of some kind — either due to a major overhaul to fix an ailing show or due to a gentler brand refresh of a long-running hit — they often do so with changes to the background or theme music.

Q: I love Michael Caine. Where did he get his start?
A: It depends what you mean by “start,” as Michael Caine (whose name is the rather more ponderous Maurice Micklewhite) took the long, hard road to acting success.

His true start was on the stage, as is the case with so many British film greats, but his breakthrough to fame came in a quick succession of film hits in the mid-1960s.

It started with 1964’s “Zulu,” a war film in which he had a supporting role as a coddled, upper-class army officer, playing against what we now know as his type — urban, working-class men who succeed based on skill and brass.

That type was defined in his very next film, “The Ipcress File,” his first big starring role. He played counterespionage agent Harry Palmer in the film. It was intended as a sort of anti-James Bond, pitting Caine’s unpolished working-man spy in contrast to the posh superspy.
