History debuts new UFO series 'Project Blue Book'

By Joy Doonan
TV Media

Fans of "The X-Files," rejoice! History Channel has produced a new fictional miniseries that delves into the world of extraterrestrial investigations. "Project Blue Book" comes with many of the typical hallmarks of its genre — a lead UFO investigator struggling to get to the bottom of unexplained phenomena, an internal culture of government secrecy — but it has one major feature that sets it apart: the series stays remarkably true to the specific historical events that it follows. One of the network's first scripted series, "Project Blue Book" premieres Tuesday, Jan. 8, on History.

The real Project Blue Book, after which the new series is named, was a classified research project conducted by the United States Air Force. The secretive study, designed to investigate unidentified flying objects, was initiated in 1952 and continued through the 1960s. Perhaps the most alluring aspect of this real-life study is the fascinating central figure of the Blue Book investigations: J. Allen Hynek, portrayed in the show by Aidan Gillen ("Game of Thrones"), was a respected astrophysicist recruited by the air force to spearhead UFO research.

He started out as a skeptic, but Hynek did his best to keep an open mind throughout the project, and he ultimately came to accept the possibility of alien life as a cause for certain unexplained events on Earth. By the time Project Blue Book was shut down in 1969, there were whispers of government coverups initiated to prevent mass panic. Hynek came out of the project an unwavering champion of truth and evidence-based conclusions.

Backing up Gillen's Hynek is Laura Mennell ("The Man in the High Castle"), who plays his wife, Mimi Hynek. There is also air force pilot Capt. Michael Quinn (Michael Malarkey, "The Vampire Diaries") and a mysterious town newcomer named Susie (Ksenia Solo, "Lost Girl"). And you can keep your eyes peeled for Michael Imperioli of "The Sopranos," who makes an appearance in a few episodes. Neal McDonough ("Minority Report," 2002) and Michael Harney ("Orange Is the New Black") round out the main cast.

There's something for everyone in "Project Blue Book." While its central theme is bound to draw in those who are suckers for paranormal mystery, the show's take on alien subject matter is less campy conspiracy and more sleek mystery thriller. "Project Blue Book" also attempts to do justice to history by exploring the tension between sincere research efforts on the part of Hynek and potential coverups on the part of the U.S. government.

It seems this last detail is a major theme of the 10 episodes that comprise the miniseries. Seven hundred of the many thousands of cases from Project Blue Book were left officially unresolved. The eerie phenomena involved in the study typically featured sightings of unearthly objects and light formations, sometimes moving at impossible speeds, sometimes even having close encounters with government aircrafts. Still unexplained half a century later, these mysteries are ripe for fictional speculation, and, according to Gillen, "Project Blue Book" satisfies the need for conjecture with equal parts intrigue and integrity.

Described as a family man as well as a brilliant scientific mind, Hynek's personal life is explored in the show alongside his UFOlogy. As such, Gillen's task as an actor is to portray great depths through his relationships, particularly with Mimi but also with Quinn, the partner foisted on Hynek by the air force. Quinn seems to respect Hynek but also tries to rein in his investigative efforts at the government's behest. Gillen told IGN that one of the most compelling aspects of the story is Hynek's ability to keep an open mind, question everything in the search for authentic truth, and "still retain his credibility as a scientist."

Malarkey, whose character is based on an amalgamation of real-life figures involved in Project Blue Book, is as enthusiastic as Gillen about the depth of character that the two get to explore together. As the weight of the mysterious forces that they are dealing with becomes ever clearer, their initial mutual resistance transforms into unexpected camaraderie. Any show that deals with investigations into the creepy unknown needs a great detective team whose differences play off one another, and the screen chemistry of these two investigators is a major highlight of "Project Blue Book."

Last fall, History revealed its official trailer for "Project Blue Book," and if the sample of foreboding mystery it offers says anything about the coming series, UFO junkies everywhere will soon have a truly binge-worthy treat to help get them through the winter. The trailer displays Hynek's initial skepticism as he is first recruited to the project, followed by ominous flashes of what he discovers along the way, including the testimonies of insistent UFO witnesses claiming "with God as my witness, it was not of this world."

Prepare to be a believer: "Project Blue Book" is a series that combines historical accuracy with sci-fi thriller intrigue and depth of character progression. Sure to be a gripping story from start to finish, the 10-episode series is set to premiere Tuesday, Jan. 8, on History.

‘Brooklyn Nine-Nine’ saved from cancellation by NBC

By Kenneth Andeel
TV Media

It premiered on Fox in 2013, ran for five seasons and was ultimately canceled. Rest in peace, “Brooklyn Nine-Nine,” you’re in sitcom heaven now, little TV show. Wait, what’s that? I’m being told that “Brooklyn Nine-Nine” has actually done the impossible, has risen like a phoenix from the ashes of cancellation to be reborn on a competing network. Folks, this sounds too crazy to be true. Please allow me a moment to check my notes.

It’s true, ladies and gentlemen, it appears that this report of fortuitous sitcom resurrection is indeed completely accurate. The details are as follows: back in May, Fox canceled “Brooklyn Nine-Nine” at the end of its fifth season, but within 24 hours the series had been snagged by NBC, which granted it a stay of execution and ordered up a sixth season. The show remains more or less intact, with the previous creative team returning as well as nearly all of the series’ stars, including leads Andy Samberg (“Hot Rod,” 2007) and Andre Braugher (“Homicide: Life on the Street”).

“Brooklyn Nine-Nine” is a half-hour comedy that satirizes television’s police procedural format. Situated in the fictional 99th Precinct in Brooklyn, New York, the show follows Det. Jake Peralta, played by Samberg, and a team of other quirky or ludicrous detectives. You can catch the season 6 premiere on Thursday, Jan. 10, on NBC.

The show’s waning popularity had always been a little bit at odds with its warm critical reception. Despite perennial award nominations for the cast, and the admiration of critics who loved “Brooklyn Nine-Nine’s” ability to layer comedy over top of examinations of serious issues, the show’s ratings fell steadily over the course of its five seasons at Fox, and it was a perpetual contender in will-they-or-won’t-they cancellation gossip.

After season 5 delivered the series’ lowest ratings to date, Fox finally pulled the plug last May. Almost immediately, rumors started flying about competitors of Fox interested in snaring the show for their own programming menus. Hulu kicked the tires, but ultimately it was NBC, the very network that had received the original pitch for the first season of the sitcom (no surprise, considering Samberg’s NBC origins on “Saturday Night Live”) that came to the show’s rescue. Within a day of Fox announcing the cancellation, NBC had officially inked a deal to make season 6 of “Brooklyn Nine-Nine” a reality, ordering 13 episodes, then increasing the order to 18 in September.

Audiences that enjoyed the first five seasons can rest easy in the knowledge that the NBC version of “Brooklyn Nine-Nine” will not be attempting any ambitious, ratings-hungry experiments with the show’s format or style. Executive producer Dan Goor has confirmed that season 6 will stick to the pattern the show spent five seasons developing.

The early part of the season should resolve the cliffhanger established at the conclusion of season 5, in which Braugher’s character, the deliciously prim Capt. Holt, seemed on the verge of a huge promotion that would make him New York City’s police commissioner. Goor has promised that the show won’t drag out the suspense, and that the promotion plotline will be wrapped up in a quick and hilarious manner.

Goor has also promised that “Brooklyn Nine-Nine” will continue to offer socially conscious episodes that overlay serious matters with humor. In the past, the show has explored sensitive subjects such as racial profiling and bisexuality, and the writers are eager to zero in on additional issues of social importance. Season 6 features at least one storyline that addresses sexual harassment, sexual assault and the #MeToo movement, and may go in other directions to touch on different urgent social issues later in the season.

Series regular Chelsea Peretti (“Kroll Show”) has revealed that she will be departing the show midway through the season, but she has also hinted that her character will absolutely be returning for a guest spot here and there. The rest of the regulars are back, along with some beloved minor characters, including the Pontiac Bandit, played by Craig Robinson (“The Office”), a notorious vehicle thief with a very specific predilection. One of the mysteries featured in season 6 involves a series of thefts that mimic the Pontiac Bandit’s M.O., suggesting either his return to a life of crime or the emergence of a nefarious copycat. Fans love the chemistry between Robinson and Samberg, so it’s no surprise to see the Pontiac Bandit turn up again this season.

Most of the time, when the cancellation guillotine descends, the results are final. “Brooklyn Nine-Nine” has been saved at the eleventh hour and given a rare second chance to preserve its TV life. Owing to its critical weight and the pedigree of its performers, “Brooklyn Nine-Nine” must have seemed like a worthwhile roll of the dice to NBC executives. You can see whether their optimism pays off when season 6 of “Brooklyn Nine-Nine” begins Thursday, Jan. 10, on the peacock network.

hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: Will Connie Britton be returning to "9-1-1"? It's a great show but she played a big role and she is missed.

A: Tim Minear, co-creator and executive producer of Fox's "9-1-1," made it abundantly clear that he'd welcome Connie Britton back to the show. "The front door, back door, and side door are always open for her to return." Unfortunately, that doesn't translate into anything like a plan.

Indeed, the reason Britton left the show is because she's sticking to her original plan, which was to do one season and then leave.

Being in a new show is always a tentative thing — since so many shows never get a second season, theoretically all new shows are one-year commitments to start with. But in Britton's case, she stuck to her one-year commitment despite the show being renewed.

Minear's enthusiastic offer to let her return suggests he wasn't totally happy with her decision. Another indication is the fact that her character was simply replaced by another doing a very similar job — 911 dispatcher — so it's not as if her character's exit was important to the plot.

Fortunately, the replacement character is being played by an experienced actress in her own right, Jennifer Love Hewitt ("Ghost Whisperer").

Q: Can you tell me if season 8 of "Foyle's War" was the last we'll ever see? It was a superb series and the last episode of season 8 ended with a massive shocker. I'm hoping there will be more.

A: It's hard to say never when the principals involved — Michael Kitchen, who played Christopher Foyle, and Anthony Horowitz, who created the series — are still working, and when the series ran intermittently and for so long, but it's likely we'll never see another "Foyle's War."

The show's last season, its eighth, aired back in 2015. Years often passed between seasons, however, so that's not a clear indicator. The key piece of evidence in the death of this murder mystery comes from the mouth of Horowitz himself.

"Seventeen years of my life have been devoted to 'Foyle's War,'" he said in an interview with DigitalSpy.com a year after the series finale. "It had to come to an end sometime. We went from 1940 all the way through to 1947, and I told countless true stories about the war. I felt that there were no more true stories to tell about that period. I'd sort of covered pretty much every area."

Of course, shows have been known to live on after their creators have quit, provided the producers who own the rights want to keep them going. But even here there's bad news: Acorn Media, which co-produced the final season and now owns the rights, released a DVD/Blu-Ray boxed set of all eight seasons at the end of 2015, marketing it as "The Complete Saga."

All that's left is to look for consolation. If you loved "Foyle's War" because of creator Horowitz's voice, you'll be pleased to know that he's a prolific writer. He created another series, "New Blood," for BBC shortly after "Foyle's War" ended, but fans of period thrillers might be more interested in his literary work. He's been given the enviable task of writing new novels featuring classic British characters James Bond and Sherlock Holmes. The most recent of these was the new Bond novel "Forever and a Day," released earlier this year.

Q: In "Jeopardy," Alex Trebek always seems to be writing something down during the game. What is he writing?

A: In the spirit of the game, let me rewrite your question in the form of an answer: It's what beloved game show host Alex Trebek is writing down after contestants give answers on "Jeopardy."

Hollinger... a name you can trust!

Sudoku

Fill in the grid so that every row, every column, and every 3x3 box contains the digits 1 through 9.

And I'll buzz in: What is, lines across the previous clues?

Despite contestants on the show getting digital touch screens for the writing they do, "Jeopardy" host Trebek still uses good old-fashioned paper to keep track of the answers and questions in each round. Once an answer and question have been completed, he crosses them off the list so he doesn't reread anything.

In a recent interview with New York magazine, Trebek spoke with his usual dry wit about his process on the show. "People think because I'm the host of a fairly serious, intelligence-based quiz show that I must know all the answers. I do — because they're written on a sheet of paper in front of me."

Because there are different stages of dementia, we have different stages of memory support. Here, we focus on the person, not the diagnosis. That's why we offer tiered care to address and support residents' specific needs. That's why we're unique.

Today is Cyber Monday! It's the busiest shopping day of the year, and Americans spent billions of dollars online. Earlier today, I saw a UPS guy hiding under his own truck and breathing into a paper bag.

Of course, to get deals, there were codes you had to enter online. L.L. Bean was 20 percent off with the code "THANKS-20." The Gap was 50 percent off with the code "CYBER." And Kohl's was free with the code "Please Take This Crap Off Our Hands."

Everything on the Gap's website was 50 percent off. But it's just not the same without hearing a real employee sigh after you grab a shirt, unfold it, then toss it back on the pile.

New 'Bachelor' Colton Underwood searches for love

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

A fresh start: Romance isn't for the faint of heart. Even with a thriving dating app industry, it can be tough to find that special someone. But one lucky man is about to get a shot at love, and viewers can watch it all unfold in prime time.

Colton Underwood makes a play to find the woman of his dreams in the season premiere of "The Bachelor," airing Monday, Jan. 7, on ABC. The former NFL player made audiences swoon when he appeared in the 14th season of "The Bachelorette," starring Becca Kufrin, but was eliminated in week 8. He also appeared in this summer's "Bachelor in Paradise," where he found closure and clarity but not romance.

Not one to be deterred, Underwood is back for another shot at love as the 23rd bachelor. He made waves during his time on "The Bachelorette" for his candid conversations about his virginity, especially during "The Bachelorette: The Men Tell All" reunion special. In an interview with eonline.com, "The Bachelor" host Chris Harrison explained why he thinks viewers will appreciate this season's bachelor:

"Once you get to see him and know him, everyone is going to fall in love with him and really respect that he is so open, so vulnerable, so emotional," Harrison said.

This season of "The Bachelor" follows Underwood as he meets a variety of beautiful, interesting single ladies and hopes to find someone with whom he can share his life. After getting to know the women on a series of dates, he gives roses to those he wants to get to know better. Unfortunately, the ladies who don't receive roses are sent home. In the end, he has to choose one woman to continue to have a relationship with, which just might result in a marriage proposal.

Watch as Underwood makes another play for romance in the new season of "The Bachelor," airing Monday, Jan. 7, on ABC.

Ellen's got game: With lavish prizes and cold, hard cash on the line, game shows can be intense. However, one of daytime's most beloved talk show hosts is injecting her own brand of lighthearted fun into a prime-time game show, and viewers can't seem to get enough.

Ellen DeGeneres invites members of the studio audience to participate in zany games in the new season of "Ellen's Game of Games," premiering Tuesday, Jan. 8, on NBC. She guides the contestants through action-packed games as they vie for a big cash prize.

DeGeneres and her crew have developed super-sized versions of the games featured on her daytime talk show, with hilarious results. Participants have to navigate their way through massive obstacles, answer questions correctly under pressure and even face plunges into the unknown. Games such as Blindfolded Musical Chairs, Dizzy Dash and Scary Go Round keep audiences on the edge of their seats as contestants play four rounds of games.

The winner of each round continues on to play Know or Go, in which the player stands on a trap door that opens if they answer a question wrong. The contestant who advances to the final plays an epic game of Hot Hands, a game that requires the player to guess as many answers as they can in a short amount of time.

Even when the stakes are high, DeGeneres brings comic relief with her unique commentary. Don't miss the season premiere of "Ellen's Game of Games," airing Tuesday, Jan. 8, on NBC.

Best of the best: Just about everybody has a talent, and many people love to share their talents with the world. One reality TV series has given people from all walks of life the opportunity to showcase their talents, and it's become a worldwide phenomenon.

For the first time ever, fan favorites from previous seasons take the stage to compete in the premiere of "America's Got Talent: The Champions," airing Monday, Jan. 7, on NBC. Terry Crews ("Brooklyn Nine-Nine") hosts this special edition of the popular series, which also features competitors from other global "AGT" franchises.

Judges Simon Cowell, Mel B, Heidi Klum and Howie Mandel are set to welcome Crews to the fold as the competition kicks off and the NFL player-turned-actor couldn't be happier to join the team.

"NBC's 'America's Got Talent' is a show I love to watch with my family and now to actually be a part of this special edition, 'The Champions,' is more than I could have asked or dreamed," Crews said in an official news release.

The show brings together some of the most memorable "Got Talent" performers, including magician Piff the Magic Dragon, vocal trio The Texas Tenors, comedian Taylor Williamson, dance act Justice Crew and contortionist Sofie Dossi. International performers include singer Susan Boyle ("Britain's Got Talent"), dance group Attraction ("Britain's Got Talent"), sand artist Kseniya Simonova ("Ukraine's Got Talent"), kid DJ DJ Arch Jnr ("South Africa's Got Talent") and jump ropers DDF Crew ("Holland's Got Talent").
