Most wanted: A fugitive pair run for their lives in 'The Passage'

By Francis Babin
TV Media

The new year is officially upon us, which means New Year's resolutions are in full vogue once again. As usual, countless well-meaning men and women will resolve to change themselves for the better, be it by getting in shape, learning a new language or exploring the world. Many people resolve to read more, but who has the time? Fortunately, Hollywood has us covered.

Like last year, a myriad of book adaptations are poised to grace the big and small screen in 2019. Looking to capture the world's attention and become the next "Game of Thrones" or "The Handmaid's Tale" are Hulu's "Catch-22," HBO's "Watchmen" and plenty of other contenders. On Monday, Jan. 14, "The Passage" looks to become the next big adaptation when it premieres on Fox.

Based on the bestselling novel series by Justin Cronin, "The Passage" focuses on Project Noah, a secret medical facility located in Colorado, where the country's best scientists are conducting experiments on an extremely dangerous virus found in the jungles of South America. Working tirelessly, they hope to develop a new immunity-boosting drug that would have the potential to cure all diseases. However, the deadly virus also has the power to wipe out the human race. It's safe to say that the stakes are incredibly high and that things might get a bit apocalyptic.

Like all good tales of science gone bad, the Project Noah scientists, comprised of lead scientist Dr. Major Nicholas Sykes (Caroline Chikezie,

Henry Ian Cusick as seen in "The Passage"

"The Shannara Chronicles"), Dr. Jonas Lear (Henry Ian Cusick, "The 100") and other geniuses are in desperate need of human test subjects.

After seeing the effects of the virus on patient zero — Dr. Tim Fanning (Jamie McShane, "Bloodline"), who survived the jungle expedition — the lead doctors moved on to Death Row inmate Shauna Babcock (Brianne Howey, "The Exorcist"). In both cases, the test subjects became unstable, highly contagious and incredibly violent, turning into vampire-like beings.

Operating under the belief that the virus's side-effects might be somehow related to age, the Project Noah scientists set out to find a new and younger guinea pig. Since a child's immune system has not had a chance to fully mature, it might be possible for the host and the virus to live in harmony. Eventually, a 10-year-old orphan named Amy Bellafonte (Saniyya Sidney, "American Horror Story: Roanoke") is deemed to be the perfect candidate and is selected to be a test subject.

Federal agent Brad Wolgast (Mark-Paul Gosselaar, "Franklin & Bash") is chosen to protect the young girl and escort her to the remote facility, but things soon get complicated when the two form a very close bond. Over the course of their trip to the secret medical facility, Wolgast starts to see himself as her surrogate father and ultimately decides that he cannot bring her in after a crisis of conscience. Determined to protect her at any cost, he must outrun the authorities with the girl in tow.

To keep Amy safe, Wolgast must face off against his former protégé and ex-CIA oper-new powers, bringing the world one step closer to a cataclysmic event.

Cronin's series is incredibly ambitious, spanning 1,000 years and containing more than 100 characters. It's perfectly suited for episodic television, but the series was not always destined to be a small-screen property. Originally developed for the big screen, the time-jumping apocalyptic sci-fi epic was eventually retooled (for the better) after those heading the project truly realized its scope and potential. The first season will only depict the events related to Project Noah detailed in the first novel, while the next season will delve into the colony storyline.

"The Passage" won't shy away from vampires and other sci-fi/horror elements found in the source material, but it will emphasize the father-daughter relationship at the heart of novel. At the Television Critics Association press tour last summer, writer Liz Heldens ("Friday Night Lights") discussed how she wanted the series to spotlight Amy and Wolgast's relationship first and foremost, not only because it's interesting but because it's something that everyone can relate to. It makes the series accessible for the home audience who may not be typical viewers of similar series.

From Matt Reeves ("War for the Planet of the Apes," 2017) and Academy Award nominee Ridley Scott ("All the Money in the World," 2017) comes an epic sci-fi thriller that will have you on the edge of your seat. On Monday, Jan. 14, the end is near when an experiment with a deadly virus goes off the rails in the premiere "The Passage," on Fox.

'FAM' blends two families together on CBS

By Sarah Passingham
TV Media

A bright new comedy brings another unconventional, dysfunctional family to television screens. A brand new episode of CBS's freshman sitcom "Fam" airs Thursday, Jan. 17. The series begins with Clem's hard-fought-for, nearly-perfect life being turned upside down upon the arrival of her wild, 16-year-old half-sister, Shannon. Escaping the home of their disaster of a father, Shannon ends up at Clem's door.

Clem, portrayed by "The Vampire Diaries" Nina Dobrev, is eventually persuaded by her fiancé, Nick (Tone Bell, "Disjointed"), that her "perfect" family includes not only them and his parents, but Shannon as well. Clem seizes the opportunity to show Shannon, played by Odessa Adlon ("Nashville"), how to avoid all of the mistakes she herself made, and invites her to live with them.

Though she's perhaps best known for portraying the undead, Dobrev's hiatus from television following six seasons of "The Vampire Diaries" has seen the actress stacking her resume with comedic roles on the silver screen, including "The Final Girls" (2015) and "Crash Pad" (2017). The change in direction was a welcome one for Dobrev, though she was in part motivated by fear to move from television to film, telling Harper's Bazaar in 2017 that she "needed to feel the fear of 'Oh, my God, what if I never get a job again?' ... to make sure that didn't happen."

Dobrev's acting credits span the genres from action, drama, comedy and romance. She notably starred alongside her "Fam" co-star Bell in the 2018 film "Dog Days," in which the two played characters who are brought together by their furry friends and eventually fall in love. You'll have to tune in to "Fam" to find out if Clem and Nick's meet-cute also features pets.

Rounding out the cast are some veteran actors of stage and screen as Nick's parents. Sheryl Lee Ralph portrays Nick's mother, Rose, in "Fam." Known for her recent appearances in "Claws" and "Ray Donovan," Ralph is arguably most well known for portraying step-mother and principal Dee Mitchell in teen sitcom "Moesha." Nick's father is portrayed by Broadway star and "Mr. Robot" actor Brian Stokes Mitchell. Both actors happen to have a background in voice acting. Ralph lent her voice to the 1988 animated film "Oliver & Company" as Rita, and Mitchell voiced many characters in "The Addams Family" cartoon, among other voice acting credits.

Nick, Rose and Walt make up just the sort of well-adjusted, successful family that Clem has longed to be a member of since her own rocky childhood. Nick's family warmly welcomes Clem as one of their own, giving her the stable family she's always wanted. Though her upbringing was far from ideal, Clem has arrived at a place in her life where a disruption like Shannon's unexpected arrival quickly becomes an opportunity to blend Clem's chosen family with the one she was born into.

Even though when we meet Clem, she's already achieved many of her life goals, it's not long before her past rears its ugly head in the form of her half-sister. Clem's journey from the bottom is yet to be fully revealed, but like her other CBS sitcom sisters, it's understood that she's had a rough go of it. There's been a series of incredibly popular female-led sitcoms from the eye network that see the protagonists build their lives up from the bottom and use comedy to brighten the dark places they start in. "Mom," for instance, follows a single mother of two and her own estranged mother as they reunite to embark on the journey of sobriety together, and "Two Broke Girls" told the stories of two young women with only pennies to their names managing to scrape by and build a business of their own.

"Fam" series creator and executive producer Corinne Kingsbury, formerly a writer on the acclaimed drama "The Newsroom," is no stranger to the family sitcom game. Her credits include, among other on-screen and behind-the-scenes appearances, a writing credit for the series "Back in the Game." Like "Fam," "Back in the Game" put estranged family members in close quarters. The sitcom placed a newly divorced mother back at her has-been father's house while she reluctantly coached a youth baseball team.

The dysfunctional family sitcom trope, though not a new one, is thriving at the moment. "Fam" is among good company not only just on CBS but across other networks, including the always popular "Modern Family" as well as the newly reworked "The Conners" and "Last Man Standing," which have kept audiences tuned in enough to demand revivals. Don't miss a new take on the dysfunctional family with a new episode of "Fam," airing Thursday, Jan. 17, on CBS.

Nick Castle and Jamie Lee Curtis as seen in "Halloween"

Halloween

The brutal Michael Myers (Courtney) returns on Halloween to continue his homicidal rampage. For Laurie Strode (Curtis), the one woman who survived his original killing spree in the 1970s, his return is far from unexpected. She's spent decades learning self-defence and training with weapons in anticipation of Myers' inevitable return, but her obsession has damaged her relationships with her family, including that with her daughter, Karen (Greer).

Director: David Gordon Green. Stars: Jamie Lee Curtis, Judy Greer, James Jude Courtney, Nick Castle, Andi Matichak, Hailu Bilginer. 2018. 106 min. Horror.

Goosebumps 2: Haunted Halloween

Best friends Sonny (Taylor) and Sam (Harris) accidentally release an evil ventriloquist's dummy named Slappy (Wingert) upon their town when they find and open a locked manuscript in an abandoned house that they're cleaning. Although at first they think that the living puppet is friendly, it isn't long before its evil intentions become clear as it uses its magic to bring Halloween costumes and decorations to life, terrorizing their town with ghoulish monsters.

The Old Man & the Gun

Although he's 70 years old, lifetime criminal Forrest Tucker (Redford) hasn't slowed down in his chosen profession, performing a string of daring heists after he stages a bold escape from San Quentin prison. While a rookie detective (Affleck) leads a team that's determined to bring him down, Tucker continues to evade capture, in part thanks to a woman (Spacek) who's taken in by his charming nature, and who sees past his nefarious profession and loves him in spite of it.

Director: David Lowery. Stars: Robert Redford, Sissy Spacek, Casey Affleck, Danny Glover, Tom Waits, Tika Sumpter. 2018. 93 min. Crime.

Mahershala Ali in "True Detective"

America's Funniest Home Videos

(WHTM) 7:00 PM

Viewers are treated to some epic wedding fails in this rebroadcast. A groom takes a call at the altar, and a man convinces his girlfriend that motorcycles have seatbelts. Also, a mom records her son as he tries to eat a whole spoonful of horseradish.

True Detective

HBO 9:00 PM

Mahershala Ali stars as state police detective Wayne Hays, who investigates a grisly crime in the heart of the Ozarks in the new season of this critically acclaimed anthology series. The story unfolds over the course of three different time periods.

Ray Donovan

SHOW 9:00 PM

In this season finale, Ray (Liev Schreiber) settles his final scores and takes a trip down memory lane with his father (Jon Voight). While the Donovans clean up their mess, Smitty (Graham Rogers) gets a crash course in being part of the family.

Chefs Burrell and Florence

welcome a new batch of recruits

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

For some people, cooking is just easy. Whether it's the result of years of practice or just a knack for details, there are plenty of home cooks who make whipping up delicious dishes seem like a piece of cake. On the other hand, I think we all know someone who is a total disaster in the kitchen — the sort of person who gets asked to bring something store-bought to potlucks, or whose kids run for the hills when the dinner bell starts ringing.

Well, there's good news for 15 of the nation's biggest culinary dunces: a new season of "Worst Cooks in America" premiered last week on Food Network, and its culinary boot camp continues Sunday, Jan. 13. Chefs Anne Burrell and Tyler Florence serve as both mentors and judges, each taking on a team of culinary recruits that they try to educate in basic cooking techniques.

It's not as easy as it sounds — these home cooks really are the worst of the worst, and Anne and Tyler don't pull punches when it comes to critiquing their mentees. Tough love is the name of the game here, and at the end of each episode, each chef sends their own worst-performing recruit home.

In this week's episode, the recruits are given a crash course in the wonderful properties of one of the simplest of ingredients — eggs. After enjoying a game of egg roulette, the aspiring cooks are shown a pancake recipe by their mentors and asked to recreate it. Then they're given a challenge inspired by the classic English breakfast before the chefs are forced to separate the good eggs from the bad and send a pair of their own recruits packing.

In next week's episode, the home cooks go back to basics as they work with deceptively simple meat and potatoes. After having all five of their senses tested in a skill drill, they're tasked with making their own potato hash dishes. Then, the sky's the limit when the recruits are asked to make a meat-based dish that would make any cowboy happy.

"Worst Cooks in America" is all in good fun, but the recruits really do learn how to be better home cooks. Catch the next episode on Sunday, Jan. 13, on Food Network.

hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: My whole family loves "The Vampire Diaries," and we would love more episodes. We just finished season 8. Can you tell us if any more are coming out?

A: Alas, no, "The Vampire Diaries" are closed for good.

The good news is the show's universe has expanded quite a bit from there. In fact, there's a new spinoff (the show's second) airing episodes as we speak.

"Legacies" features some characters from "The Vampire Diaries," particularly the Saltzman family — Alaric, Josie and Lizzie — so you'll feel right at home with the new show.

It also picks up directly where "The Vampire Diaries" ended (well, part of where it ended — there was a lot going on in that finale), with the founding of a boarding school for supernatural children.

While you won't be getting any more "Vampire

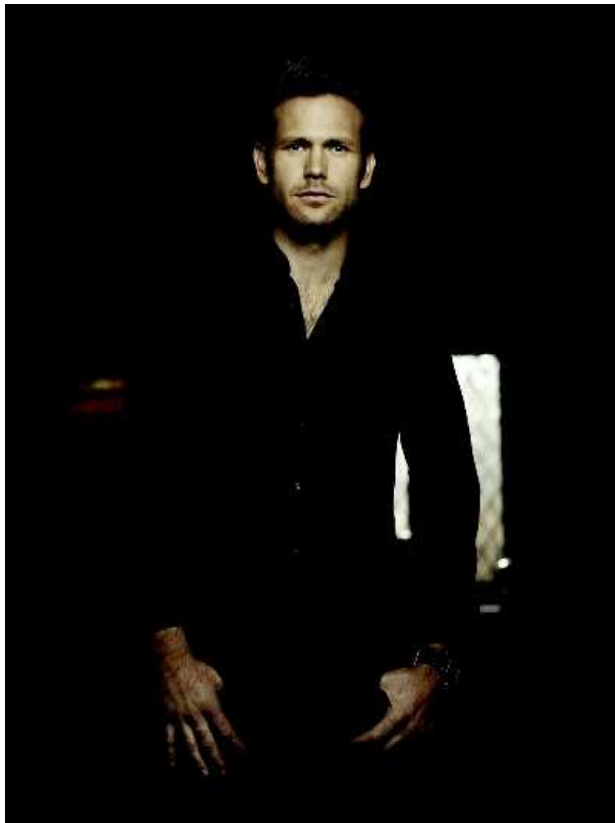

Diaries," the outlook is good for "Legacies." It's still in its freshman season, but that was already extended by CW, and while it hasn't yet been renewed for a second, the extension is a pretty big show of support.

Its ratings haven't been amazing — it's drawing 1.1 million viewers per episode, which puts it seventh out of the CW's 12 original shows this season — but given the show's pedigree and built-in audience, that's likely good enough to earn a pickup.

In the meantime, you can also go back and watch the other spinoff, "The Originals." That series also borrowed a number of "Vampire Diaries" characters for a series that ran five seasons on the CW, ending last year.

Q: What happened to one of my favorite shows, "The Amazing Race"? I haven't seen it yet this season.

A: "The Amazing Race" is taking the slow boat to get to our screens this time around, but it will get here eventually.

Last season, the show's incredible 30th, aired over the first months of winter, but that won't happen for the 31st. We'll have to wait until late spring to see the next group of competitors hit the road.

CBS announced in late fall that "The Amazing Race" would return on May 22.

That's a long wait since the end of the show's last season in February of last year, and in some ways fans have become victims of CBS's success.

The network waited a long time before even giving it a return date. Prior to the announcement, the TV watchers at GoldDerby.com formulated a theory as to why: CBS's freshman shows this season were all doing well, so "The Amazing Race," which CBS had used as a fill-in show for the past few seasons, wasn't likely to have anything to fill in for. Sure enough, the network waited until the end of November, when the fates of all of its new shows had been decided, to announce that "The Amazing Race" would return in May, after all of those shows had completed their runs, and after "Survivor" had aired its new season as well.

Essentially, CBS had the enviable problem of too many popular shows to squeeze onto its schedule.

Q: Any news on another Bourne Identity movie?

A: There's some rather big news, but apparently not what you're expecting.

USA Network announced a few months ago that it would be launching a series built in the Bourne-iverse, titled "Treadstone" (if you're slaving after news of a sixth film, you know Treadstone is the name of the secret CIA super-soldier program that produced Jason Bourne).

The series will not feature Bourne himself but rather " sleeper agents across the globe as they're mysteriously 'awakened' to resume their deadly missions," according to a network release.

This news isn't entirely unexpected. Literary espionage is turning into a pretty successful genre lately (the Bourne character was created in a book series by Robert Ludlum). AMC has made a pair of hit miniseries out of John Le Carre novels ("The Night Manager" and "The Little Drummer Girl"), Epix's flagship drama "Berlin Station" was created by modern spy-fiction great Olen Steinhilber, and Amazon made a streaming hit out of Tom Clancy's super spy Jack Ryan in the cleverly named "Tom Clancy's Jack Ryan."

"Treadstone" is drawing on a much more popular book property (Ludlum's novels were mega bestsellers in their time, and the series continues today under new writer Eric Van Lustbader), and so it stands a pretty good chance to make a big mark on the budding genre.

Production is slated to start this year, but there's no word on a premiere date.

Sara Gilbert as seen in "The Conners"

The Conners

(WHTM) 8:00 PM
Darlene (Sara Gilbert) faces many surprises and challenges this season as she raises her two kids back home in a new episode of this comedy. Through it all, she relies on support from her dysfunctional family, including her father Dan (John Goodman).

This Is Us

(WGAL) 9:00 PM
Kevin (Justin Hartley) meets someone from Zoe's (Melanie Liburd) past in this new episode. Elsewhere, Randall's (Sterling K. Brown) campaign comes to an end, and Kate (Chrissy Metz) and Toby (Chris Sullivan) prepare for the arrival of their baby.

Below Deck

BRAVO 9:00 PM
The crew gets rowdy when they're out on the town, which results in a steamy encounter between Rhylee and Tyler in this new episode. Meanwhile, Ashton and Laura's relationship hits a rough patch, and Josiah tries to overcome childhood insecurities.

Nicole Scherzinger, Nick Cannon and Jenny McCarthy from "The Masked Singer"

Grown-ish

FAM 8:00 PM

The gang anxiously awaits the debut of a modern-day musical genius in this new episode. All the while, they debate what really makes a person a "genius." Nomi (Emily Arlook) then claims that Luca (Luka Sabbat) is a genius.

The Masked Singer

(WPMT) 9:00 PM

Celebrities wear elaborate costumes to hide their identities as they face off in a singing competition in this new episode. Nick Cannon serves as host of the show, which features panelists Ken Jeong, Nicole Scherzinger, Jenny McCarthy and Robin Thicke.

Guy's Grocery Games

FOOD 9:00 PM

Three families are invited to compete in Flavortown to earn a spot in the tournament finale in this new episode. They'll have to adhere to a strict weight limit as they shop for a fish and chips dish. Guy Fieri hosts.=

The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon

It was almost 60 degrees today in New York City! It was so warm, the 30 Rock ice rink just hired a lifeguard.

After reports that he tried to do business with Russia, President Trump said everything he did was, quote, "very legal and very cool." Not a good sign when the president explains himself like a stoner who got pulled over on the way home from Burning Man.

I heard that on Jan. 1, "Friends" might be leaving Netflix. When fans heard, they said, "Wow — no one told us life was gonna be this way."

Over the weekend, a man proposed in Times Square, but he was so nervous he dropped the ring into a sidewalk grate. It was quite a scene — someone was in distress, and like 50 Spider-Mans just stood there watching.

Tonight is the third night of Hanukkah! It's nice — Jewish people lit a few candles, while their Christian neighbors put up 40,000 LED lights that are choreographed to "We Will Rock You."

A new poll found that the top three Democratic contenders for president in 2020 are Joe Biden, Bernie Sanders and Beto O'Rourke. Biden's got the best experience, Bernie's got the best fundraising and Beto's got the best chance of being alive in 2020.

Tomorrow is SantaCon! It's the annual bar crawl where people dress up like Santa for a day of drinking. Or as mall Santas call that, "every day."

The president was in South America — which is the America he hasn't ruined yet.

President Trump hosted not one, but two Hanukkah parties at the White House today. There were Ivankas and Yarmulkes as far as the eye could see.

Nothing says you're guilty more than making a counter report before the Mueller report is even out. That means he knows it's gonna be bad. It's like when you're watching "Cops," and as soon as they pull up to the house, there's already a shirtless guy on the lawn saying, "OK, first of all, she's lying!"

Big changes in store for the Dollhouse in 'Bring It!'

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

Dance dance revolution: Truly great dancers make dancing look effortless, but competition can be fierce in the world of dance. A reality TV series pulls back the curtain to give viewers a glimpse at what goes on behind the scenes of one of the nation's most decorated dance troupes.

Coach Diana "Miss D" Williams once again pushes her dancers to the limit as she prepares them for a new round of hip-hop majorette competitions in the new season of "Bring It," premiering Thursday, Jan. 17, on Lifetime. Founded in 2001, her Dancing Dolls troupe has earned more than 15 Grand Champion titles and has brought home upwards of 100 trophies.

The members of the elite dance team range in age from 10 to 17. "Bring It" also sometimes showcases the Baby Dancing Dolls, which consists of dancers under the age of 11. As in Lifetime's other dance reality TV series, "Dance Moms," the mothers of Miss D's dancers are rarely far away, and their antics often make it into the show.

For five seasons, the Dancing Dolls have faithfully followed Miss D's lead in their quest to become No. 1. However, they're in for a big surprise when their fearless leader shakes things up in the Dollhouse this season. In a shocking twist, she invites boys to dance alongside the girls, and the result is chaos. However, if they want to win, the girls and boys will have to learn how to work together at Miss D's Dollhouse Dance Factory. They'll also have to adapt to new team captains and a new assistant coach.

It's sure to be an exciting season as the Dolls struggle to cope with new team dynamics and face old rivals on the competition circuit. Check out the season premiere of "Bring It," airing Thursday, Jan. 17, on Lifetime.

Life is 'Bella': Over the years, the WWE has introduced the world to its fair share of stars. Most of those stars have made their names in the ring, but a select few have managed to parlay their professional wrestling fame into much more, and a couple of those stars are returning to prime time in their own reality TV series.

WWE superstars Brie Bella and Nikki Bella share their ups and downs as they face new challenges in the fourth season of "Total Bellas," premiering

Sunday, Jan. 13, on E! With big changes on the horizon, it's sure to be a tumultuous season, but the twins seem to be ready to get back into the reality TV arena.

"I'm so excited for another season of 'Total Bellas' and hope our journey continues to inspire, motivate and connect with our Bella Army," Brie Bella said in an official news release about the season 4 renewal.

"I can't wait for our fans to join me in the next step of my life. I promise that it will be a fun, real and heartfelt adventure," Nikki Bella added.

The show is a spinoff of the reality TV program "Total Divas," which took a broader look at the lives of female WWE wrestlers. "Total Bellas" honed in on the twin sisters when it premiered in 2016, also giving viewers a look at the lives of their beaus at the time, Brie's husband Daniel Bryan and Nikki's then boyfriend John Cena ("Bumblebee," 2018).

Unfortunately, Nikki and Cena called it quits at the end of season 3. This season, she'll be striking out as a single woman for the first time in almost a decade, and Brie is happy to play matchmaker for her sis. Professionally, season

4 sees the sisters training for the WWE's first-ever all-women pay-per-view event, Evolution. Meanwhile, Brie and Bryan consider adding a new baby to their little family.

Find out how the season unfolds as the Bella twins tackle new adventures together in "Total Bellas," beginning Sunday, Jan. 13, on E!
