James Corden takes a spin with Celine Dion in 'Carpool Karaoke'

By Joy Doonan
TV Media

When comedian James Corden came to the U.S. in 2015, he was relatively unknown outside of his native U.K. He had been asked by CBS to succeed Craig Ferguson as the host of "The Late Late Show," but he was acutely aware of the need to win over American audiences in a hurry, and he lost no time doing so.

Corden's exuberant charm and knack for facilitating interesting variety specials helped him to succeed at capturing a fanbase, but "Carpool Karaoke" has easily been the most popular creation to come out of his tenure on "The Late Late Show." In this segment, Corden drives around with A-list recording artists and interviews them in a casual format, asking questions in between random fits of spirited radio singalong to the star's own songs.

The following that the segment gained resulted in it getting its own dedicated series. Artists who have been featured on the segment include Adele, Ariana Grande, Cardi B, Sam Smith, Ed Sheeran, Barbara Streisand and Madonna. Since 2016, Corden has hosted an annual hour-long special dedicated to the popular segment, with past specials featuring such superstars as Jennifer Lopez and Katy Perry. "The Late Late Show Carpool Karaoke Primetime Special 2019," featuring guest star Celine Dion, airs Monday, May 20, on CBS.

Corden has explained that the idea for "Carpool Karaoke" was conceived before he was ever noticed by CBS. He had risen to prominence in the U.K. for a succession of roles in small productions, most notably his own BBC Three series, "Gavin & Stacey." In 2009, Corden performed for the charity telethon Comic Relief. He appeared in a sketch in which he drives to the telethon with singer George Michael in his passenger seat, singing along to some of the latter's "Wham!" hits from the '80s. The giddily lighthearted clip became the first episode of "Carpool Karaoke" when Corden decided to resurrect this sketch format for "The Late Late Show." As soon as he managed to nab some big-name celebrities for the segment, beginning with Mariah Carey, its popularity quickly took off.

Reflecting more recently on the show's success, Corden told Stephen Colbert that he is overjoyed at the amount of laughter his karaoke sessions have brought to audiences, saying, "we didn't think it would turn out the way it has."

One of the most famous episodes of "Carpool Karaoke" is the one featuring Paul McCartney. The original 23-minute video was so raved about that an extended special was created shortly after it was first released. Corden said in an interview with Deadline that they "captured something quite special" from the opportunity to interview McCartney from a space as casually intimate as a car. The two took turns driving around McCartney's home town of Liverpool, engaging in an exceptionally uplifting interview about the Beatle's youth and songwriting, crooning along to well-known hits such as "Penny Lane" and "Let It Be," and even paying a surprise visit to McCartney's childhood home. The special ends with McCartney performing in an old familiar Liverpool pub from his early days as a musician. Corden comments to McCartney at one point: "Your music is so full of positivity and joy, and a message of love and togetherness. I feel like it's more relevant now, today, than it's maybe ever been."

It's no wonder, then, that this episode is so emblematic of what "Carpool Karaoke" represents culturally: audiences cherish the hopeful attitude of the series seemingly as much as Corden himself does. The uplifting tone is only made more authentic by the fact that Corden so genuinely delights in the company of his ever-rotating roster of passengers, resulting in many moments of relaxed humor that wouldn't usually be seen in the manicured world of celebrity reality TV.

With so many major artists having appeared on the show, it seems only fitting that musical giant Celine Dion will be taking a turn around the block with the jovial "Late Late Show" host. The Grammy-winning Canadian singer, who is currently gearing up for her "Courage" world tour that begins in September, has a multitude of songs that beg for a "Carpool Karaoke" rendition, from "My Heart Will Go On" to "It's All Coming Back to Me Now." In March, Corden tweeted a picture of himself with Dion in the famous Carpool car, and the two were photographed on a boat in Las Vegas' Bellagio Fountains, performing a sketch recreation of the iconic "Titanic" scene.

Corden's comedic charisma made "Carpool Karaoke" a nationally cherished piece of late-night television. Fans of the segment look forward to his enthusiastic banter with each celebrity to be featured. "The Late Late Show Carpool Karaoke Primetime Special 2019" is ready to outdo itself with internationally renowned singer Celine Dion serving as the guest. Corden will also be rehashing some of the best highlights and his favorite moments from his past year filming the series. Tune in for the epic special when it airs Monday, May 20, on CBS.

Chefs put a modern spin on an ancient way of cooking

Chef Roger Mooking as seen in "Man Fire Food"

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

It isn't rocket science — fire cooks food. Oh sure, there are countless ways to heat up your meal: food can be boiled, it can be plunged into the deep fryer, it can be gently heated in a sous-vide cooker or it can be tossed into a microwave oven. The first way of cooking, though, was with flames, and we're still doing it today, with good reason: it just makes for an incomparable meal.

Chef Roger Mooking continues his quest to explore all of the creative and inventive ways that people are still cooking with fire when "Man Fire Food" returns for a new season on Wednesday, May 22, on Cooking Channel. Each episode finds the charismatic host hitting up a new location, where he hangs out with fellow chefs who are cooking in the most primal way possible.

Mooking begins his journey this week in Fort Worth, Texas, where he hangs out with a chef who has a massive, custom-built metal rig on his ranch that he uses to slow-roast entire hogs over hot coals. It isn't just savory dishes on the menu for this visit, with Mooking's host also showing off how he bakes pear and blackberry cobbles in Dutch ovens using more hot coals.

In the episode's back half, our host heads south to Houston to meet up with a chef who uses 10 vertical spits to cook marinated pork butts low and slow using a triple tier of smoke, fire and heat. As the spits slowly turn next to the flames, the two chefs hand-make corn tortillas for some succulent pork tacos to enjoy once the meat is ready.

Mooking's culinary journey through Texas continues next week when he meets a chef who's built a 500-gallon smoker in his backyard that he uses to combine Asian flavors with Texas classics to make fusion dishes that defy classification.

Fire may seem simple, but there's just so many ways to cook with it, from smoldering coals to roaring flames to flavorful smoke. Join chef Roger Mooking as he explores modern twists on primal cooking in "Man Fire Food" Wednesday, May 22, on Cooking Channel.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: My family and I have been faithful viewers of ABC's "Litton's Weekend Adventure." What is going on this year? They are rerunning old shows all the time or making piecemeal shows from previous shows' footage. Are they dropping this great Saturday morning set of shows?

A: You can look at the programming model for "Litton's Weekend Adventure" as either designed to keep things somewhat fresh across the whole calendar year or designed to make the job of a TV writer more difficult. Either way, the news for you is good: there's no sign that "Litton's Weekend Adventure" is going anywhere.

It's not a show, it's block of different family-friendly, educational shows — a whole package of different programs that air together, generally Saturday mornings on many, but not all, ABC affiliates (all those "generally" and "manys" are what makes this hard for a TV writer). Being a block means that it can air new episodes of some shows and reruns of others (and, as you point out, clip shows made of segments from previous episodes).

It can even bring in new shows mid-season, as it did this year with "Rescue Heroes," which debuted in January, three months after the ninth season of "Litton's Weekend Adventure" officially got underway.

That brings us to the real good news buried here. As I say, the block's approach to programming is a little unorthodox and unpredictable, but it still generally sticks to broadcast television's fall-centric model. Clip shows and late additions aside, officially, "Litton's Weekend Adventure" launches a new "season" every October. And those seasons are not announced until late summer.

That means that there's every indication a new season will debut in October, but it hasn't been announced yet.

That's the point when you'll get what you're craving: new episodes of "Ocean Treks," "Wild Countdown" and the rest of the block.

A poll taken of college students found that their first choice for president is Joe Biden and their second choice is Bernie Sanders. Apparently, college students are excited to not show up to vote for either one.

church where people go to worship themselves.

A town in England has been having problems with aggressive seagulls on its beaches, so they brought in a pair of bald eagles to get rid of them. It's great. Now beach-goers can relax in

Last night, from 7 to midnight, CNN had five town halls with five Democratic candidates. Yeah, five straight hours of town halls. Which is why Wolf Blitzer kicked things off by saying, "Good evening. I'm wearing a diaper."

A pizza restaurant in Texas was shut down after people found out they were putting laxatives in the pizza. They even had a special deal: if you're not on the toilet in 30 minutes, the next one's free.

Today in Russia, Kim Jong Un met with Vladimir Putin. Yeah, it turns out Kim and Putin are good friends. They're actually so close, they can finish each other's poisonings.

Today it was announced that Rami Malek will be the villain in the next James Bond movie. Yeah, he plays the head of HR who tells James Bond all the things he can't do or say to women anymore in 2019.

Joe Biden just entered the race for 2020, but I heard that President Obama doesn't plan on endorsing anyone in the primary. Yeah, it's not good when Obama looks at 20 different candidates and goes, "Uhh, pass!"

I saw that a 25-year-old woman that graduated from Princeton just got engaged to her 71-year-old professor. It was pretty romantic, he got down on one knee, then spent the next 10 minutes trying to get back up.

President Trump met with the CEO of Twitter, Jack Dorsey, and I heard that Trump complained about losing Twitter followers. It was just like when Abraham Lincoln met with his generals and said, "Why aren't my speeches getting more likes?!"

There's been a mysterious countdown clock on Taylor Swift's Instagram, and it ends at midnight tonight. A lot of fans think she's announcing a new album, while the rest are praying she's running for president.

The Late Late Show With James Corden

Authorities at a border checkpoint in Singapore recently caught a man trying to smuggle some interesting contraband. Officers searched the man after they heard meowing coming from the crotch of his pants, and it turns out he was smuggling kittens in his pants. I don't care how many lives these cats have, this is not how you want to spend one.

A couple in San Diego recently got married in the same place where they had their first date: they got married at a Costco. The couple met on a dating app and they bonded over their shared love of the warehouse store. I think it's rather sweet — they actually got married with a dozen other couples 'cause it was cheaper to do it in bulk.

Late Night With Seth Meyers

peace, knowing if a seagull gets too close, an eagle will swoop in and murder it.

Brie Larson is on the show tonight! We love Brie Larson. She's here to finally try and get the word out about this movie called "Avengers: Endgame." Brie thought there were a lot of Avengers until she got here and met the 50 members of the Wu-Tang Clan.

The new "Avengers" opens tomorrow and it's gonna be huge. Some theaters are staying open 24 hours a day, through Sunday. By then, the kid who works the butter pump is gonna have an arm like The Hulk.
