'Last Week Tonight With John Oliver' returns for a seventh searing season

By Sarah Passingham TV Media

ometimes life's darkest realities require searing, comedic criticism, and no one challenges the world's issues quite like John Oliver. Back for a seventh season, a new episode of "Last Week Tonight With John Oliver" premieres Sunday, Feb. 16, on HBO. The British comedian has been tackling fraught issues weekly since 2014 on "Last Week Tonight," providing some much-needed media literacy and a bit of comedy to a news landscape rife with misinforma-

Oliver packs thorough breakdowns of the world's most complex issues into each episode of "Last Week Tonight," from Flint's water crisis and Brexit to opioids and gerrymandering. "Last Week Tonight" has been a mainstay of HBO's Sunday night programming since 2014, so the show has been there to cover every step of President Trump's road to and through the White House, and will presumably address impeachment hearings when it returns this week.

In February 2016, "Last Week Tonight" aired a segment that mocked Donald Trump for his family's abandonment of their ancestral name, Drumpf. The clip of that segment spread like wildfire online, racking up tens of millions of views, clearly hitting a chord with audiences. Other viral moments include the show buying up and then forgiving almost $15 million worth of medical debt in Texas, and the creation of a legally recognized church called Our Lady of Perpetual Exemption.

Finding a unique angle from which to examine the issue of the day is what "Last Week Tonight" does best. That work is done around the clock by writers who research even during the show's off-season. When asked by Vulture in February 2019 about how the show operates behind the scenes while it's not airing, Oliver said, "We've been in the office the whole time, since the day after our last show, just researching. And that's kind of vital time for us to set ourselves up for the year." Knowing that, I think we can expect a fresh perspective on the impeachment that the nightly news cannot provide upon the return of "Last Week Tonight."

Looking back at the show's early episodes, Oliver referenced his second-ever episode in an interview with Vulture, noting that spending 12 minutes solely on the death penalty in 2014 felt "genuinely reckless. Who wants to watch 12 minutes of comedy about the death penalty?" Oliver went on to say, "Then, when you realize people might want more than that, all of sudden we could start to do 20-, 25-, 30-minute, sometimes more than 30-minute stories, just because it feels like either you've gained people's trust enough or that you feel like it's possible that people will be willing to watch it." In the third season's finale, Oliver dedicated a full 30-minute episode, "President-Elect Trump," to considering the impact of voting in Donald Trump as president of the United States. The episode aired just five days after the polls closed.

Oliver's appeal is at least partly due to his incredibly thorough and fact-supported arguments. He needles every angle of the subjects he tackles in episodes of "Last Week Tonight," no matter how much time is dedicated to it. He's similarly thorough about other endeavors, too. In 2017, he was asked to moderate a Tribeca Film Festival screening of 1997's "Wag the Dog," a film about a man tasked with spinning false news stories to distract from the president's sex scandal, starring Dustin Hoffman and Robert De Niro. During the panel, Oliver questioned Hoffman about the multiple allegations of sexual harassment levied against him and, not satisfied with the actor's initial denial and deflection, corrected Hoffman on his own statement.

Hoffman was unsettled, and had clearly been expecting a lighter, celebrity-friendly chat about the film. Speaking with the Guardian following the incident, Oliver said, "It's a 'Wag The Dog' screening, a film in which sexual harassment is buried in a gigantic power imbalance. The fact that he would turn up and think I wouldn't bring it up made me see how little he'd thought about it."

Though he has made his career as someone who is not flustered by celebrity or the cult of personality, Oliver is not immune to becoming star-struck by the one mega star that would stop anyone in their tracks. He lent his voice to 2019's "The Lion King" as Zazu, the bird who serves to provide updates on the pride lands to King Mufasa. While the voice cast recorded separately, they all came together to shoot a promotional cast photo ahead of the film's release — that is, nearly all of the cast. Oliver confirmed speculation that Beyoncé, who voices Nala in the film, was not present for the shot, but he told Stephen Colbert that "the future presence of Beyoncé was so intimidating" that he jumped like he'd experienced "an electrical reaction" when he was told she'd be added to the photo next to him.

Do not miss what will certainly be some well-researched, informative and funny takes on world issues when "Last Week Tonight" returns with its seventh season premiere on Sunday, Feb. 16, on HBO.

'Beat Bobby'

Martha Stewart is Flay's celebrity guest this week

Bobby Flay hosts "Beat Bobby Flay"

By Michelle Rose

oor Bobby Flay. Everyone is looking to knock him down. For 24 seasons now, competitors have lined up to take on the Iron Chef at his own game in "Beat Bobby Flav" on Food Network.

Flay has won many but also lost quite a few — his won-lost record was 178 wins and 101 losses just a few weeks ago and you'd think there wouldn't be many celebrity friends and chefs left to challenge the New York chef.

Enter Martha Stewart.

On a new episode of "Beat Bobby Flay" airing this Thursday (Feb. 20), the lifestyle mayen makes an appearance along with guest chef Richard Blais, winner of Bravo's "Top Chef All-Stars." Chefs Katherine Fuchs and Michael Merida will join them as this week's challengers, and whoever makes it to the second round will surely pull out all the stops in an attempt to impress the guest panel with a dish that beats Bobby Flav's.

This isn't Stewart's first time on "Beat Bobby Flay." She also appeared on the 2016 Thanksgiving episode in which Flay got handed one of his 101 losses. And Flay has been a guest in Stewart's kitchen before, too, so there is presumably a lot of respect between these two big food personalities, regardless of any banter featured on this week's ep-

Stewart, 78, may not be as omnipresent as she was in the 1990s and early 2000s, and her housewares brand, Martha Stewart Living Omnimedia, was sold last year for just half of its 2015 purchase price. But the dovenne of domesticity still makes her presence felt with regular TV appearances and with her various business ventures. Mind you, she's also generated a few headlines with her social media posts, like when she called out "Queer Eye's" Antoni Porowski for poor netiquette when he didn't tag her in the photos he'd taken on her property (consider yourself warned).

But let's get back to TV. In 2018, Food Network announced that Stewart had signed on as a recurring judge on "Chopped," and her most recent appearances included two episodes last month. Along with Flay, Stewart's name was also prominently highlighted last fall when Discovery launched its "hyper-interactive" Food Network Kitchen app. So there is a continuing association between Stewart and Food Network's parent company, Discov-

And while her unexpected friendship with Snoop Dogg has raised more than a few bemused evebrows since the rapper's appearance on a 2008 episode of "Martha," it has also led to a TV partnership that's still going strong. The third season of VH1's "Martha and Snoop's Potluck Dinner Party" wrapped last month, and while previous seasons featured "celebrity quests and lots of funny talk, silly games and actual recipes" (per Stewart in an interview with "Architectural Digest"), the latest season featured a competition format more akin to Food Network shows.

Q: I just want to know, is "Good Witch" gone for good? I saw the one show before Christmas but haven't seen or heard anything about it since.

A: "Good Witch" is definitely not gone for good, but it's gone for a while, at least.

Since almost its very beginning (indeed, since before it was a show), "Good Witch" has been built around the Halloween special. The weekly show began life as a string of annual made-for-TV movies, most of which aired as Halloween specials. That tradition has continued with the show, which for five years now has aired Halloween specials each year to break up the time between sea-

We're in that between-season time right now. The most recent episode that aired was the Halloween special, and we still have at least two months to wait before the regular season begins.

I say "at least" because the regular-season premieres haven't been so consistent. For the first four seasons, they came in the spring, either April or May. But the fifth season didn't debut last year until June.

They have, however, been consistent about length. Each season so far has been 10 episodes, so that's what we can expect for the upcoming sixth season.

Given that the sixth season hasn't really begun yet (for Hallmark's record-keeping purposes, it considers the Halloween episode to be part of the sixth season, but in practical terms it's a separate thing), it's a bit early to wonder about a seventh-season renewal. However, it may not be as much of a lock as it has been in previous years.

"Good Witch" has been a ratings smash for Hallmark, so it's been pretty quick to renew it each year, but this year comes with a significant change: It's the first without Grace (Bailee Madison, "Trophy Wife"), daughter of central character Cassie (Catherine Bell, "Army Wives"). That change may mess with the show's chemistry, so the network may wait to see how things shape up before making a decision.

Sixty one percent of American women disapprove of President Trump, and the 39% who do approve of President Trump had terrible fathers.

Republicans said they're looking forward to hearing President Trump's side of the story, which I guess means they're not on Twitter.

Targeted advertising knows way too much about you. You'll tell a friend how much you want a pair of boots, then you'll see an ad for those boots. Which means, No. 1, our phones are listening to us. And, No. 2, they're better boyfriends than most guys.

Researchers are already saying we lived through the hottest decade on record, and it's only going to get worse because of climate change, aka (for all vou Boomers and Gen X-ers out there) "global warming," aka (for all you millennials), "Yo, the polar ice caps are totally ahostina us."

The Tonight Show Starring Jimmy Fallon

During the trial, Trump said that he's probably still going to go to Switzerland for the World Economic Forum cause nothing says "I'm innocent" like flying to Switzerland the moment your trial starts.

I want to congratulate the Kansas City Chiefs and the San Francisco 49ers for advancing to Super Bowl LIV. Fans of both teams are going crazy, while most of the country is celebrating that it's not the Patriots.

A man in New Hampshire had a $21 bar tab and left a $2,000 tip. So it's official: Mike Bloomberg will spend whatever it takes to get a vote.

A woman in the U.K. just found a message in a bottle from Canada, which means Harry and Meghan must have been cut off from their Verizon royal family plan.

The Late Show With Stephen Colbert

Happy Martin Luther King Jr. Day! Both the president and the first lady noted the day on Twitter. She really relates to Dr. King's message, especially the part about wanting to be "free at last."

It's a pivotal day in the history of the republic soon we'll find out if breaking the law is illegal.

So no evidence, no witnesses, just 100 old people stuck in a room together. This isn't a trial! It's the 4 o'clock dinner rush at Denny's!

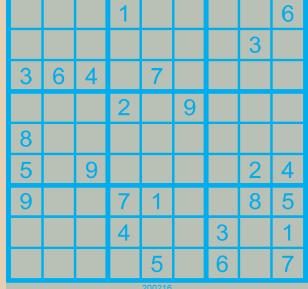

If Mitch McConnell has his way, this trial will go just like Donald Trump's dating career: quick and disappointing and no questions asked.

The Late Late Show with James Corden

The Senate spent the entire first day hashing out the rules for the [impeachment] trial. It's an exciting day for people who are like, "You know what my favorite part of the book is? The table of contents."

According to the Washington Post, since taking office, Trump has racked up more than 16,000 false or misleading claims. And that's just in public. That doesn't even include the time he told Trump's defense team isn't even denying that he did what he's accused of. They just say it doesn't rise to the level of impeachment. Which is like Jeffrey Dahmer arguing he didn't rise to the level of cannibalism.

I was up late last night watching this impeachment, and then, like two minutes after I went to bed, we had an earthquake. And then, an hour later, my daughter woke up with growing pains. And then, two hours later, she woke up again to tell us, "I feel like I'm going to throw up." Which is how I felt watching the impeachment trial. So it kind of came full circle.
