The powerhouse cast of 'Big Little Lies' welcomes a familiar face for Season 2 | ∞

By Kenneth Andeel TV Media

hen the Season 1 finale of "Big Little Lies" aired last year on HBO, few were expecting it to return for a second season. Not because it wasn't worthy — the show did exceptionally well, and raked in the accolades during awards season but because the story on which it is based ends where Season 1 left off. On Sunday, June 9, the critically acclaimed series returns for an unexpected second season, and we are treated to further exploration of the intrique-filled lives of a group of Californian women.

"Big Little Lies" premiered in 2017 as a seven-part limited series on HBO. The project was spearheaded by movie stars Nicole Kidman ("The Hours," 2002) and Reese Witherspoon ("A Wrinkle in Time," 2018), who, several years earlier, had optioned the rights to produce a film or television series based on author Liane Moriarty's novel of the same name.

Moriarty's novel depicted a complicated web of secrets, abuse and revenge that brings a group of very different women together and results in an ultimate act of desperate violence. After Witherspoon and Kidman opted to produce the project as a series rather than as a film, as initially expected, the already noteworthy cast began to grow. A additional stars signed on, including Shailene Woodley ("Divergent," 2014), Zoë Kravitz ("Mad Max: Fury Road," 2015) and Laura Dern ("Jurassic Park," 1993), who filled out the group of women central to the story's plot.

Supporting cast members included Alexander Skarsgård ("True Blood"), Adam Scott ("Parks and Recreation"), Kathryn Newton ("Halt and Catch Fire") and Iain Armitage ("Young Sheldon"), most of whom are returning in Season 2. I say "most" in an effort to spare you from spoilers — if you haven't watched the first season, telling you who isn't returning for Season 2 would give too much away.

So far, "Big Little Lies" has followed the three lead characters Celeste (Kidman), Madeline (Witherspoon) and Jane (Woodley). Jane is a newcomer to Monterey, and is there to raise her son as a single mother and hide a troubled past. The women meet because of their children, who all attend the same school, and Madeline takes Jane under

Season 1 was a roller-coaster of drama and secrets. Celeste's marriage was not what it seemed. Madeline's controlling nature threatened to ruin her relationships with family members. Jane's past seemed to literally chase her as she did her best to outrun it and care for her son. Ultimately, these women, along with others who seem at first to be antagonists, come together in a moment of great need to resolve a serious case of abuse. They kill a man.

It's here that the story diverges from the source material. In the novel, the woman who does the actual killing admits to her actions immediately and turns herself in, despite her friends agreeing to lie on her behalf. In the television version, the women come up with a story in which the man died accidentally after instigating a struggle, and present a united front to police. The investigation into the death and the repercussions of that night are the source of much of the tension and drama Season 2 has to offer.

Meryl Streep ("Doubt," 2008) joins the already ridiculously talented cast this season. She plays the mother of the man who died, and she comes to town looking for answers about his death.

When Moriarty's novel left the series with no further source material to draw upon, the cast and creators seemed reticent to endorse the idea of a second season; they all claimed to be supremely happy with the way the first season turned out and defended its existence as a standalone piece of work.

The demand for more must have simply been too great, because in 2017, shortly after "Big Little Lies" had received an Emmy nomination for Outstanding Limited Series, HBO announced that a second season was being explored, and that Moriarty had been contacted to write new material for it.

Later that year, the second season was confirmed, and while fans were overjoyed, the announcement didn't thrill other awards-season contenders. HBO had waited until after voting had concluded so the show would not be pulled from the "Limited Series" category for awards season. "Big Little Lies" ultimately nabbed several awards, including the Emmy and the Golden Globe for Best Miniseries.

Awards-season controversy aside, the return of the series has plenty of people excited. Like Moriarty's novel, the television version of "Big Little Lies" manages to balance a dark sense of humor with a conscientious and sensitive exploration of domestic abuse and the effects of trauma. The show's elite cast, which now includes three Oscar winners (Kidman, Witherspoon, Streep) and a two-time Oscar nominee (Dern), lovingly brings each character to life, and it's a real joy to watch these women, both fictional and real, work together on screen.

Season 2 of "Big Little Lies" continues to explore the dark secrets of Monterey when it premieres Sunday, June 9, on HBO.

'The Great Food Truck Race' heads to the east coast

Tyler Florence hosts "The Great Food Truck Race"

By Andrew Warren

ire up those engines and put the pedal to the metal. Another season of "The Great Food Truck Race" has hit the road on Food Network, and with only one team able to take home the grand prize, the competition this year is going to be fierce.

Chef Tyler Florence returns to host the culinary race, a role that he's held for all 10 seasons. This year, nine teams of aspiring food truck owners are in the running as they make their way along the Atlantic coast's sunny cities, making stops along the way where they face challenges that test their cooking, business acumen and ability to market their brand.

In this week's premiere, all nine teams assemble in beautiful Myrtle Beach, South Carolina. Each has their own food truck for the competition, with its own style of food, branding and way of cooking. What ties them all together, though, is their desire to sell mouth-watering food to eager customers. In Myrtle Beach, Florence challenges the food truck crews to serve up scrummy boardwalk bites and succulent crab dishes to hungry locals, and the team that's the least successful is asked to leave the caravan.

Next week, the racers are off to Hilton Head, South Carolina, where they face a boiled peanut challenge. With future stops in Florida at Daytona Beach, Tampa, Fort Myers, Fort Lauderdale and Miami, the competitors are destined to get plenty of sun as their numbers get whittled down and they get closer and closer to the $50,000 grand prize.

The name "Food Truck Race" is a bit of a misnomer — this is a cooking competition, after all, and the food trucks don't actually race each other from city to city. Instead, it's more of a race for sales, with the food truck teams being given unique challenges at every stop that speak to the local food scene, and that encourage the competitors to get creative with both their food and their mar-

Buckle up those seatbelts and make sure you have a napkin handy — "The Great Food Truck Race" heads to the East Coast for its 10th season starting Sunday, June 9, on Food Network.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison TV Media

Q: Is the "Lethal Weapon" series coming back? I really enjoy that show, and I quite like the new guy.

A: No, it's not coming back. And though it may disappoint fans such as yourself, "Lethal Weapon" was a troubled show from the beginning, and so its cancellation likely seemed to some (such as star Damon Wayans, and presumably Fox Television) like a welcome release.

The first two seasons of the show were famous for all the wrong reasons — particularly on- and off-set feuding between stars Wayans and Clayne Crawford (leading to Crawford's replacement by "new guy" Seann William Scott), and Wayans' willingness to complain openly about not wanting to do the show.

Wayans finally got his maybe-wish last month when Fox canceled "Lethal Weapon" after its third season.

Wayans may have even made it happen. He actually announced back in October that he was planning to quit, saying that the rigors of working on a stunt-filled cop show were too much for "a 58-year-old diabetic" like himself (he had literally become "too old for this [expletive]," as per his character's catchphrase). However, he and the producers later walked that back a little bit and there was hope for a fourth season. But that hope is gone now.

Of course, the hope should have been slim. Ratings for the third season, the first with Scott in the co-star seat, were down by about a quarter versus the previous season (which itself was less watched than the first).

Whether that Season 3 drop was due to a rejection of Scott in the role or just a continuation of the overall decline is hard to say. But it was asking a lot of fans to accept a new lead character on a show whose whole premise (drawn from the more popular film series) was about the unlikely friendship of its lead characters.

Last night was the final episode of "Game of Thrones" and people are not happy about it. USA Today was railing against it. It was the angriest pie chart I've ever seen.

That's why I'm happy I've put a lot of thought into how our show is going to end. It's going to be Season 48, oh boy. I'm gonna burn the whole set down and then I'm gonna marry my Aunt Louise.

The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon

Everybody's talking about last night's episode of "Game of Thrones." Now, I won't give away any spoilers but I will say they killed off the Starbucks cup.

"Game of Thrones" might be winding down, but "The Bachelorette" is just getting started. The season premiere was tonight, and you can tell they're trying to copy the success of "Game of Thrones." because one of the contestants is her brother.

President Trump is in a trade war with China, and I saw that Chinese officials said that, "No one should expect China to swallow bitter fruit." Then Trump fired back: "I believe the word is 'vegetable.'"

I saw that the CEO of Bed Bath & Beyond is stepping down. He was supposed to leave Bed Bath & Beyond last month, but he kept seeing things he needed.

New York Mayor Bill de Blasio joined the race, and a lot of people were surprised because his poll numbers are pretty bad. Right now, just 21 percent of New Yorkers support him running. To put that in perspective, 22 percent of New Yorkers support a wet seat on the subway.

The Late Late Show With James Corden

This is the first time two brothers have played each other in the Conference finals — Steph and Seth Curry. It's great news for NBA fans, terrible news for anyone with a lisp.

An Australian man was recently out walking his dog when he found a gold nugget worth $37,000. Does anything ever go wrong for Chris Hemsworth?

The beer company Natural Light is currently looking for a paid intern to spend their working days sampling the company's beer. Well, they're calling in an internship; it's really more of a training course for future divorced dads.

A man in Wisconsin went to the police department to claim a backpack that he had left in a library, but the man was immediately arrested because that backpack was filled with meth. Now, I know it sounds stupid to go to the police station to pick up your meth, right? In the man's defense, he was on a lot of meth.

According to new research, the back seat of a rideshare vehicle has over 35,000 times more germs than the average toilet seat. Yeah, I know. They are definitely losing at least half a star.

Rideshare seats are dirtier and more dangerous than a toilet seat. Plus, the toilet seat won't spend 20 minutes

There's another controversy over who might be the new Batman. It is rumored that Robert Pattinson from the Twilight movies might be the next Batman. If you think about it, it makes sense. He was a vampire, now he's a bat.

Comic book fans haven't been this angry since every other time they announced who's playing Batman. You know who wouldn't give a crap about who they cast as the new Batman? Batman.

Late Night With Seth Meyers

According to the New York Times, President Trump uses more profanity in public speeches, interviews and in tweets than previous presidents. OK, I'll give you public speeches and interviews, but tweets seems pretty unfair. Twitter is 13 years old. No one's like, "Not Lincoln, that's a guy who could tweet!"

The NBA Draft Lottery was last night, with the New Orleans Pelicans getting the top pick. Even though New Orleans Pelicans sounds like a fake team they would mention in a movie so you know it's the future. "You see hat Pelicans game? The hole space station's talkin' bout it!"
