THE NEW NORMAL

Bill Burt

Here's a quick summary of the 2021 winter sports season around the Merrimack Valley and southern

New Hampshire:

Lots of masks. Lots of disinfectant. Lots of athletes and coaches adhering to social-distancing restrictions (i.e. sitting in the stands, instead of benches, during games).

One thing missing, big-time, has been the fans. Fans, particularly parents, have been shut out at the games thus far this winter. This was not an MIAA guideline but one the MVC athletic directors, principals and superintendents came up with.

"Is it perfect? No," said Methuen High girls basketball senior captain Bella Keaney. "But we just want to play. I don't know what I'd do without any games, especially now as a senior."

Keaney knows exactly what's at stake. A three-sport athlete, she played a reduced girls soccer schedule this fall, with the Lady Rangers winning one game with five ties. And she missed the entire lacrosse

There is a difference. No fans. No parents. And no students.

Central Catholic basketball captain Nate Godin admitted the two opening week games at Andover High weren't the same without a few hundred Golden Warriors students calling him every name in the book.

"That's the part I love most about playing Andover, the fans and the excitement," said Godin. "I love hearing it. It gets me pumped up. It's why high school sports are great."

But the games have gone on without a hitch. Everybody on site is wearing a mask, including the student-athletes.

It's a small price to pay. "This is a gift," said Andover High boys hoop captain Zayn Aruri. "We have no idea if we will play one game or all of our schedule. Who knows what's going to happen? I'm enjoying every game and every practice as if it's a try-out, like it's going to be my last one."

Haverhill High athletic director Tom O'Brien said Merrimack Valley Conference officials from all schools have been on top of this for the last two months, preparing to compete against the second surge of the coronavirus.

"We all know what athletics mean to the schools and the students-athletes," said O'Brien. "The fall went pretty well, honestly. It wasn't ideal. The schedule was shortened. But I can't tell you how many students approached me and were so appreciative of our efforts. That really told me something. They just want an opportunity to play."

O'Brien's girls volleyball team, for one, had one of its best seasons ever going 11-0. "Again, they weren't able to play in a championship or state tournament, but they had an experience they'll never forget," said O'Brien. "I believe we are doing the right thing."

There are other imperfections this winter season, especially at Lawrence High, which is not allowing any winter sports.

The city of Lawrence is considered a "nuclear" zone when it comes to the virus and positive tests, which are still hovering 20 percent (1 in 5) over a 14-day testing period, the highest in the Commonwealth.

While Methuen and Haverhill have been above 10 percent and among the top 20 percent of cities and towns in the state considered "hot zones," they are able to play winter sports.

Lawrence schools have been remote since September with hopes of getting back some semblance of a hybrid program next week.

Lawrence High boys senior basketball captain Gregory Duran, who was supposed to be an all-star caliber player in the Merrimack Valley probably said it best.

"I understand there are a lot of things going on, but I wish they'd look at it from our side, the kids' side," said Duran. "We just want to play. Please, let us play."

Lawrence cancelled all its fall sports and coach Moose Moore isn't optimistic for the winter season.

He said, "I don't think they've made it official but it feels pretty much set in stone."

MVC teams will be playing 12 games. That's six opponents with home-and-home series each week. At this point, there are no firm plans for a post-season MVC tourney. The MIAA tourneys already have been cancelled.

Players have to wear masks during games.

Instead of an opening tip, a coin-flip will decide who gets the ball. All inbounders are from the sidelines except after baskets or free throws.

Returning honors: Justin Dunne Eagle-Tribune All-Star honorable mention, Jimmy Flynn Eagle Tribune All-Star honorable mention

Fast facts: First-year head coach Dave Chase was an assistant to Pete Rosinski, who finished his 19 years at the school with a record of 188-206 ... Chase, a teacher at Hopkinton who coached the Concord boys before arriving in Derry, is in his 35th year of coaching and has led boys and girls programs in Massachusetts, Utah, Vermont and New Hampshire. He has won three state basketball titles, four state baseball titles and one in golf ... E.J. Fasano is a transfer from Wilton, Conn., and figures to add length to the lineup while stretching defenses with his long-range shooting ability ... The incoming freshmen and sophomores have high basketball intelligence and provide hope for a brighter future after the Astros have won only six of their 32 games the past two seasons ... Both of last year's victories were over Windham during a season in which Pinkerton eclipsed 56 points only three times with a season high of 65 ... Assistants Justin Lang and Cam Owen are both first timers at Pinkerton while freshman coach Andy Collins is in his seventh season with the program.

Coach: Dave Chase (1st year)
