Generation Z(endaya)

Freshman season of 'Euphoria' wraps up on HBO

By Breanna Henry
TV Media

Rue Bennett is a drug addict. Despite having been recently released from a rehab center, she is not recovering, and does not intend to remain clean. She routinely meets strangers online for "hook-ups," browses sketchy websites, and lies about her age.

Rue is only 17-years-old, and luckily for her parents, she is a fictional character from the premium cable show "Euphoria," played by Disney Channel graduate Zendaya ("Spider-Man: Far From Home," 2019). If you haven't been keeping up with "Euphoria" so far, you can stream previous episodes on HBO Go, and the Season 1 finale (titled "And Salt the Earth Behind You") airs Sunday, Aug. 4, on HBO.

The fantastic cast of fresh young actors "Euphoria" revolves around includes Jacob Elordi ("The Kissing Booth," 2018) as angry, confused jock Nate; Algee Smith ("The Hate U Give," 2018) as struggling college athlete Chris; Barbie Ferreira ("Divorce") as insecure, sexually curious Kat; Sydney Sweeney ("Sharp Objects") as Cassie, who can't seem to escape her past; and the show's breakout star, trans runway model Hunter Schafer in her first role as Jules, a transgender teen girl looking to find the place she belongs. Cap all that talent off with an incredible performance by the show's lead, Zendaya, and there is no reason to question why "Euphoria" is becoming one of the most popular shows on HBO.

"Euphoria" follows a group of Generation Z (the group that came right after Millennials) students as they navigate their way through their late teen years into adulthood, and deal with the problems unique to their generation. Racy videos posted online, fentanyl abuse and social media drama weren't issues you had to deal with in high school before Generation Z came along, but the classic problems like bullies, parents, secrets and crushes are still very much part of these teens' lives.

In many ways, "Euphoria" represents a bridge of understanding between modern parents and children; while the show may take drama to the extreme in some cases, many aspects of the show's storyline do occur in the life of today's average teen. A review of the show on Vox interpreted "Euphoria" perfectly, saying, "The [series] has gotten a lot of attention for depicting 'how the teens live today,' but its greatest strength isn't what's timely about it, but what's eternal about it." The way the show mixes these themes together is seamless and absolutely stunning.

HBO is well known for its boundary-pushing, extravagant and original television series; there are things one expects when it comes to an HBO original — more mature content, more production value, higher quality — and "Euphoria" has hit every one of these marks with its first season. The cinematography, colors and design are out-of-this-world on their own, but couple them with stunning camera direction and unique shots, and "Euphoria" could stand tall even without amazing storylines and great acting.

Episodes are interwoven with flashbacks to the characters' childhoods, and we're shown how those moments relate to current issues and events in their lives. The way the show uses images to convey its story is truly something worth seeing, even if the plot doesn't excite you.

You can't talk about "Euphoria" without talking about mental health. Zendaya's character, Rue has dealt with anxiety, Obsessive-Compulsive Disorder and Attention Deficit Disorder since early childhood, and was first given Valium at the age of 11; this, along with the death of her father, drives the teen to begin taking drugs as she searches for the two seconds of "euphoria" in which she isn't plagued by her mental state.

The moments of the show that truly stand out are Zendaya's voice-over monologues, which are poignant, thought-provoking and relatable for viewers who have experienced similar situations. Jill Gutowitz of Nylon Magazine wrote, "I was actually happy — and by 'happy,' I mean devastated — to see the things I feel and endure mirrored." She also called "Euphoria" "TV's most realistic portrayal of anxiety." The portrayal of the dark side of mental health in the show is very real, and neither sugar-coats or vilifies the issue.

Critics of the series say it brings back memories of "Reefer Madness" (1936), or assert that it's trying too hard, but there are many more moments in "Euphoria" I consider must-see scenes than cringe-worthy shock bait. The series has been gaining more and more viewers each episode, and HBO even ordered a second season of the show in July. (Take that, haters.) The show boasts a talented, if somewhat odd, group of producers that include Canadian rapper Drake and his manager, Future the Prince, as well as Peabody Award-winning writer Gary Lennon, and 71-year-old Tmira Yardeni, a prolific producer from Tel Aviv, Israel.

If you came here looking for spoilers on the finale, you're out of luck. HBO is keeping Rue, Jules, Kat and Fezco's antics on lock-down. Does "Euphoria" sound like the kind of show you could get into?

Pokémon: Detective Pikachu

Tim Goodman (Smith), a young insurance salesman, abandons his Pokémon training due to the death of his mother and the death of his missing father, Det. Harry Goodman. To collect his father's possessions, Tim must travel to the nearby metropolis of Ryme City, where he discovers Det. Pikachu (Reynolds), and realizes that he is the only one who can communicate with the creature. Pikachu eventually reveals that he was his father's partner, and explains they were investigating a case when Tim's dad disappeared. Tim and Det. Pikachu join forces to solve the mystery of what happened to Harry.

The Wall

8 8:00 p.m.

Chris Hardwick hosts as contestants answer questions in the hopes of winning a life-altering cash prize. If they answer correctly, a green ball is dropped down a wall to add to the cash total, but if they are wrong, a red ball subtracts from the prize.

The Outpost

56 8:00 p.m.

While Wythers (Andrew Howard) tries to save Garret (Jake Stormoen), Talon (Jessica Green) and Zed (Reece Ritchie) uncover a key to great power in this new episode. Meanwhile, Gwynn (Imogen Waterhouse) considers Tobin's (Aaron Fontaine) proposal.

Chris Hardwick hosts "The Wall"

BBQ Brawl: Flay vs. Symon

FOOD 9:00 p.m.

Bobby Flay and Michael Symon face off in a high "steaks" tomahawk rib-eye challenge in this new episode. The winner will receive a big advantage in the competition. Then, the six remaining participants go head to head in a Texas beef challenge.

My Crazy Birth Story

tlc 11:00 p.m.

People share more incredible birth stories in this new episode. One couple went to the zoo and left with much more than they expected. Another story recounts how a woman gave birth while driving. Also, a mother-to-be heads to the store for samples.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: Why do I recognize the guy who plays Daniel in "Fear the Walking Dead"? I'm almost certain I've seen him before.

A: I'm also certain that you've seen Rubén Blades at some point over his 36-year acting career on the big and small screens.

He's mostly known as a go-to supporting man — the guy to call to play a Latino character with gravitas and desert-dry wit.

Among his best-known roles are Sheriff Montoya in the critically acclaimed 1988 picture "The Milagro Beanfield War" (directed by a young guy by the name of Robert Redford), Det. Danny Archuleta in 1990's "Predator 2," and retired FBI man Jorge in the 2003 action thriller "Once Upon a Time in Mexico."

However acting is only part of Blades's stardom. He first found fame as a salsa musician — indeed, his first film credit is as a song composer for a 1983 short film.

His music and acting occasionally came together, such as in the 2016 boxing biopic "Hands of Stone," in which several of his songs appeared, and he played boxer Robert Duran's manager.

Blades's musical and acting fame also boosted his third career, as a political activist and politician. He even ran for the presidency of his native Panama in 1994, and later served as minister of tourism in the mid-2000s.

Q: I'm a huge fan of the movie "The Transporter," particularly for the visuals — the look of it. Where was it filmed?

A: The short answer is France, but you probably want more detail.

"The Transporter" (2002) is about a former British special-forces tough guy living in France as a driver for hire.

And he's living well, as shown by the scenes at his house/villa/miniature castle, the externals of which were filmed on location in the small town of Cassis on the French Riviera.

The opening car chase was shot in Nice, the highway car chase through mountains was shot west of Marseille, and another car chase was shot in Paris.

Vacation Creation

5 11:30 a.m.

The Lopez family is taken on an adventure through Vietnam, and they travel to Da Nang in this rebroadcast. The family is in need of a vacation after surviving a wildfire that broke out near their summer camp for disadvantaged children.

The Zoo: San Diego

ANPL 8:00 p.m.

When a baby klipspringer is born on one of the coldest nights of the season, it's miraculously nursed back to health in this new episode. Meanwhile, at the Safari Park, the California condor team goes to great lengths to save the endangered species.

Andrea Feczko hosts "Vacation Creation"

Restaurant: Impossible

FOOD 9:00 p.m.

Chef Robert Irvine works hard to save Mike Audia's Restaurant-Catering in this new episode. The Italian-American barbecue family restaurant is in for one of the most dramatic transformations in this history of the series.

Mountain Mamas

HGTV 11:00 p.m.

A mother and daughter planning to move back to Montana from Texas search for a property with plenty of land in this new episode. They enlist the help of Jackie Wickens and Trecie Wheat Hughes to find a place suitable for all of their animals.

Yesterday, the U.S. women's soccer team defeated the team from the Netherlands to win the World Cup. Despite the loss, the Netherlands team still celebrated, 'cause they have healthcare.

This is the second time in a row the women's team has won the World Cup. The women's teams have done so well, the U.S. is thinking of getting a men's team.

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi is not too happy. She told the younger members of Congress to stop tweeting. Pelosi said, "The real fun is checking out me and Chuck Schumer on Myspace."

The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon

What a crazy weekend here in New York City, there was a huge blackout for hours. New Yorkers were trapped on subways, traffic was at a standstill and there was no air conditioning at Port Authority ... then the blackout hit.

New Yorkers rallied and managed to keep calm, then everyone's phone battery reached five percent and all hell broke loose.

I heard the blackout even affected some weddings. At the Plaza Hotel, the lights went off just before a couple exchanged vows. Even worse, just before that the bride had said, "God, if this is a mistake, please give me a sign!"

Everybody's talking about this racist tweet the president sent yesterday. He told a group of democratic American congresswomen to "go back to where they came from." Meanwhile, Melania was like, "Hey, how come they get to leave?"

We're right in the middle of Amazon Prime Day, and I read that one of the top-selling items is the Instant Pot. It's also one of the most returned items when stoners realize it's not what they thought it was.

The Late Show With Stephen Colbert

Donald Trump and congress are fighting. I would say they're at each others throats, but it's hard to find the throat under all the old man jowl.

The CDC reports that more than 700 people have been infected by measles this year, marking a 25-year high for the infectious disease because people aren't vaccinating against it! Your ancestors are saying, "I'd trade places with you, but I died of measles!"

The Late Late Show with James Corden

Customs officials in the Philippines were inspecting a gift-wrapped box of cookies coming into the country, only to discover the box actually contained 757 smuggled live tarantulas. Customs officials would never have discovered them if one of the spiders wasn't packing a tube of shampoo larger than three ounces.

which was so strong, Kawhi Leonard somehow wound up on the Clippers.

You know, they used to say, "When the ground starts shaking, get under a doorway." Now they say, "Drop, cover and hold on." Don't run, drop to your hands and knees, wherever you are. Cover your head and neck so the earthquake can't see you, I guess. And hold on until the earthquake stops. In other words, get down on your knees and pray that Jesus will stop making the world shake.

Trump held what he called a "Social Media Summit" at the White House today, hosting a group that included conspiracy theorists, internet trolls, Q Anon followers — all the worst people, people who like their own posts. There haven't been this many trolls in one room since the table read for "Lord of The Rings."

Late Night With Seth Meyers

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi said today that she will introduce a resolution condemning President Trump's racist attacks on minority lawmakers. Nancy Pelosi counters attacks from a president the same way a normal person handles bad service at Starbucks. "Go back to where they came from? Oh, you bet I'll be filling out a comment card!"
