'The Making of the Mob: Chicago' chronicles Capone's rise

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

Known as The Windy City, Chicago is famous for a lot of things — deep dish pizza, the L train and Oprah Winfrey to name a few. But the city is also infamous for being the setting of the rise of one of North America's most notorious organized crime syndicates: The Chicago Outfit.

A new docuseries offers viewers a dramatization of the events that led to the rise and fall of one of the Mob's founding members. Michael Kotschalis ("The Dark Side of War," 2009) stars as iconic gangster Al Capone in a new episode of "The Making of the Mob: Chicago," airing Monday, Aug. 15, on AMC. In addition to dramatic reenactments, the program features archival footage and photos, as well as interviews with historians, authors, law enforcement personnel and actors famous for their portrayal of gangsters.

Actor Ray Liotta ("Goodfellas," 1990) narrates the series, which is now in its second season. The first season focused on the rise of the New York Mob, particularly with reference to Lucky Luciano, who was credited with revolutionizing the Big Apple's organized crime hierarchy by forming alliances and creating the Five Families. Attracting around a million viewers per episode, the debut season was a respectable success for AMC, so it came as no surprise when the show was renewed.

"The histories and the spectacular personalities inside the American mafia provides a fascinating real-life look at organized crime, and allows us to expand the storytelling beyond New York City," said AMC executive Joel Stillerman. "Al Capone is one of the most notorious crime figures, and 'The Making of the Mob: Chicago' showcases the canny criminal minds and brutish no-nonsense killers that will stop at nothing for power."

The eight-episode series picked up with Capone's early days in New York, and followed him on to Chicago, where he worked with his childhood mentor in the underworld: Johnny Torrio (Paolo Rotondo, "The Insider's Guide to Happiness"). After Prohibition was established, Capone got into the bootlegging business, garnering a reputation for his ruthless practices and flamboyant lifestyle, which attracted the attention of President Herbert Hoover. For a time, he was seen as a man of the people, even donating some of his ill-gotten gains to charity. However, the 1929 St. Valentine's Day Massacre shattered that rock star gangster image. Capone is believed to have been responsible for the murder of seven members of the rival North Side Irish Gang in a bid for power. Season 2 of "The Making of the Mob" features appearances by actor Vincent Pastore ("The Sopranos") and Michael Madsen ("Reservoir Dogs," 1992), both famous for their portrayals of Capone-like gangsters. Jonathan Eig, a New York Times best-selling author and a renowned Capone expert, also shares his thoughts, as does former Las Vegas mayor Oscar Goodman.

While the focus of the series rests squarely on Capone's brawny shoulders, he isn't the only gangster featured in this season of the docuseries. Along with the aforementioned Rotondo as famed Italian-American mobster Torrio, "The Making of the Mob: Chicago" stars Jason Fitch ("Shortland Street") as enforcer Tony Accardo, newcomer

Christopher Valente as "The Brains" Paul Ricca, and Emmett Skilton ("The Almighty Johnsons") as Sam Giancana, known as The Wild Card.

Hollywood has long tapped organized crime for stories, and some of the most memorable films in history have dealt with the workings of the American Mob. From "The Godfather" (1972) to "Scarface" (1983) to even TV's "The Sopranos," North American audiences seem to be fascinated with the Mob, which is good news for AMC. "The Making of the Mob" appears to have a solid following, with about a million live viewers per episode last season, and another 500,000 or so tuning in at their convenience. Things appear to be on track for Capone's turn in the spotlight, as the opener attracted close to 1.2 million viewers.

Cable has recently been pioneering this type of program: a hybrid of drama and real life, mixing history, dramatic reenactments and interviews with experts and other notables. Stephen David Entertainment, which produces "The Making of the Mob," is also known for the highly successful History Channel miniseries "The Men Who Built America." AMC recently wrapped "The American West," a similar series that took a look at the lives of famous native Americans, cowboys and lawmen, as well as notorious outlaws in the Wild West.

While it's next to impossible to know the whole truth in such situations, programs like these consult extensively with historians and experts. The Huffington Post has credited "The Making of the Mob: Chicago" with taking a more human look at Capone's rise. Based on his actions, there's little doubt the man was ruthless, but AMC's series presents a multi-faceted Capone as opposed to the one-dimensional killer he's often depicted as in other TV shows and films.

Learn how the legendary gangster and his cohorts set the stage for decades of organized crime rule in the Windy City and what became of them in a new episode of AMC's "The Making of the Mob: Chicago," airing Monday, Aug. 15.

Drive by eating

Andrew Zimmern puts his fate in the hands of the locals

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

Websites, travel books, travel agents: they all have their own opinions on where to eat whenever you're visiting an unfamiliar city. Andrew Zimmern, though, has an even better source that he uses to find the best culinary spots in town: the locals.

The chef who's best known for "Bizarre Foods," in which he's spent years traveling to every corner of the planet to try out some of the weirdest and most out-there foods available, is now turning his attention to checking out some of the hidden hunger-busting gems in cities all around the world.

"Andrew Zimmern's Driven by Food," premiering Tuesday, Aug. 16, on Travel Channel, follows the "Bizarre Foods" host as he travels to cities all around the world. As is often the case for travelers, the first local that he spends any time with is the taxi driver — who better to ask about the city's fare? Whether it's a rickshaw driver in

Andrew Zimmern hosts "Andrew Zimmern's Driven by Food"

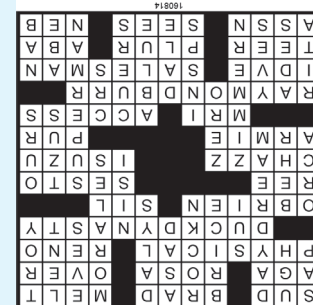

Hyderabad, India, or a cabbie in Nashville, Tennessee, Zimmern grills the drivers with one burning question: where are the best places to eat the local specialties that the tourists don't know about?

In the premiere, he lands in beautiful Rio de Janeiro. Of course, our host checks out all of the incredible sights the city has to offer: the famous Christ the Redeemer, the wild nightclub scene and, of course, the world-famous beaches and ocean views.

When it's time to eat, though, Zimmern gets away from "main street" and puts his fate in the hands of the city's cab drivers. He gets to try some of the best Brazilian barbecue, and later sinks his teeth into some of the best seafood he's ever had.

And that's just the premiere. He'll be visiting a different city in every episode, some close to home and others far-flung, including Berlin, Chicago, Bangkok and London. At every stop, he'll be putting his culinary fate in the hands of the cab drivers, always using his characteristically wry humor to make things entertaining for those of us following along at home. "Andrew Zimmern's Driven by Food" premieres Tuesday, Aug. 16, on Travel Channel.

Red (Sudeikis) is a bit of an out-cast. The bushy-eyebrowed bird has a temper problem, and after an outburst causes another bird's egg to hatch prematurely, he's ordered into anger management classes by the other birds that live on their peaceful, remote island. When a boat arrives full of pigs who claim to be peaceful explorers, Red is suspicious of their motives, but is quickly dismissed due to his rage issues. When the pigs, having befriended the birds, betray them and steal all of their eggs, Red must help the other birds channel their anger and rage in order to travel to the pigs' island and take their eggs back.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I need some information about the show "The Good Wife." In which season and episode do Peter and Kalinda have an affair? This is the event that sends Peter packing.

A: There's a bit of a trick to this one, because the affair never happens on the show. The tryst between Peter (played by former "Sex and the City" heart-throb Chris Noth) and Kalinda (Archie Panjabi, "Grease Monkeys") is indeed the reason that Alicia (the titular good wife, played by Julianna Margulies) kicks him out of the house in the second season, but she only finds out about it well after it happens.

You'd do better to think about it in terms of the season than the episode. The discovery of the affair drives most of the personal drama in the latter half of season 2 ("The Good Wife" is the sort of show where the drama is split between personal and professional, with the personal plot being the thread that ties the episodes together). The actual revelation happens in Episode 17 (titled "Ham Sandwich"), but its reverberations continue for the rest of the season.

The fact that her husband had an affair shouldn't seem so terrible to Alicia, since the whole premise of the show is that she's forced to return to work after her husband is jailed as the result of a sex-and-corruption scandal. The reason this particular affair is so damaging is that Alicia and Kalin-da had subsequently become friends.

The emotional turmoil Alicia went through is this show's bread and butter, and it got Margulies some favorable attention. "When this season is over, Julianna Margulies might as well just clear some shelf space for her new Emmy," said Vulture.com reviewer Jada Yuan. "To watch her stumble home in shock after finding out that Peter and Kalinda slept with each other and kept it from her is devastating enough, but then we watch her face as it hardens and hurt turns to anger and action, which is perhaps even more upsetting to see." Sure enough, Margulies did win the Emmy that year.

and empathize. This is important because empathy enables us to understand other people's feelings and helps us resolve conflicts and take care of others.

Acetaminophen is most often used to treat many conditions such as headache, muscle aches, arthritis, backache, toothaches, colds, and fevers. Next to your personal doctor, your pharmacist is the most informed about the various medications available and their contra indications. For all your prescription and health care needs, please call PERROTTA'S SUPER DRUG at 978-682-2557. Our pharmacy is located at 292 Prospect Street.

HINT: An estimated 52 million Americans take drugs containing acetaminophen each week. If further research confirms that acetaminophen reduces empathy, it may undermine the empathy needed for social cohesion.

Conan

Welcome, ladies and gentlemen, I'm Conan O'Brien. Or, as I'm known at Comic-Con: Doctor Who in the streets and Doctor Strange in the sheets.

This year's Comic-Con coincides with the important case to make: Who would be better at creating peace between Kim Kardashian and Taylor Swift?

Last night, Trump and Mike Pence actually sat down for a joint interview on "60 Minutes." And Pence said that if he had differences Republican National Convention. So you can spend a week surrounded by cartoonish people who live in a fantasy world, or attend Comic-Con.

Authorities in Saudi Arabia have banned Pokémon Go. Now, is it me, or is Saudi Arabia not as fun as it used to be?

The Tonight Show With Jimmy Fallon

The Republican National Convention started today, and we're now just a week away from the Democratic Convention. Both have an with Donald Trump, he would "walk into the president's office, close the door, and share my heart." Even the guys on "The Bachelorette" were like, "GROSS!"

The Late Show With Stephen Colbert

Last night, Trump and Pence gave their first joint interview on "60 Minutes" — the same amount of time Trump spent learning about Mike Pence before choosing him [as his running mate].

The moment Donald Trump secured the nomination [at the Republican Convention], got the number of delegates that sent him over the top, the celebration kicked off in style with a giant gold screen that declared "Over the Top" — which was either declaring victory or indicating the direction Trump combs his hair.

The Late Late Show With James Corden

Donald Trump has selected mega-star Scott Baio to speak at the convention. I will give you a minute to Google who that is. To tell you how irrelevant Scott Baio is, I had to have his name phonetically spelled in the teleprompter because it looks like "by-o."

Today Donald Trump officially won the Republican nomination, which makes the entrance he made last night at the convention even more spectacular. Donald said he wanted his entrance to be like his plans for the economy: foggy and mysterious.

Jimmy Kimmel Live

The only thing more confusing than this Pokémon phenomenon is the Republican National Convention, which is officially underway at the Quicken Loans Arena in Cleveland. They say there haven't been this many white people at the Quicken Loans Arena since the night they double-booked Jimmy Buffet and Kenny G.

Speakers [at the Republican National Convention] today included Willie Robertson of "Duck Dynasty," Antonio Sabato Jr., Scott Baio and Melania Trump. They were one Dennis Rodman short of being a new season of "Celebrity Apprentice."

Late Night With Seth Meyers

Former House Speaker and potential Republican VP pick Newt Gingrich praised Donald Trump in a new interview, and said he "gets things done." Can't argue with that. Trump Casino: done. Trump Steaks: done. Trump University: done.

A new survey shows that Donald Trump is polling at zero percent among black voters in Ohio and Pennsylvania. I dunno ... that seems a little high.

Bernie Sanders is scheduled speak on the first night of next week's Democratic National Convention. Leave it to Bernie to grab the early bird special.
