The art of 'Deception'

Magician solves crime in new ABC drama

By Kyla Brewer

ike a magician cooking up a potion, concocting a hit television show requires the perfect brew of drama, intrigue and mystery. Adding a dash of excitement, a charismatic star and just a hint of romance can create TV magic, and one promising new series seems to have it all.

Jack Cutmore-Scott ("Cooper Barrett's Guide to Surviving Life") stars as magician Cameron Black, who works for the FBI after his magic career is ruined by scandal, in "Deception," premiering Sunday, March 11, on ABC. While his 15 minutes of fame may be over, Black's skills are uniquely suited to help the government catch elusive criminals as he uses his knowledge of illusion to confound, influence and deceive oth-

The premise may seem farfetched, but creator and producer Chris Fedak ("Chuck") explained the logic behind it during a Q&A panel at 2017's New York Comic

"So many of the theories of magic also play into criminality," Fedak said. "If you're going to rob a bank, if you're going to steal things, you are using that same skill set to trick people and deceive people. Cameron brings his own perspective to many of the cases and the crimes that we're going to come across."

Fedak and his cohorts have recruited some top talent to make sure the tricks and illusions in "Deception" ring true. Famed illusionist and crossword expert David Kwong has signed on to co-produce and also serves as a consultant on the series with fellow magician Frances Menotti. Kwong, Menotti and other magic experts have worked extensively with Cutmore-Scott to show him the ropes so he'll look convincing. The magicians also design the complex illusions in the show, which, according to Fedak, are as true to life as possible.

"When we look at each one of our stories, we want to do as much magic that's real that we can," Fedak explained. "The other thing we want to do is [ensure] everything that happens inside the story — our illusions, our deceptions — are all things that can happen in the real world.'

Producers have also enlisted the help of an FBI consultant to keep the program as accurate as

While serving as the FBI's first "consulting illusionist," Black works alongside no-nonsense FBI agent Kay Daniels (IIfenesh Hadera, "Baywatch," 2017), who's initially skeptical of his techniques. The chemistry between these two delivers a healthy dose of humor, thanks to Black's sometimes naive antics and Daniels' straight-laced reactions. In contrast, her colleague, FBI Agent Mike Alvarez (Amaury Nolasco, "Prison Break), is a huge fan of magic and recognizes Black right away. Special Agent Deakins (Laila Robins, "Murder in the First") is eventually won over by the disgraced magician as he proves his worth to the FBI, thanks to a little help from his

Black's "magic" team includes makeup artist/producer Dina Clark (Lenora Crichlow, "Being Human") and Jordan Kwon (Justin Chon, "Twilight," 2008). Gunter Gustafsen (Vinnie Jones, "Escape Plan," 2013) is widely regarded as the world's greatest illusion builder. They may be new to law enforcement, but the ragtag crew and their fearless leader teach the FBI agents some new tricks. All the while, Black hopes to right the wrongs that have been done to him.

The ensemble cast supports a tried-and-true recipe for primetime success. "Deception" features a formula that's paid off for broadcast networks in the past several years: a charming male lead (Cutmore-Scott) is paired with a strong-yet-exasperated female lead (Hadera). ABC's "Castle" and CBS's "Elementary" are just two examples of other recent series that have enjoyed ratings success thanks to similar plots. But there's a show to which "Deception" bears even more resemblance — industry insiders have already been comparing ABC's new magic drama to CBS's highly successful drama "The Mentalist" (2008-2015), which chronicled the life of disgraced "psychic" Patrick Jane (Simon Baker, "The Guardian") as he solved crimes for the California Bureau of Investigation (CBI) alongside Agent Teresa Lisbon (Robin Tunney, "Prison Break"). Interestingly, "Deception" shares a behind-the-scenes link with "The Mentalist." Emmynominated composer Blake Neely, who composed music for "The Mentalist," is also the composer for "Deception." Not only that, but one of the show's executive producers, David Nutter, directed the pilot episode of "The Mentalist." Along with Fedak, Nutter's fellow executive producers include Greg Berlanti ("Blindspot"), Martin Gero ("Blindspot") and Sarah Schechter ("The Flash").

Like "The Mentalist's" subplot involving serial killer Red John, it appears "Deception" may feature an ongoing plot in addition to the weekly cases. At New York Comic Con's panel, Fedak dropped hints about a mystery woman and her reasons for doing what she does to Details about the nature of Black's transgressions are sketchy, so audiences will have to watch the new series to find out why Black has become a target. With illusions, humor, explosions and much more, the new drama seems to have something for everyone. Fans of such crime procedurals, magic and action won't want to miss the premiere of "Deception," airing Sunday, March 11, on ABC.

pring is in the air, and for those of us up in more northerly climes, it can't come soon enough after a cold, snow-filled winter. Even folks living in the warmer South have something to get excited about, though: Food Network's hit seasonal competition is back for another year. "Spring Baking Championship" returns for a fourth season on Monday, March 12, with a new host, its familiar judges and a whole new batch of bakers looking to hit pay dirt.

'Cheap Eats" host Ali Khan takes over as host this season, bringing his easy-going charisma to a position that's previously been occupied by former NFL player Jesse Palmer and "Junk Food Flip" host Bobby Dean. Luckily, he shouldn't have too much difficulty learning on the job, with all three judges from "Spring Baking Championship's" previous three seasons back for another decadent competition.

Duff Goldman ("Ace of Cakes"), Nancy Fuller ("Farmhouse Rules") and Lorraine Pascale ("Worst Bakers in America") are all in the kitchen and waiting for the parade of sweet treats that's headed their way. In Monday's premiere, 10 fresh contestants — who happen to be some of the best bakers in the country — face off in their first challenges, and this week it's all about the colors of the season.

In the pre-heat challenge, Khan challenges the bakers to celebrate the season by making fruit-forward tie-dve mini cheesecakes, with the winner receiving an advantage in the main-heat challenge. For that test, the theme gets even more intense, with the bakers tasked with making color-gradient naked ombre cakes featuring delightful, fresh herbs.

Each week, the weakest-performing baker is sent home, but with a $50,000 prize on the line, the remaining contestants need to stay focused. This season, they'll be baking with flower es-

The various seasonal baking championships have quickly become a tradition on Food Network, with holiday and Halloween versions also drawing in big numbers of viewers during their respective seasons. Big bakes are big with audiences, and "Spring Baking Championship" is no exception. The new season premieres Monday, March 12.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison

TV Media

Q: We enjoyed following the series "Killing Fields." The first year came to an end and we didn't see if the case was solved. Now they have two different detectives and different cases. Can you please direct us as to any results? A: Unfortunately no. When "Killing Fields" left Louisiana at the end of its second season, it left without a resolution to the 20-year-old Eugenie Boisfontaine case it was following. A year on, there's been no new movement in the hunt for her murderer.

None that we know of, at least

If that show taught us anything, it's that police do a lot more work than the public generally knows about, and that, contrary to what fictional cop shows would lead you to believe, cases don't get solved in an hour.

"This is not a sprint, it's a marathon," said Maj. Ronnie Herbert, one of the investigators featured on the series, in an interview with Baton Rouge's The Advocate newspaper. "We'll go until we can't go anymore."

Now that they're out of the limelight, the investigators are still working on the case, and they have good reason to be a little more circumspect about it. They were sued by Boisfontaine's ex-husband for the way they went about collecting his DNA, and part of the suit involved the fact that it was done on television. The investigation may benefit from not playing out on TV for a while.

Discovery's innovative truecrime series spent its first two seasons in Iberville Parish, La., investigating the Boisfontaine case and then another murder. The second murder, of Curtis Smith, resulted in an arrest at the end of the second season. In the third season, as you say, the show moved locations, to Virginia.

One of the show's innovations is to not focus on cities or people but on a specific type of location — "isolated places that appear untouched ... desolate and sprawling areas — known as killing fields."
