The architect

An unrecognizable Russell Crowe is 'The Loudest Voice'

By Francis Babin
TV Media

Every now and then, a subject becomes a hot topic in Hollywood. For some reason, multiple people sometimes have the same idea around the same time, resulting in television series and films with very similar plots being released close together. There are countless examples of these twin projects (see 1998's "Deep Impact" and "Armageddon") with many more on the way in the near future.

The final years of former chairman and CEO of Fox News Roger Ailes is the subject of dueling 2019 productions. Jay Roach's ("All the Way," 2016) upcoming film "Fair and Balanced" and Showtime's series "The Loudest Voice" dig deep into the life of the highly influential and controversial figure. On Sunday, June 30, witness the rise and fall of one of the most powerful men in America with the premiere of "The Loudest Voice."

For decades, big-screen A-listers did not cross over to the small screen, and television stars rarely made the leap to features. A movie star working television gigs was often a sign of the end of a bankable career, but things have changed a lot now that we've entered the era of "peak TV." Nowadays, it's a common sight to see major film stars on HBO, Netflix or even basic cable. With that said, it's still newsworthy when Academy Award winners make the transition.

"The Loudest Voice" is headlined by an almost unrecognizable Russell Crowe ("Gladiator," 2000) as Roger Ailes, with Sienna Miller ("The Lost City of Z," 2016) as Beth Ailes, ex-wife of the media giant, and Naomi Watts ("Gypsy") as Gretchen Carlson, a former Fox News anchor. Rounding out the cast are Seth MacFarlane ("The Orville"), Annabelle Wallis ("Peaky Blinders"), Simon Burney ("Rev."), Josh Charles ("The Good Wife") and Aleksa Palladino ("Boardwalk Empire").

Based on the 2014 bestselling book "The Loudest Voice in the Room: How the Brilliant, Bombastic Roger Ailes Built Fox News — and Divided a Country" by Gabriel Sherman, the seven-episode miniseries focuses on the last decade of Ailes' life, but it includes flashbacks to his earlier days as a television executive and media consultant. To understand the current political climate in the United States, we must understand the man who helped shaped our present reality. The Showtime bio outlines the genesis of Fox News — a fateful encounter with Richard Nixon on the set of "The Mike Douglas Show" — as well as the allegations of sexual misconduct and settlements that brought down Ailes.

In 2016, multiple women came forward claiming Ailes had sexually harassed them after former "Fox & Friends" co-host and host of "The Real Story" Gretchen Carlson filed suit against her old boss. In the wake of these allegations, many sordid details about Fox News's toxic corporate culture were released to a largely unsurprised public. Under Ailes' tyrannical leadership, Fox News became a television powerhouse, but for many employees, working there was a nightmare.

The miniseries hails from Blumhouse productions, which is responsible for the wildly popular horror films "Get Out," (2017), "Insidious" (2010) and its sequels, the "Paranormal Activity" franchise (2007 to 2015) and many more hits. Recently, the company has started to branch out with non-horror television projects like last year's lauded "Sharp Objects." With that said, the company's creations still have a tinge of horror to them, just not in what might be considered the traditional way. Co-president of Blumhouse Television Marci Wiseman stated at the ATX Television Festival in Austin earlier this year, "It's not just horror, but what's horrifying."

"The Loudest Voice" takes viewers behind the scenes into a world where winning is everything, and where horrifying acts go unpunished. The spotlight shines brightest on those in power who acted with impunity and those who helped cover up everything.

The scenes between our two leads are uncomfortable and claustrophobic, but thankfully the filming of them was anything but. "The Loudest Voice" marks a reunion between Crowe and Watts, who worked together all the way back in the early 1990s in the Australian miniseries "Brides of Christ." Crowe told Entertainment Weekly that he had a fabulous time working with his fellow Aussie and longtime friend: "The last time I was on a show with Naomi, it was way back. We didn't really do that much work together on the show, but we've known each other for a long time."

Next year marks a major milestone in the history of television. On June 1, 1980, the Cable News Network (CNN) launched and forever changed the way in which we interact with the news. In its wake, many 24-hour news networks were launched, each trying to replicate the success of the Atlanta-based network.

Fox News took to the airwaves in 1996, and the media landscape has never been the same. Since then, the reigning king of cable news has transformed itself into one of the most powerful entities in the world. Regardless of your views of the network, its cultural dominance is undeniable, and this transformation would never have been possible without Roger Ailes' leadership.

On Sunday, June 30, witness the birth of Fox News, the ugly accusations that brought down Ailes and everything in between in the premiere of "The Loudest Voice," on Showtime.

Real talk

By Kyla Brewer
TV Media

Fanatical fandom: TV fans are an insatiable bunch. Even after the credits roll, they hunger for more information about their favorite shows. Luckily, "aftershows" have popped up to satisfy that hunger, and a new comedy is poking fun at the trend.

Fred Savage ("The Wonder Years") and his co-host Taylor Tomlison ("Last Comic Standing") discuss the events of a fictional post-apocalyptic sci-fi TV show in "What Just Happened??! With Fred Savage," premiering Sunday, June 30, on Fox. To be clear, the new Fox series a spoof of aftershows such as AMC's "Talking Dead," a companion series to its hit "The Walking Dead." In such programs, special guests discuss the latest plot twists and give sneak peeks at what lies ahead.

Savage and Tomlison welcome celebrities to "What Just Happened??!" to talk about the nonexistent drama "The Flare," based on the nonexistent book by fictional author TJ Whitford, "The Moon Is the Sun at Night," which Savage claims has been a favorite of his for many years. The story focuses on the impact of a solar event on a small blue-collar town in Illinois.

To keep up the ruse that "The Flare" is a hit TV show, producers have assembled a cast within a cast, who may appear in clips of the fake show, on set visits and potentially in "What Just Happened??!" The cast of "The Flare" includes Duane Henry ("Captain Marvel," 2019), Tyler Ritter ("Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D."), Amy Acker ("Person of Interest"), Sola Bamis ("Mad Men") and Sprague Grayden ("Paranormal Activity 2," 2010). Jon Cassar ("24: Redemption") serves as the director.

Like real aftershows, "What Just Happened??!" features interviews with actual celebrities, visits to the "set" of the fictional show, discussions with "fans" and more. In a coup any real talk show would celebrate, Fox's fake aftershow has lined up Rob Lowe ("The West Wing") as its first celebrity guest marking a reunion for Savage and Lowe, who co-starred in the shortlived Fox comedy "The Grinder." Promos of "What Just Happened??!" also feature comedian Ken Jeong ("Community") as a future guest.

A star-spangled salute: As the summer officially kicks off and Americans prepare to celebrate the country's 243rd birthday, PBS brings the nation together in song.

Hundreds of thousands of people gather around the U.S. Capitol in Washington, D.C., to celebrate Independence Day as the National Symphony Orchestra performs with special guest stars in "A Capitol Fourth," airing Thursday, July 4, on PBS, NPR and the American Forces Network. The annual live broadcast allows millions of Americans across the country and abroad to experience the excitement in the nation's capital.

A long-standing tradition, the free concert has taken place on the west lawn of the Capitol since 1979, and was first broadcast on PBS in 1981.

New championship series begins this week

Kardea Brown hosts "Cupcake Championship

By Michelle Rose
TV Media

After last week's "Wedding Cake Championship" finale, Food Network has decided to leave its timeslot on a "bake" setting for a few more weeks.

Premiering Monday, July 1, "Cupcake Championship" is the newest fast-paced food battle that challenges competitors to think big but bake small.

How big? I'm talking 3D big: cupcakes that form edible snow globes; great mystical beings and oversized pet designs; even a whole planet made of little else than frosting and palm-sized cakes.

These over-the-top displays are some of the challenges we'll see in the coming weeks. Everything needs to look perfect; there are no wayward thumbprints here. Each masterpiece also needs to be pro-level delicious to impress the judges, who will be doing all the sampling. And while the competitors are some of the best in the business, it has to be tough to work with building material that needs to be moist and light-as-air fluffy.

"Cupcake Championship" follows the tried-and-tested format of featuring four competitors, three judges and two rounds per episode, plus a $10,000 prize that is awarded each week.

Each episode begins with the Designer Challenge in which contestants must highlight a specific event or theme (spoiler alert: this week's challenge features a botanical theme). After a first-round elimination, the remaining artists move to the Imagination Challenge, and are tasked with creating a flavorful 3D display based on a specific theme (another spoiler alert: the botanical theme extends to this round, too).

Host Kardea Brown is no stranger to these kinds of competitions, having previously hosted contests such as "Family Food Showdown" and "Chopped Junior." As for the judges, you'll probably recognize former "Brady Bunch" star Maureen McCormick. Different guest judges will be joining McCormick each week, including Nacho Aguirre and Lerome Campbell (both contestants on previous Food Network competitions), Amirah Kassem, Stella Parks, Joshua John Russell and Gesine Prado.

It all amounts to some creative and competitive cupcake fun this month. But with just five episodes, this summertime series has a shorter run. So be sure to tune in to Food Network on Monday, July 1, to catch the very first "Cupcake Championship."

When police and an ambitious district attorney get involved, Jackson must turn to his friends and library staff for help.

Hollywood Q&A

By Adam Thomlison
TV Media

Q: I recently watched the first Austin Powers movie on Netflix for the first time in years. Throughout those years I kept a steady watch of "Seinfeld" reruns. While watching the Austin Powers movie, I noticed several actors who played small roles on "Seinfeld" (the Soup Nazi, the Wig Master, and one or two others). Is there any connection between the two?

A: There seems to be no direct link between "Austin Powers: International Man of Mystery" (1997) and "Seinfeld," other than a shared need for a huge number of funny people for small roles, and the budget to get good ones. That and the North American comedy community, which is sometimes smaller than you think.

By all reports, star Mike Myers was directly involved in many of the casting decisions for "Austin Powers," the smash-hit film that he starred in, wrote and co-produced.

For example, Larry Thomas, who played the Soup Nazi in a 1995 episode of "Seinfeld," said that Myers approached him directly for the role of a casino dealer in "Austin Powers," after having seen his "Seinfeld" bit.

Brian George, who played Babu in "Seinfeld" and the Secretary General of the United Nations in "Austin Powers," has shared no such story of being approached by Myers, but they share a different, geographic link: Both of them came up in the Toronto comedy scene, specifically in the famed Second City comedy troupe there.

It was a different comedy troupe that brought Myers together with Patrick Bristow, who played the Wig Master in "Seinfeld." Myers did a guest appearance in a show put on by the Groundlings troupe in Los Angeles, which Bristow was a part of at the time. Myers soon called Bristow to do a part in another of his movies, "So I Married an Axe Murderer" (1993), and then called again for "Austin Powers."

"People didn't know what to do with Stephanie Mangano," she told the Los Angeles Times in a 1990 interview.

The president said Prince Charles is "really into" climate change. As if they were talking about a band at Coachella or something.
