The Butterfly Project teaches girls to soar

by MARQUITA GRIFFIN | mgriffin@fbherald.com

When Latorsha Perry was around 16 years old, she and a group of her friends decided to check out a new program called The Butterfly Project. A mentoring program specifically for Lamar Consolidated ISD high school girls, the Butterfly Project was started, and continues to grow, solely to provide positive influence and guidance for girls from all walks of life.

Race doesn't matter. Socioeconomic background doesn't matter. Grades don't matter. Looks don't matter. The only thing that does, is a girl's desire to set goals and soar to them.

Women of Purpose

The program made its debut in 1996, created by a group of concerned parents in the Lamar Consolidated ISD who wanted to focus on the wellbeing and empowerment of girls from 14 to 18 years old.

Perry, who was a B.F.Terry High School student at the time, joined the organization with her friends and it was a decision Perry said she will forever be grateful for.

"I was just exciting to get to know these women who were willing to invest their time into us," said Perry, who is now 37 years old and a mother of three. "Without the Butterfly Project in my life, I would not be where I am today."

For the past five years Perry has been a CPS investigator and mentors and trains incoming CPS workers. In 2016 Perry earned the Lasting Impression Award from the Fort Bend Rainbow Room, and the following year became the opening face of the Proud to Protect video for the Texas Department of Family and Protective Services.

"I felt so fulfilled when they selected me to be [included in the video]," said Perry.

She pauses for a moment, thinking over her next words:

"Without the Butterfly Project, I wouldn't be where I am today," she said. "No matter how we started out, we developed into something beautiful. They helped us become women of purpose. They showed us we could soar into the sky."

Overcoming Adversities

The reality of Perry's life is a distinct contrast from the overwhelming prediction that surrounded her when she was a girl.

She grew up without knowing her father and her mother passed away when she was 9 years old. Perry lived with relatives, some of whom never graduated high school. Her uncle, who is a pastor, and her aunt raised her but did not have the means to devote time and money to options that would follow graduating high school, Perry said.

"College was never a topic in my family," she explained. "My uncle and aunt gave me a strong spiritual upbringing, which I am grateful for, but they didn't know much about college because no one had ever gone to college."

Perry turned out to be the first person in her family to do so.

She studied for two years at Stephen F. Austin University, but left after an experience with domestic violence. Following her departure, Perry then enrolled in a nursing program at Prairie View A&M University and while she enjoyed the work, a significant part of her past reared its head.

"During clinical rotations we saw the best and the worst [of the medical industry],” she said. “When I had to work with patients who were dying, especially the kids, and there was nothing we could do for them, I realized that from an emotional standpoint I could not do this job because I never really dealt with my mother’s death.”

Perry ended up leaving the program but she refused to stop searching for her perfect fit in society.

“I just had this need to help people,” she said.

Perry’s next step was getting accepted into the police academy, but one day while she was jogging a driver hit her. “I thought I was going to die,” she said. “Because of my injuries my dream of becoming a police officer was gone.”

These seemingly rapid-fire setbacks could have easily derailed her, had it not been for the Butterfly Project, Perry said.

“They completely changed me,” Perry said of the program’s mentors, namely Rita Miller, the project director, and Melinda Morgan, the project advisor.

Through the program, Perry said she learned how to handle adversity and adapt to whatever changes life brought her. So when she could no longer pursue the police officer route, Perry considered other options where she should demonstrate her skills.

“When I was 15 years old I wanted to be a social worker,” Perry said, adding that she did graduate from the University of Houston with degrees in psychology and criminal justice.

“And now I’m a caseworker stopping the cycle of abuse,” she said. “My dream was to be able to help people and that is what I do.”

That drive to serve others, Perry considered, probably stemmed from her experience with the “warm, positive women” of the Butterfly Project.

“A lot of my friends who were in the program came from homes where one or both of their parents had gone to college and were successful,” Perry continued, explaining that her childhood was quite different.

“Sometimes we barely had running water. I was responsible for myself at a young age and had to work when I was in school. But in the Butterfly Project I was treated no different from the girls who were better off. We were all treated with kindness, love and respect.”

And that is what Perry said she pours into her efforts as a CPS worker. Although her services are lent out to other counties, like Montgomery, Brazoria, Matagorda and Washington counties, she primarily works in Fort Bend. She currently lives in Sealy, Texas but she drives “to Fort Bend County every day to make sure the county I grew up in, and that has done so much for me, can benefit from my work.”

‘Mentoring Works’

Rita Miller happened to run into Perry one day, and to hear how much a former student supported and respected the program nearly took her breath away.

“Listening to her proved that mentoring works,” said Miller.

The program is in its 23rd year and averages about 20 girls each year who participate in group bonding activities, community volunteering and meetings that teach the girls how to build, and act on, self-confidence.

“Girls come to the program not knowing what they want, just the impulsion for something new. While in the caterpillar stage, inside the cocoon, they are changing,” Miller explained, likening the girls to butterflies. “By the time they complete the program, behaviors that served them when they were caterpillars are no longer helpful. Their transformation is complete [and] the butterfly emerges into a new world.

They graduate high school, some go on to graduate from college, get master’s degrees, while others go directly into the work force. They get married and start families ...”

“They go on to become productive members of society.”

However, Miller also admits that despite the program’s efforts in “making a difference in the lives of young women,” not every girl who participates in the program completes it.

“There have been girls who have come to the program and did not stay after deciding that it was not for them,” she said.

But of those who did stay in and commit themselves to the program’s guidance, they went on to become teachers, nurses, certified public accountants and HIV health planners.

Others have become high school head trainers, school cheerleader coaches, bank tellers, nutritionists, court clerks, postmasters, EMTs, bodybuilders, child care providers, military personnel and store managers.

“Among them are also four former butterfly members who have returned to the program to serve as mentors,” Miller said. “And we now have girls in our program who are the children of former Butterfly members — we are working with the second generation of girls.

“Mentoring develops lifelong relationships,” Miller said with a smile. “Twenty-three years later, they still call us when they have questions, encounter problems or need help.

“Like I said: mentoring works.”

Aiming High

At the start of the new year, the program celebrated Mentoring Month with its annual Empowering Conference focused on fifth and sixth grade girls who would be entering new campuses the following year. This year’s conference was themed “Aim High – Superheroes.”

“With new schools come new issues: bullying, peer pressure and, especially with girls, cliques. The superhero theme, developed by mentor Kristin Miller, was designed to give them tools to help them make smooth transitions,” Miller said.

During the conference 16 girls participated in four sessions, the first being “Know Your Super Power,” led by Colette Edwards, with MD Anderson Cancer Center. This session focused on having the girls discover “their superpower strengths, resiliency factors and learned how to be ‘your very best self’ through self-improvement and empowerment,” Miller said.

The remaining three sessions covered: community service, led by Alicia McKnight with Fort Bend CPS, which included having the girls decorate lunch bags for Lunches of Love; setting high targets, led by Sha’Terra Johnson HIV Health Planner with The HIV Resource Group, which involved the girls in making vision boards about what they wanted to achieve in their lives; and learning to be their own superhero, led by Liz Rodriguez Probation Officer with Fort Bend County Juvenile.

During this session of the conference, the girls were educated on the dangers of kidnapping and sex and human trafficking, and were encouraged to make informed and safe choices while online.

The day also featured Judge Toni Wallace as a speaker. “Asking Judge Wallace was a no-brainer,” Miller said. “Having recently been elected and sworn in as the first African-American female judge in Fort Bend County, I was positive that she knew a lot about aiming high, and I just knew she had a story to tell that the girls needed to hear.

“I wanted them to see and hear from a real life superhero,” Miller continued. “She told them about her experience of becoming what she wanted to be — a lawyer — instead of what others thought she should become.”

REINING STRENGTH THERAPEUTIC HORSEMANSHIP

by MARQUITA GRIFFIN | mgriffin@fbherald.com

Mandy Pike may have had some experiences with horses in her past, but her current comfort with Reining Strength Therapeutic Horsemanship has more to do with the atmosphere of the organization than her time in the horse world when she was a teenager.

“I’ve been away from the horse world for 25 years,” Pike said with a laugh. “So there was a lot I had forgotten, but this place is a most welcoming organization that teaches you what you need to know. Every single day I learn something new.”

For the past year Pike has volunteered, two to three times a week, with Reining Strength, a nonprofit in Richmond that provides programs for adults and children with physical, cognitive, social and emotional disabilities.

Through equine-assisted activities and therapies Reining Strength helps its clients reach milestones, overcome obstacles, and find a means to heal.

When she was first introduced to the organization through the Fort Bend Junior Service League, Pike didn’t know one thing about it.

“But I was immediately taken by its purpose and mission,” said Pike, who fondly recalled assisting a young girl with her first lesson at Reining Strength.

“She was so afraid,” Pike said. “She didn’t even want to touch the horse.”

During that first lesson, Pike just introduced the girl to the horse. There was no riding, no pushing, just a sweet conversation that allowed the girl to see how gentle the horse was. Two months later Pike happened to be scheduled to work with the girl again.

“And she was sitting so tall and confident on that horse,” Pike said, emotion creeping into her voice. “That just got me. To see how her level of confidence grew to see how she changed, changed me.”

As a volunteer Pike handles several tasks — “anything that is asked of me,” she said with a laugh — from assisting with lessons as a sidewalker or leading the horse, but she is also enthusiastic about handling paperwork or cleaning.

“I respect the integrity [Reining Strength] gives to its clients,” she said. “And I’m happy to do whatever they need me to do. I would tell anyone who wants to volunteer that their heart will be filled with joy because there is nothing but joy in this place.”

A POSITIVE EXPERIENCE FOR EVERYONE

Reining Strength employs a small full-time and part-time staff and is supported by nearly 60 active volunteers.

All of the instructors at Reining Strength who provide the adaptive riding lessons are PATH — Professional Association of Therapeutic Horsemanship International— certified riding instructors as well as Equine Specialists in Mental Health. The nonprofit’s equine staff consists of various breeds, and each one has completed three to four months of training.

The volunteers, who are considered the backbone to the organization, are also trained to work with the horses and the clients, said Reining Strength co-founder and Executive Director Heather Hernandez-Sedillo.

“We have retired individuals, stay-at-home moms who help out while their children are in school, high school and college students looking for experience in helping professionals and [earning] service hours,” she said, explaining the volunteers come from variety of backgrounds.

To assist in lessons a volunteer must be at least 14 years old and complete volunteer orientation.

Reining Strength also draws working people as volunteers “who like to come after work or on Saturday mornings.”

“They sidewalk alongside the clients during their lessons and assist them with balance and support what the instructor is teaching,” she said. “We also have volunteers lead horses during lessons and assist in class set up and break down.”

Then there are the volunteers who help with the upkeep of the barn — cleaning tack, filling waters and sweeping.

“There is always something to do around here,” Hernandez-Sedillo said with a smile.

“Individuals do not need to have any horse experience, we will teach them what they need to know,” she stressed.

Volunteer Fran Zwick agrees.

“I find that a lot of the volunteers have never worked with horses,” said Zwick, who was one of the first volunteers when Reining Strength opened in 2014. “But the staff and the other volunteers here are always so willing to help you learn. Everyone is always sharing knowledge on how to advance and you will never be asked to do something you're not comfortable with.

"They want everyone — the individuals, the staff, the volunteers, everyone — to have a positive experience."

Volunteers are respected and revered at Reining Strength because it takes as many hands as possible for clients to reach goals. Hernandez-Sedillo stressed if the nonprofit had to hire leaders and sidewalkers for each class, "there is no way we could do what we do." Some classes, she notes, requires a dozen people to complete the lesson.

"That's an incredible amount of help the volunteers provide," Hernandez-Sedillo said.

"Our volunteers play such a vital role in the day-to-day operations of our programs," said continued. "They enable us to serve more individuals [and] without them we could not operate."

Reining Strength is hosting four upcoming volunteer training sessions: April 9 at 4:30 p.m.; April 26 at 10 a.m.; May 15 at 4:30 p.m. and May 28 at 9:30 a.m.

Zwick, who retired from the oil industry, said she had volunteered with other charities while working in the industry and when she was retiring an opportunity arose for her at Reining Strength. The nonprofit was much smaller back then, she recalled. There were two riders and two horses.

"But that's not the case anymore," she said with a laugh.

As a volunteer Zwick is a leader and a side walker, grooms the horses and will help with special events, including the upcoming Derby Day Party set for May 4.

"I helped with the very first one," she said of the nonprofit's only fundraiser. "It started out small, 40 or 50 people were there. Now it's up to 400."

It's a clear indication about how well-known and respected Reining Strength is in the community, Zwick said.

"There is just pure joy here," she continued. "The volunteers give their heart and soul to help these individuals. It's like [Reining Strength] gives people wings they didn't have before."

BEING VALUED AND CELEBRATED

Just like its volunteers, Reining Strength continues to strive to make the community and the clients it serves proud, Hernandez-Sedillo said.

For the third year Reining Strength participated in the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo Top Hands Horse Show, which offers physically-challenged riders of all ages the opportunity to compete in six events.

Although the event does not name an overall winner, Reining Strength did win a saddle for its program.

"Which we're so excited to have because it is a size we have really been needing," Hernandez-Sedillo said.

"Our riders did so well, many [first place] belt buckles were brought home as well as trophies, but even more importantly, Top Hands allowed each of them to achieve something," Hernandez-Sedillo said. "They set goals, they competed, their skills were improved which in turn was translated into improved skills of daily living."

Hernandez-Sedillo went on to say that competing in an event like this goes far beyond awards. It's confirmation that every single rider is "valued and celebrated by our community."

"They get to compete just like everyone else, and just like everyone they had to earn what was received. They did not get first place ribbon just for showing up," she said. "Our hats are off to the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo Special Children's Committee's many volunteers who worked tirelessly to make this show so amazing.

"They really rolled the red carpet out for all the riders who participated, and we are truly grateful," she said the pride and respect clear in her words.

Reining Strength is equally excited about the Fort Bend County Fair Old 300 Horse Show, which like Top Hands, is a show for equestrians with disabilities.

Last year was the inaugural year for the show and Hernandez-Sedillo said she, and Co-Chair Noell Myska “are thrilled that the Fort Bend County Fair readily opened their arms to welcome us to do it again.”

The show is run by a committee of volunteers called The Old Three Hundred Committee. Held in the Tucker Arena, Reining Strength offers classes in Western & English Equitation and Trail.

“Noell and I were full of gratitude for all our friends and community members who stepped up to be on the committee and sponsor the show,” Hernandez-Sedillo said.

“These events allow our clients to be included in major events in their community. Both the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo and the Fort Bend County Fair are large events [and] our clients are able to see that the community supports, welcomes, and accepts them as they are,” she continued. “By working hard to compete in a horse show, our clients reach milestones without even realizing they are doing the work because it is fun.”

Examples of such progress include: increased core strength so that individuals walk unassisted for greater distances, improved communication, better posture, improved fine and gross motor skills. Plus, having to memorize a trail pattern helps with sequencing and memory.

“The community has the chance to learn more about people with disabilities, see their strengths and support them as fellow citizens,” she added. “It is a win-win for all.”

SUPPORT IS PARAMOUNT

Reining Strength is truly a community organization, said Hernandez-Sedillo. And it encourages people, those in search for such services as well as those looking to support the organization to “call and schedule a 15 minute tour.”

“Come see us and witness first-hand the impact of our programs.”

Goals vary from client to client at Reining Strength. There is no one-size-fits-all approach to the adults and children who are in need of equine assisted activities.

Some parents are looking to have their child’s muscles strengthened, others want to provide their child with a form of therapy that is not only physically beneficial but also provides them with a sense of community.

People, from those suffering from PTSD or depression to those diagnosed with Down syndrome and traumatic brain injuries, come looking to find a peace from emotional turmoil and a means to readjust to society.

To accomplish these important goals, Hernandez-Sedillo said the organization needs support.

Already, Reining Strength is a core placement for the Fort Bend Junior Service League, with its members volunteering time regularly. The nonprofit also received a grant from Fort Bend Cares, and was a beneficiary of a FBJS Sugar Plum Market funded grant.

“This grant funded the purchase of two new horse stalls, a new saddle and other equipment,” she said, her gratefulness clear in her words. “Additionally, the FBJS grant covered some client assistance funds for riders in need.

“We need their support in many ways,” said Hernandez-Sedillo. “Whether it be sharing their time and talent as volunteer, or coming out Derby Day and being a financial support, or being a spokesperson and telling others we are here.”

Details On The 5TH ANNUAL DERBY DAY PARTY

Once again Reining Strength is seeking volunteers, sponsors and guests at its annual Derby Day Party.

The 5th Annual Derby Day Party will be held from 3:30 - 7:30 p.m., May 4 in the Infinity Room at Safari Texas Ranch, 11627 FM 1464 in Richmond.

Individual tickets are $125 and sponsorships are available.

“All the excitement of the Kentucky Derby will be right here in Fort Bend County,” said Hernandez-Sedillo.

The Kentucky Derby race will be live-streamed during the event and with a guest’s entry, he or she will be able to get a horse to root for and if the horse wins, the guest will win a prize.

The evening will also feature a Lady’s Hat Contest, a Gentleman’s Boots-n-Bowties Contest, a live and silent auction and a wine pull. During the post parade guests will sing “My Old Kentucky Home” with a mint julep toast, just like what is done in Churchill Downs in Kentucky where the race is held.

“This event is Reining Strength’s only annual fundraiser to help fund therapeutic horsemanship programs for children and adults with physical, cognitive, social, and emotional needs – including veterans,” Hernandez-Sedillo said, adding that last year’s event raised $184,000.

“Those funds covered the costs of therapeutic horsemanship for our clients, including: caring for and managing our equine staff, all the components of a lesson such as equipment, volunteer training and management, instruction, and the cost of maintaining our facility.

“100 percent of our clients are on some form of rider assistance to make these services affordable to everyone – meaning they only pay 30 percent or less of the actual cost of a session.”

For more information about Reining Strength Therapeutic Horsemanship is located AT 7126 FM 359 in Richmond. Contact the organization at 832-451-6874, www.reiningstrength.org or on Facebook at @reiningstrength.

Support an amazing little girl named Annabelle

by MARQUITA GRIFFIN | mgriffin@fbherald.com

The van Deursen family in Fulshear is seeking community support during a fundraiser for their daughter Annabelle van Deursen who was diagnosed in 2017 with a GNAO1 mutation, a rare mutation of the Protein Coding gene with about only 70 reported cases in children worldwide.

Individuals diagnosed with mutations on the GNAO1 gene suffer from seizures, mild to severe movement disorders, and developmental delay. About 100 people worldwide have been identified as having a mutation on the GNAO1 gene.

“There is currently no cure for this GNAO1 mutation, but our goal is to change that through fundraising to give money to research to try to cure her,” said Annabelle’s mother Shelley, who added that her family is working closely with The Bow Foundation, which is dedicated to supporting GNAO1 families through enhanced research and increased awareness.

The organization is also raises funds to support research to benefit those with GNAO1 disabilities and other similar rare diseases and neurological conditions.

The van Deursen family is hosting Annabelle’s Benefit — a 5K Run/1Mile Walk, raffle, and family fun morning to raise money for research for children affected by a GNAO1 mutation on April 13 at 7:30 a.m. at No Label Brewery, 5351 1st Street in Katy, Texas.

The benefit goal is to raise $20,000, which will be donated to The Bow Foundation.

“By giving to Annabelle’s Amazing Graces, you’ll be able to help us host a successful benefit for people in the community and ultimately raise awareness about the GNAO1 mutation, and help us to raise money for research to cure this mutation which has affected our daughter and other children in the world,” Shelley said.

Donations can be made through the Annabelle’s Amazing Graces foundation by emailing shelley@annabellesamazinggraces.org or call at 281-814-7984.

Sponsorship opportunities are also available for the event. More information about Annabelle’s Amazing Graces, Annabelle and the upcoming benefit visit annabellesamazinggraces.org

7TH ANNUAL "STRIKE OUT" AUTISM FAMILY FUN DAY IS THE 'GRAND SLAM' EVENT OF THE YEAR

The excitement is brewing as the planning and preparation begins for Hope For Three's Seventh Annual "Strike Out" Autism Family Fun Day. The event is slated for Sugar Land Skeeters opening weekend, April 28 at Constellation Field.

The sports anthem song "All I Do is Win" is on the playlist of the 2019 "Strike Out" Autism Team, which plans on winning not just on the field, but off the field, too. On opening weekend, there will be more than a battle on the diamond between the Sugar Land Skeeters and Southern Maryland Blue Crabs. One that day "Strike Out" Autism Family Fun Day will allow more than 7,000 fans to witness an experience for families living with autism.

During Strike Out, around 400 family members living with autism are treated to mid-afternoon fun and partake in one of America's greatest past times — baseball. It is also an opportunity to educate thousands of spectators about autism spectrum disorders and its affect.

"I have served as a volunteer and staff member for "Strike Out" Autism Family Fun Day, and to see the impact it has on the families we serve, never gets old, said Samantha Katchy, Hope For Three Family Assistance Coordinator. "I get so excited to see the joy on the faces of the children and families, I cry happy tears every year."

Returning as Skipper of the event is presenting sponsor Fred and Mabel R. Parks Foundation. Joining the Parks Foundation, are hundreds of volunteers, sponsors and underwriters, including the 18 Fort Bend County mayors, who, together with County Judge KP George will proclaim April Autism Awareness Month.

Autism families are treated to various pre-game festivities, food, fun and fellowship. There will also be a live and silent auction for all in attendance, including a custom designed autism Skeeters' jersey worn by players event day. Fans will have a chance to win their favorite players jersey.

Game Day Tickets are $12 each with half of the ticket price donated to Hope For Three. Fans must notate "H43" when purchasing tickets on Skeeters' web site. Ticket sales and registration to volunteer, become a sponsor or attend as a guest family for "Strike Out" Autism Family Fun Day is now open, visit hopeforthree.org/events/strike-out-autism-2019. More than 300 volunteers are needed event day. Family registration is on a first come-first serve basis. Additional information on Hope For Three can be found at hopeforthree.org or call 281-245-0640.

Signing up to ensure it is a "winning" afternoon for local autism families are several members of the "Strike Out" Autism Family Fun Day Committee. LIGHT OF HOPE TO KICK OFF PINWHEEL PROJECT

Child Advocates of Fort Bend, Exchange Club of Sugar Land and the Fort Bend County Sheriff's Office are collaborating to bring awareness about Child Abuse Awareness Month.

Hosted by the Fort Bend County Sheriff's Office, The Pinwheel Project will be held at Homestead Park at 1422 Eugene Heimann Circle in Richmond - directly across from the Justice Center.

This free community event is fun for the whole family. There will be food, games, inflatable bounce houses, face painting, a train, a petting zoo, music, prize giveaways and more.

The Pinwheel Project will be Saturday, April 13 and it will open with Light of Hope. This will be the sixth year for the Sheriff's Office to host the Pinwheel Project.

"For sixteen years, Child Advocates of Fort Bend and Exchange Club of Sugar Land have partnered to bring awareness to April Child Abuse Awareness Month with Light of Hope," said Child Advocates of Fort Bend CEO Ruthanne Mefford. "We work very closely with the Fort Bend County Sheriff's Office and have supported The Pinwheel Project since its inception by hosting a booth, running games and providing materials and child abuse awareness information and we were absolutely thrilled when they offered us the opportunity to open their annual Pinwheel Project again this year."

This community event is the brainchild of Lesley Vaught, a detective with the Special Crimes Unit at the Fort Bend County Sheriff's Office.

Detective Vaught, who has been with the Sheriff's Office for 13 years, developed the project with her unit five years ago.

When they determined that they needed to do more to raise awareness of child abuse in Fort Bend County, the Special Crimes Unit created the Pinwheel Project in observance of Child Abuse Awareness month.

"The Pinwheel Project is so important to me because it brings our community together and lets others know that we are here and we do care," said Vaught. "It gives people the opportunity to learn the signs of child abuse and how to report."

100 trees planted at Seabourne Creek Nature Park

by MARGO JOHNSON

As the year opened the Texas Master Naturalist Coastal Prairie Chapter planted trees in Seabourne Creek Nature Park in Rosenberg.

Everyone enjoyed being outdoors in nice weather and good company while improving this city park and doing something good for future generations, wildlife and the earth.

The many volunteers who made this happen included 16 Texas Master Naturalists, 11 scouts, their families and leaders from Rosenberg Troops 801 and 1630 and Fulshear Troop 941, 6 LDS young men and women and 6 other community volunteers. Thanks to rain earlier in the week the soil was wet and soft so they quickly planted around 100 large containers.

There are now many more native trees and shrubs in different areas of the park for all to enjoy including: 14 along the lake, consisting of a variety of oaks (white, water, red, shumard, overcup, willow), pecans, eastern red cedars, a green ash and an American sycamore; four in the edible garden (red mulberry, wax myrtle, dewberry, candlestick); one by the purple recycled water pipe at the marsh (wax myrtle); five in the bird sanctuary (American beautyberry, button bushes and a red mulberry); 70 in the forested areas (pecans, wax myrtles, possum haws, button bushes, mayhaws, flowering dogwoods, Chickasaw plums, black gum tupelos, green ashes, a river birch, a white oak and a laurel oak); and eight along Seabourne creek (bald cypress).

Apache Corporation donated 85 of the smaller 5-gallon trees while the Texas Master Naturalist Coastal Prairie Chapter bought 16 larger 15-gallon trees for along the lake area.

Chapter member Linda Rippert, and son JD donated one oak tree grown in a pot from an acorn, which is already around 8 feet tall. It was planted near the butterfly garden. The Arboretum is also a work in progress.

The Coastal Prairie Chapter Texas Master Naturalists are sponsored by Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service. For additional information call 281-633-7033 or email mmcdowell@ag.tamu.edu. People can also visit txmn.org/coastal.

Fort Bend County residents encouraged to complete Hurricane Harvey survey

Nearly two-thirds of people who participated in the Hurricane Harvey Registry said they sometimes or often think about Harvey even when they didn't mean to. Those who experienced home damage during Hurricane Harvey are far more likely to experience mental health difficulties, according to the Registry.

This information, including data on income loss, vehicle damage, displacement, debris and physical health, is included in the initial report of the Registry outlined by Houston Mayor Sylvester Turner on Feb. 21.

Since launching in April 2018, the Hurricane Harvey Registry has registered over 13,500 residents in the region, capturing the living environment and experiences of over 40,000 individuals and bringing light to a wide range of health and housing impacts experienced in the aftermath of Hurricane Harvey.

Hurricane Harvey exposed residents in the region to devastating weather conditions, unprecedented sources of pollution and contamination, as well as a number of hurdles to successful long-term recovery.

Modeled after the World Trade Center Health Registry for people exposed to fire, smoke and debris in New York City on Sept. 11, 2001, the Hurricane Harvey Registry is a first in the nation effort aimed at understanding the long term impact to residents in the aftermath of a major flooding event.

The Hurricane Harvey Registry, a joint venture by Rice University, Environmental Defense

Fund, Houston Health Department and health departments from Harris, Fort Bend, Victoria, Chambers, and Montgomery counties, is working actively to engage residents throughout the entire region.

The Registry's initial survey asks questions about residents' physical health, mental health and housing before, during and after the storm.

Those not affected by Harvey are also encouraged to participate because their responses provide much-needed insight into Harvey's impact on all communities. Fort Bend County are asked to continue participating in the survey for months to come so continued progress can be made.

Residents can participate in the Hurricane Harvey Registry at harveyregistry.rice.edu.

SINGIN' IN THE RAIN JR.' OPENS APRIL 26

by ALISHA McMILLEN

Inspiration Stage presents Singin' in the Rain JR. at the historic Sugar Land Auditorium with four shows April 26 - 28. With a cast of young actors, ages 10 through 18, Singin' in the Rain JR. offers two evening shows and two matinees.

Singin' in the Rain JR. has the starlet, the leading man and a love affair that could change lives and make or break careers! In silent movies, Don Lockwood and Lina Lamont are a hot item, but behind the scenes, things aren't always as they appear on the big screen! Meanwhile, Lina's squeaky voice might be the end of her career in "talking pictures" without the help of a talented young actress to do the talking and singing for her.

Inspiration Stage is excited to announce a special guest director/choreographer, Michael Tapley, for this musical. Tapley is excited to work with this youth cast on one of his all-time favorite shows. He's played the role of Singin' in the Rain's Cosmo Brown three times — at the Maine State Music Theatre, Galveston Outdoor Musicals, and the Walnut Street Theatre in Philadelphia.

"We are ecstatic to welcome Michael Tapley to our artistic team for this toe-tapping journey to old Hollywood," said Inspiration Stage's artistic director, Mandy Seymore-Sensat. "Singin' in the Rain holds a special place in my heart and childhood as I watched it dozens of times as an aspiring dancer. I know Michael loves this show too and will inspire a new generation to adore this fabulous piece of theatre."

Tapley began his professional career in 1973 at the age of 10 in Kismet starring MGM film actor Howard Keel at Theater Under The Stars (TUTS). Later he would work with other MGM greats like Eddie Bracken in HGO's Showboat in Chiro, Yvonne DeCarlo in Gypsy at The Windmill Dinner Theater, Deloris Grey in the first national tour of 42nd Street, Juliet Prowse in the National Tour of Mame, and Debbie Reynolds in the National Tour of The Unsinkable Molly Brown. Other national tours are Evita and The Who's Tommy playing the title role at DC's Kennedy Center and then on Broadway.

As a director/choreographer his work has been seen at Goodspeed Opera House, Seattle's 5th Ave., Theatre, The North Carolina Theatre, Kansas City Starlight, Lyric Theatre of Oklahoma, American Musical Theatre of San Jose, Galveston Outdoor Musicals and TUTS. Some of Tapley's favorite roles include Riff, Action, Arab and Baby John in West Side Story, Mike in A Chorus Line, Judge Turpin in Sweeney Todd, Jud Fry and Will Parker in Oklahoma, Tommy in Tommy and Alfred P Doolittle in My Fair Lady.

Tickets available for advance purchase at inspirationstage.com, or at the door before showtime. Shows run Fri. and Sat. night at 7:30, Sat. and Sun. afternoon at 3:30, April 26 - 28.

Miller noted many influential women have been featured in prior conferences, even Tina Knowles, mother of superstar singer Beyoncé.

"She talked about how she was bullied in school [and] she bought T-shirts for the girls," Miller said.

The girls who attended the conference, nicknamed "Ladybugs," stay on the mentors' radar as they transition into high grades.

"We will keep up with them and include them in activities and outings that are age appropriate," Miller said. "Once they enter high school they become Butterfly members."

Being a Butterfly

As much as it stresses academic success — the program even hosts report card parties — the Butterfly Project also focuses on providing its members with enriching social experiences.

Part of those experiences include serving their community. Over the years Butterfly members have become regular supporters and contributors to local nonprofits like Lunches of Love, CommonThreads, Light the Night and the Special Olympics. They've volunteered time to the city of Rosenberg and Sugar Land, as well as local churches like River Pointe Church and Friendship Baptist Church.

"Community service is our cornerstone of our organization," Miller said. "Since the beginning of the program the girls log a total of over 100 hundred community service hours each year."

Then there are the plethora of bonding activities, like getting their nails done together, going out to eat or even spending Spring Break with one another.

"We have a motto: 'We work hard. Then we play hard,'" Miller said, adding the project has sponsored several out-of-the-state Spring Break trips. "The girls are rewarded for their hard work with holiday parties, outings and other incentives."

Like visiting Atlanta, Georgia where the girls toured CNN and the World of Coca-Cola. The girls also visited New Orleans by train where they toured the city, Mardi Gras World and experienced the Hurricane Katrina Tour.

"We tell our kids to dream," Miller said. "But how can we tell them if some of them have never been outside of their neighborhood?"

The efforts of the Butterfly Project, Miller said, are put forth to prove to each girl they are worthy. They are important. That someone cares for them.

"Butterfly mentors monitor classroom behavior and grades, arrange for tutoring and we help with school projects. We show up for sports activities and events, award ceremonies, dance shows, school plays, and happy occasions as well as sad ones," Miller continued passionately. "And if girls miss a number of meetings, we go looking for them."

"Young people need to have adults in their lives that are genuinely concerned for them ... someone who lets them know that they matter."

"Ladybugs" at the January Butterfly Project conference that encouraged the girls to find and embrace their inner superhero.

Calvary Episcopal Preparatory opens new pre-kindergarten program

by MARQUITA GRIFFIN | mgriffin@fbherald.com

Calvary Episcopal Preparatory has announced the opening of a new prek3 program for the 2019-2020 school year and just like with every one of the school's programs, the private school "will ensure that the pk3 class is staffed with qualified and certified personnel, in a safe, loving and nurturing Christian environment," said Headmaster Malcolm Smith.

Calvary Episcopal Preparatory continues to top the lists for parents looking for core enrichment classes taught by dedicated, highly trained teachers and for good reason, said Machele Delange, a CEP board member who helped research and approve the curriculum for the new prek3 program.

"Immersing children in an educational program at an early age has proven to be important," she said.

"Early childhood education is an important aspect of a child's social and academic development. So many PK3 programs are glorified babysitting and do not have a structure that prepares a child for school," Headmaster Smith added. "We can assure that the curriculum and instruction is aligned with all of the prerequisites necessary to be successful in future years."

And this is why Calvary is offering parents the prek3 program. Not only does its curriculum bridge prek3 to prek4 and then to kindergarten, it provides a smooth transition academically and spiritually.

As a parent of three children who attend Calvary and a dedicated Episcopalian, Delange remains heavily involved in the school — from helping in the classroom and leading chapel services to hosting events — so she knows first-hand the nurturing and encouraging environment of Calvary.

"Our enrichment programs at Calvary are amazing and our children have a true love for one another," she said. "The bond across all our grade levels is something truly special."

The curriculum for the prek3 program was designed to be developmentally appropriate to provide social interaction and academic challenge and engagement. Plus, the program's student-to-teacher ratio is low, with eight students to one teacher, and teacher's aids will be in the classrooms.

"The most important objective [of the program] is placing children in a school setting where they are challenged with an accelerated curriculum, build a daily routine and surrounded by a spiritual and loving environment," Delange added.

Since 1956 Calvary Episcopal Preparatory has been known as a school that provides a strong academic program in a Christian learning environment and its newest program will be an "addition to this reputation," said Headmaster Smith.

"Our hopes for the prek3 program are the same as that with all of our children at all grade levels: to dedicate ourselves to higher learning, provide superior education and instill pillars of faith.

"All encompassed with a love for learning and love for growing."

6 reasons your back hurts

Your back is a feat of biological engineering. More than 33 vertebrae form the column that runs from your skull to your tailbone and between each is a cushiony disk, all held together by a web of ligaments and muscles. With all those moving parts, plenty can go wrong.

“Back pain is incredibly common, especially as we age,” said Jeffrey B. Wood, M.D., board-certified orthopedic spine surgeon with the Houston Methodist Neuroscience & Spine Center at Sugar Land. “Fortunately, we can treat most cases of back pain without surgery.”

Below are some of the most common causes of back pain:

- Heavy lifting or improper sports or exercise techniques. Repeated lifting or simply an awkward movement could cause a muscle or ligament strain.
- Bad posture. Sit at a desk all day? If you're hunched over papers or using a chair with little support, your back bears the brunt of it.
- Herniated disk. The vertebrae in your spine are cushioned by disks between each bone. When the soft material inside bulges or ruptures, it can cause pain by pressing on a nerve.
- Scoliosis. Adults experience pain from scoliosis (a sideways curve in the spine) when an existing curve worsens with age or a new curve develops.
- Arthritis. In its most common form, osteoarthritis, the cartilage breaks down around joints, making movement painful.
- Osteoporosis. Thinning of the bones, predisposes a person to fractures. Compression fractures may cause pain when bones become brittle and porous.

FINDING RELIEF

Minor back problems — primarily those associated with strains or spasms — can be successfully treated at home with a combination of hot and cold compresses, rest and anti-inflammatory medications.

“Although you may be tempted to spend a few days recuperating in bed, movement is actually better for your pain,” Wood said. “Try to keep up with your regular activities.”

If your pain is debilitating, a spine specialist can perform an exam to help determine the source of your discomfort and prescribe a treatment plan that may include medications, physical therapy or injections to relieve pain. In severe cases, surgery may be needed.

“At our Neuroscience & Spine Center, our specialists work together to get you back to a productive life,” Wood said. We offer expedited appointments, including second opinions, with our renowned specialists.

To schedule an appointment with Jeffrey B. Wood, M.D., or another specialist at the Houston Methodist Neuroscience & Spine Center at Sugar Land, go to houstonmethodist.org/neuro-sl and fill out the online form or call 281.274.7979.

BACK AND NECK PAIN SEMINAR

Join Jeffrey B. Wood, M.D., and Christian Pecorra, M.D., as they discuss causes, latest treatment options and prevention on Wednesday, April 17 at 6 p.m. in the Brazos Pavilion Conference Center. Registration is required. To register or find out more information, go to events.houstonmethodist.org/backpain-sl or call 281.274.7500.

Houston Methodist Sugar Land offers ‘Beat the Pack’ program to help people quit smoking

Houston Methodist Sugar Land Hospital continues to offer the community a proven program to help people quit smoking.

The complimentary program, called Beat the Pack®, was developed by Pfizer Inc. and is sponsored by Houston Methodist Cancer Center and Respiratory Therapy Department at Sugar Land.

Participants will meet once a week for four weeks with a trained facilitator from Houston Methodist Sugar Land who will provide tools, tips and support to help smokers create and follow through with a personalized “quit plan.”

“Studies show that close to 70 percent of smokers in the U.S. want to quit,” said Amy Sebastian-Deutsch, director of oncology and infusion therapy services. “But it typically takes a smoker between six and 11 attempts at quitting to finally succeed. Beat the Pack is a proven program that can greatly increase those odds and make it easier to give up cigarettes for good.”

Even long-term smokers can benefit from quitting. “The health benefits of quitting begin almost immediately and continue indefinitely,” said Sindhu Nair, M.D., board-certified hematologist oncologist with Houston Methodist Oncology Partners at Sugar Land. “Within months, former smokers will have improved circulation and reduced blood pressure, enhanced oxygen flow, the return of taste and smell and less coughing and colds. After a year, their risk of heart disease will be reduced by half. And after 10 years of living without cigarettes, the risk of heart attack or cancer is similar to that of someone who never smoked.”

In 2015, a thorough compilation of more than 50 smoking cessation studies that included more than 25,000 participants found that combining behavior support in a group setting with medication provides the best results.

“It isn’t easy to quit, and certainly it is even more difficult to do so by yourself,” said Sebastian-Deutsch. “Beat the Pack provides all the tools and support needed, and it does so in an informative, friendly atmosphere that offers encouragement and camaraderie.”

The next four-week series is scheduled to start on April 2, from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. in Houston Methodist Sugar Land’s Main Pavilion Conference Rooms A & D. “WHAT IS GRIEF, REALLY?”

—Grief support group series—

Houston Methodist Sugar Land Hospital is offering a four-part series for Fort Bend and surrounding area residents who are coping with the loss of a loved one.

The series titled “What is Grief, Really? The Nuts and Bolts of Grieving” is designed to help participants learn about grief and understand the impact that grief has on survivors. Facilitated by the Department of Spiritual Care and Values Integration, these sessions are open to people of all faiths and provide a safe, welcoming environment where individuals can find support and share experiences.

The sessions are scheduled on four consecutive Tuesdays in April, beginning April 9, from 5:30 to 7 p.m. in the hospital’s Main Pavilion Conference Rooms A and D. Dinner will be provided.

“Learning about grief – and hearing from others’ experiences – can be a valuable part of healing for many people,” said Tim Madison, director of spiritual care and values integration at Houston Methodist Sugar Land. “Too often people try to get past the loss of a loved one without fully exploring their feelings or understanding how grief can affect them both emotionally and even physically. These sessions give participants the opportunity to interact with others who have been through similar experiences and who share many of the same emotions.”

The hospital’s Grief Support Group series meets each fall and spring, offering participants a safe space to tell their stories, interact with each other or just sit and listen.

“Our goal is to provide an avenue for comfort and healing, recognizing that each person is different and has different needs,” said Madison. “The Grief Support Group series can be beneficial to anyone who has lost a loved one – whether it was a recent loss or even one many years ago.”

To reserve a place in the spring series, or to learn more about the Grief Support Group series, contact the hospital’s Spiritual Care and Values Integration Department at 281.274.7164.
