The demolition of the former American Legion building on Lochland Road in Geneva is underway. The property was sold to River’s Edge Capital, which plans to develop Lake’s Edge Seneca, a project with a $25.2 million price tag. It includes a luxury hotel with a rooftop bar and restaurant, a wedding/event venue, a restaurant with a brewery, and 51 luxury townhomes.

By SARAH THOMPSON

Cornell AgriTech turns 140

Geneva campus continues its vital role in supporting the agricultural industry

By SARAH THOMPSON

ECTOR — This year, Cornell AgriTech in Geneva turns 140 years old, on August 18. Since 1882, it has been serving New York farmers, supporting the agricultural industry and food producers. The station has a legacy of using the power of scientific inquiry to inform the direction of farm and food production decisions across New York state. As agriculture and food industries move further into the 21st century, there are plenty of high-impact opportunities and uncertainty ahead. But these industries, and Cornell AgriTech, are well positioned to meet the challenges.

A view of Barton Laboratory and greenhouses on the Cornell AgriTech campus in Geneva at dusk. The campus is celebrating 140 years.

---

Interview with a very special person...

---

The demolition is underway

---

Ward 6 Councilor passes away

---

UNION CHURCH AND GATES HALL

---

© 2022 Finger Lakes Times Inc.